THE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY CHARGES:

INTRODUCTION TO ALL COUNTS

At all times relevant to this Information, unless otherwise indicated:

I. Background

A. FIFA

1. The Fédération Internationale de Football Association ("FIFA") was the international body governing organized soccer, commonly known outside the United States as football. FIFA was an entity registered under Swiss law and headquartered in Zurich, Switzerland. FIFA comprised as many as 209 member associations, each representing organized soccer in a particular nation or territory, including the United States and four of its overseas territories. The United States first became affiliated with FIFA in 1914; Puerto Rico first became affiliated with FIFA in 1960, with Guam, American Samoa, and the United States Virgin Islands following in the 1990s. At various times, FIFA maintained offices both in Zurich and elsewhere in the world, including in the United States, where FIFA maintained a development office since at least 2011.

2. Each of FIFA's member associations also was a member of one of six continental confederations recognized by FIFA: the Confederation of North, Central American, and Caribbean Association Football ("CONCACAF"), the Confederación Sudamericana de Fútbol ("CONMEBOL"), the Union des Associations Européennes de Football ("UEFA"), the Confédération Africaine de Football ("CAF"), the Asian Football Confederation ("AFC"), and the Oceania Football Confederation ("OFC"). Since at least 1996, under FIFA's statutes, no national soccer association could become a member of FIFA without first joining one of the six continental confederations. Since at least 2004, member associations were required to pay to FIFA annual dues, known as subscriptions.

3. FIFA was governed by: a congress composed of its member associations, which acted as the association's highest legislative body; an executive committee, which acted as the executive body; and a general secretariat, which acted as the administrative body. FIFA also had a president, who represented the association worldwide and was responsible for the implementation of decisions. FIFA also operated several standing committees whose members included soccer officials from various national member associations.

4. Since at least 1996, under FIFA's statutes, the six continental confederations had certain rights and obligations, including, among other things, that they comply with and enforce FIFA's statutes, regulations, and decisions and work closely with FIFA to further FIFA's objectives and organize international soccer competitions.

5. FIFA's purpose was, among other things, to develop and promote the game of soccer globally by organizing international competitions and creating and enforcing rules that govern the confederations and member associations. FIFA helped finance the confederations and their member associations, including by providing funds through the Financial Assistance Program and the Goal Program.

6. FIFA first instituted a written code of ethics in October 2004, which code was revised in 2006, again in 2009, and most recently in 2012 (generally, the "code of ethics"). The code of ethics governed the conduct of soccer "officials," which expressly included, among others, various individuals with responsibilities within FIFA, the confederations, member associations, leagues, and clubs. Among other things, the code of ethics provided that soccer officials were prohibited from accepting bribes or cash gifts and from otherwise abusing their positions for personal gain. The code of ethics further provided, from its inception, that soccer officials owed certain duties to FIFA and its confederations and member associations, including a duty of absolute loyalty. By 2009, the code of ethics explicitly recognized that FIFA officials stand in a fiduciary relationship to FIFA and its constituent confederations, member associations, leagues, and clubs.

7. Among other tournaments, FIFA organized the World Cup, the sport's premier event, a quadrennial international tournament involving the senior national men's teams of 32 nations.

B. CONCACAF

8. CONCACAF was a continental soccer confederation incorporated, since 1994, as a non-profit corporation in Nassau, Bahamas. CONCACAF comprised as many as 41 member associations, representing organized soccer in North America, Central America, the Caribbean, and three South American countries. The United States and two of its overseas territories, Puerto Rico and the United States Virgin Islands, were members of CONCACAF. From approximately 1990 to 2012, CONCACAF's principal administrative office was located in New York, New York, where the former general secretary was based (until the end of 2011) and where CONCACAF regularly conducted business.

9. Like FIFA, CONCACAF was governed by its own congress, general secretariat, executive committee and standing committees.

10. Beginning in 2012, CONCACAF's principal administrative office was located in Miami, Florida, where the new general secretary was based. CONCACAF also conducted business at various times throughout the United States, including in the Eastern District of New York, as well as in foreign countries within and outside the confederation. Among other tournaments, CONCACAF organized the Gold Cup, featuring the men's national teams from CONCACAF and, from time to time, other confederations, as well as a tournament featuring the top men's professional league - or club - teams. In June 2014, CONCACAF adopted a code of ethics that, among other things, prohibited bribery and corruption.

11. CONCACAF also organized World Cup qualifier matches, using a variety of formats, and, from time to time, worked together to organize inter-confederation competitions, often with the support and approval of FIFA.

C. The Regional Federations and National Associations

12. In addition to being members of FIFA and their respective continental confederations, some of the national associations were also members of smaller, regional federations.

13. For example, CONCACAF's member associations were organized into three smaller regional federations: the Caribbean Football Union ("CFU"), the Central American Football Union ("UNCAF"), and the North American Football Union ("NAFU"). The United States Soccer Federation was thus a member association of CONCACAF as well as NAFU, while Puerto Rico and the United States Virgin Islands were both members of CONCACAF and CFU.

