hopefully we will have it in usable condition. i'm pretty proud of myself, i spent ab out six or eight hours and managed to remove the deck, steps, arctic entry room[even managed to get the roof off by myself] dented your filing cabinet a little when i took it out of the room, sorry but it was heavier than i expected. i got my excercise, saved a ton of money and am feeling pretty good about having done something rocky thought would require several people and power tools. the expense to you was.....remember that white chocolate truffle you used to have in the refrigerator and those shortbread cookies and that chocolate rum cake and those diet cokes. well, you still have some of the cookies and some of the cake. tony hana will let me know about the date for the lift this week, your living room is full of the things that were in the arctic entry room so its quite a mess. we're on schedule and i'll hound these guys until it gets done. good luck fishing. bob