14. The national associations, also often referred to as "federations," worked together to organize exhibition soccer matches between national teams, known as "friendlies," which also took place on the club level.

D. The Sports Marketing Companies

15. FIFA, the continental confederations, the regional federations and the national member associations often entered into contracts with sports marketing companies to commercialize the media and marketing rights to various soccer events, including the World Cup and other tournaments, World Cup and Olympic qualifiers, friendlies, and other events, as well as other rights associated with the sport. These sports marketing companies, including multinational corporations with headquarters, offices, or affiliates located in the United States, often acquired an array of media and marketing rights, including television and radio broadcasting rights, advertising rights, sponsorship rights, licensing rights, hospitality rights, and ticketing rights. These sports marketing companies often sold these rights to, among others, television and radio broadcast networks, sponsors, and sub-licensees, including those located in the United States.

16. The revenue generated by the commercialization of the media and marketing rights associated with soccer constituted an essential source of revenue for FIFA and its constituent organizations, as well as for the sports marketing companies. The United States was an increasingly important and lucrative market for the commercialization of these rights.

17. The Traffic Group was a multinational sports marketing company based in São Paulo, Brazil. The Traffic Group was comprised of, among other entities, Traffic Assessoria e Comunicações S/C Ltda. ("Traffic Brazil"), Traffic Sports International, Inc. ("Traffic International"), Traffic Sports USA, Inc., Traffic Sports Europe B.V., and Continental Sports International, Inc. (referred to collectively herein as "Traffic" or the "Traffic Group"). Beginning in or about 1990, Traffic expanded its operations into the United States, partnering with and later acquiring a Florida company called Inter/Forever Sports, Inc., which was renamed Traffic Sports USA, Inc. (collectively referred to below as "Traffic USA") in or about 2003.

18. Sports Marketing Company A was a sports marketing company based in Miami, Florida. Sports Marketing Company A was a subsidiary of Media Company A, which engaged in a variety of media activities primarily in the United States and Latin America, including television production and the commercialization of sports marketing rights. Media Company A, which was also based in Miami, Florida, was affiliated with Media Company B, a multinational media conglomerate based in Europe. The identities of Sports Marketing Company A, Media Company A, and Media Company B are known to the United States Attorney.

19. Sports Marketing Company B was a sports media and marketing business with its principal offices in Argentina. Sports Marketing Company B had a number of subsidiaries and affiliates, all of which are referred to collectively below as "Sports Marketing Company B." The identity of Sports Marketing Company B is known to the United States Attorney.

IV. The Fraudulent Schemes

31. Beginning in or about 2004, the defendant FABIO TORDIN, together with others, participated in a series of bribery schemes in order to obtain media and marketing rights to soccer matches from certain CONCACAF member associations. The defendant and his co-conspirators planned the schemes in the United States, among other locations, and used the wires of the United States to carry out the schemes, including by paying bribes from accounts at financial institutions in the United States. As part of these schemes, TORDIN and his co-conspirators over time agreed to pay millions of dollars of bribes to high-ranking officials of several of CONCACAF's member associations.

A. World Cup Qualifiers Scheme - Traffic USA

32. Since at least in or about 1998, the media rights to matches played to qualify for the World Cup have been owned by the team designated as the "home team" for each qualifier match. UNCAF's member associations sought to generate revenue by, among other things, selling the media rights they owned to their home World Cup qualifier matches. Each of the UNCAF member nations negotiated separately with prospective purchasers of the rights, which included Traffic USA. UNCAF member associations included UNCAF Federation A, UNCAF Federation B, UNCAF Federation C, and UNCAF Federation D, the identities of which are known to the United States Attorney.

33. During the period that the defendant FABIO TORDIN worked at Traffic USA in Miami, his responsibilities included overseeing the purchase by Traffic USA of rights owned by certain CONCACAF member associations, including those of UNCAF, to matches played by these associations in order to qualify for the 2010 World Cup. In or about and between 2004 and 2006, in order to obtain and renew these rights for Traffic USA, TORDIN, together with others, agreed to pay, and did pay, bribes to high-ranking officials of the member associations that owned and controlled those rights.

34. Payments in furtherance of this scheme were made by wire transfer from and through bank accounts in the United States to bank accounts outside the United States. Moreover, the conspirators used fictitious contracts and invoices, among other methods and means, in order to conceal the true nature and purpose of bribe payments made in furtherance of the scheme.

B. World Cup Qualifiers Scheme - Sports Marketing Company A

35. In or about 2006, the defendant FABIO TORDIN left Traffic USA. In or about 2009, TORDIN and Co-Conspirator #1, who was also based in Miami, were engaged as paid consultants to Sports Marketing Company A, and in that capacity they agreed to help Sports Marketing Company A obtain media and marketing rights from certain CONCACAF member associations.

36. The defendant FABIO TORDIN, together with Co-Conspirator #1, and on behalf of Sports Marketing Company A, thereafter negotiated contracts with UNCAF Federation A and UNCAF Federation B to purchase media and marketing rights to qualifier matches played in connection with the 2014 World Cup. In order to obtain those rights, in or about and between 2009 and 2011, TORDIN, Co-Conspirator #1, and Co-Conspirator #3 agreed to pay, and did pay, bribes to high-ranking officials of UNCAF Federation A and UNCAF Federation B.

37. In or about 2011, Co-Conspirator #3 hired the defendant FABIO TORDIN to work as an executive at Sports Marketing Company A in Miami. Among other things, TORDIN was tasked with negotiating and obtaining for Sports Marketing Company A contracts for media and marketing rights held by CONCACAF member associations.

38. In or about and between 2011 and 2015, the defendant FABIO TORDIN, together with others, including Co-Conspirator #3, caused Sports Marketing Company A to enter into contracts with UNCAF Federation A and UNCAF Federation B, and together with Co-Conspirator #2 and Co-Conspirator #3, UNCAF Federation C, to obtain media and marketing rights to these federations' 2018 and/or 2022 World Cup qualifier matches. In order to obtain those contracts, TORDIN, together with others, agreed to pay, and did pay, bribes to high-ranking officials of the three federations.

39. In or about the spring of 2012, Sports Marketing Company A and Traffic USA, which until that time had been competitors, agreed to pool their resources and share revenue earned from the purchase of rights to World Cup qualifier matches played by CONCACAF member associations.

40. Traffic USA owned the rights to qualifier matches hosted by UNCAF Federation D in connection with the 2014 and 2018 World Cups. In or about 2014, the defendant FABIO TORDIN learned that, rather than renewing its contract with Traffic USA, UNCAF Federation D was contemplating selling the rights to its qualifier matches played in connection with the 2022 World Cup to another company.

41. The defendant FABIO TORDIN, Co-Conspirator #2, and Co-Conspirator #3 thereafter agreed to pay, and did pay, a bribe to a high-ranking official of UNCAF Federation D in order to cause that federation to renew its contract with Traffic USA, which, as noted, had a revenue-sharing agreement with Sports Marketing Company A.

42. Payments in furtherance of this scheme were made by wire transfer from and through bank accounts in the United States to bank accounts outside the United States. Moreover, the conspirators used fictitious contracts and invoices, among other methods and means, in order to conceal the true nature and purpose of bribe payments made in furtherance of the scheme.

C. Friendly Matches Rights Scheme

43. In or about and between 2009 and 2015, the defendant FABIO TORDIN and Co-Conspirator #2 partnered to organize and promote friendly matches involving UNCAF Federation A and UNCAF Federation B, as well as matches involving other FIFA member associations. Many of these friendly matches were played at venues in the United States. In order to obtain the agreement of the federations to participate in these friendly matches, TORDIN and Co-Conspirator #2 agreed to pay, and did pay, bribes to high-ranking officials of UNCAF Federation A and UNCAF Federation B.

44. Payments in furtherance of this scheme were made by wire transfer from and through bank accounts in the United States to bank accounts outside the United States. Moreover, the conspirators used fictitious contracts and invoices, among other methods and means, in order to conceal the true nature and purpose of bribe payments made in furtherance of the scheme.

D. CONCACAF Media and Marketing Rights Scheme

45. In or about and between November 2011 and January 2012, the defendant FABIO TORDIN and Co-Conspirator #2, together with others, agreed to help facilitate the payment of bribes by Co-Conspirator #4 and Co-Conspirator #5 to Co-Conspirator #6, Co-Conspirator #7, and Co-Conspirator #8, soccer officials with significant authority within CONCACAF, in order to cause

CONCACAF to sell to Sports Marketing Company B the rights to certain soccer tournaments, including the Gold Cup. At the time, Co-Conspirator #7 was one of CONCACAF's three representatives on the FIFA executive committee, and Co-Conspirator #6 and Co-Conspirator #8 were both members of the CONCACAF executive committee.

46. In or about November 2011, upon invitation by Co-Conspirators #4 and #5, the defendant FABIO TORDIN and Co-Conspirator #2 flew from Miami to Buenos Aires, Argentina. During the days that followed, in Argentina and in Uruguay, TORDIN and Co-Conspirator #2 met with Co-Conspirator #4 and Co-Conspirator #5, who controlled Sports Marketing Company B, and Co-Conspirator #6, Co-Conspirator #7 and Co-Conspirator #8. In the course of and as a result of these meetings, Co-Conspirator #6, Co-Conspirator #7, and Co-Conspirator #8 agreed to seek to cause CONCACAF to sell the media and marketing rights to certain soccer tournaments to Sports Marketing Company B. To obtain this agreement, Co-Conspirator #4 and Co-Conspirator #5 agreed to pay, and did pay, bribes to the three soccer officials.

47. In or about 2012, Co-Conspirator #5 traveled to Florida in furtherance of Sports Marketing Company B's efforts to obtain these rights.

48. Payments in furtherance of this scheme were made by wire transfer from and through bank accounts in the United States to bank accounts outside the United States. Moreover, the conspirators used fictitious contracts and invoices, among other methods and means, in order to conceal the true nature and purpose of bribe payments made in furtherance of the scheme.
