MEDIA ADVISORY

U.S. Attorney Melinda Haag, Mayor Ed Lee, The Bully Project and San Francisco Officials To Host Screening of Critically Acclaimed Documentary “Bully” and Convene Bay Area Summit to Prevent Bullying on September 13 and 14

WHAT: A Bay Area response to the epidemic of bullying convened by U.S. Attorney Melinda Haag, Mayor Lee, and The Bully Project, in partnership with local, state, and national leaders, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Torlakson and San Francisco Unified School District Superintendent Richard Carranza.

This two-day event starts with a community-wide screening of the groundbreaking documentary “Bully” for more than 3,000 San Francisco public school students. The screening will be followed by a Q and A session moderated by Cheryl Jennings of ABC7 News with director and producer Lee Hirsch, U.S. Attorney Melinda Haag, San Francisco Police Chief Greg Suhr and Superintendent Richard Carranza.

The following day, the San Francisco Bay Area Stop Bullying Summit will bring together national, state and local leaders from law enforcement, education, technology and community-based organizations to develop and share action plans to stop bullying. The summit features panels on federal, state and local laws; best practices, policies and programs; the impact of bullying on families; and responses to cyber-bullying from the technology sector. More than a hundred Bay Area region law enforcement, education and community leaders are expected to attend.

U.S. Attorney Melinda Haag, Mayor Ed Lee, The Bully Project and San Francisco Officials Join Forces to Prevent Bullying Among California's Children and Youth

THE ISSUE

- Bullying and harassment in California schools is reaching epidemic levels and for many young people the harassment continues online. One in three California public school students report being bullied or harassed at school at least once in the past year. Nationwide, 16% of students report having been cyber bullied.
- Bullying and harassment in school is also pervasive in the Bay Area. Nearly all Bay Area counties had a higher percentage of 7th graders reporting at least one incidence of bullying or harassment in the past year than the state as a whole (42%). San Mateo County had the highest percentage (46%), followed by San Francisco, Contra Costa, and Marin counties (all at 44%), Alameda County (43%), and Santa Clara County (39%).
- There are many negative consequences for students, including poor academic performance, depression, substance abuse and suicide. Students who are fearful have difficulty learning and those that feel unsafe often choose to stay home, rather than attend school. Absenteeism, truancy and school failure are strong predictors of criminal behavior.

WHY THE SCREENING AND SUMMIT?

- Parents, educators, community leaders and law enforcement all have a role and responsibility to prevent bullying. The overarching goal is to create schools and communities where young people are healthy, safe and feel welcome, allowing them to learn and thrive.
- U.S. Attorney Melinda Haag, Mayor Ed Lee, The Bully Project, and San Francisco Officials will host this two-day gathering to increase awareness and inspire action in the Bay Area and throughout the state.
- The summit will begin on September 13 with a special screening of the critically acclaimed documentary "Bully" by Director Lee Hirsch, which has sparked a national conversation about the devastating impact of bullying on children and youth. The City has made it possible for over 800 San Francisco public school students to watch the film at the Herbst Theater – these are among more than 3,000 students viewing the film across the city throughout the day. At the close of the film, there will be a moderated discussion led by Cheryl Jennings from ABC/Channel 7 with the students, director and producer Lee Hirsch, U.S. Attorney Melinda Haag, San Francisco Unified School District Superintendent Richard Carranza, and San Francisco Police Chief Greg Suhr.
- On September 14, federal, state and local policymakers will join with educators, law enforcement and leaders from different sectors in the community - from local schools to Silicon Valley to the San Francisco Giants - to share strategies on how to end the epidemic of bullying, both online and offline. Among those in attendance for this full day conference will be elected District Attorneys representing Alameda, Santa Clara, San Francisco, San Mateo, Marin and Napa counties.

Join Us:

September 13, 2012: Student Screening of “Bully” – 10:15 AM at the Herbst Theater

September 14, 2012: San Francisco Bay Area Stop Bullying Summit – 8:30 AM at Futures Without Violence

- The summit will highlight the new White House efforts, including the launch of www.stopbullying.gov, to promote bullying prevention and the historic partnership of federal agencies including Justice, Education, and Health and Human Services in addressing the issue from a variety of angles, from a public health epidemic to juvenile justice and delinquency prevention.
- Panelists at the convening will update participants on landmark legislative efforts to prevent the bullying and harassment of students, including the bipartisan Congressional Anti-Bullying Caucus, the federal Safe Schools Improvement Act, and Seth’s Law, which went into effect in California earlier this year. Attendees will also learn about promising strategies, including prevention approaches such as restorative justice that offer alternatives to zero tolerance and punitive responses.
- The event also marks the Bay Area launch of The Bully Project’s 1 Million Kids initiative. 1 Million Kids is The Bully Project's collaborative national education initiative that fosters sustainable bullying prevention. The goal is to help change behavior in schools by providing free access to the movie in theaters within an educational framework. To date, over 127,000 students and 7,500 teachers in 122 cities nationwide have been inspired by 1 Million Kids to join the frontlines against bullying. This fall alone, the Bully Project expects 1 Million Kids to reach another 150,000 students.

WHAT IT IS

On kidsdata.org, measures of harassment and bullying come from the California Healthy Kids Survey (CHKS) through a partnership with WestEd, which developed and administers the CHKS, and the California Department of Education. Indicators include: student reports of having been bullied on school property in the past year for any reason or for any bias-related reason (i.e., on the basis of gender, race/ethnicity or national origin, religion, sexual orientation, or a disability). In addition, kidsdata.org offers data on student reports of being bullied or harassed based on their disability, gender, race or national origin, religion, sexual orientation, or any other non-specified reason, each as separate indicators. These data are available by grade level (7th, 9th, 11th, and non-traditional students), gender, race/ethnicity, and level of connectedness to school. School connectedness is a summary measure that includes the following elements: being treated fairly, feeling close to people, feeling happy, feeling part of school, and feeling safe at school.

WHY THIS TOPIC IS IMPORTANT

Bullying and harassment can have both short and long term harmful effects on children and youth (1, 2). In addition to the risk of physical injury, research shows that victims of bullying are at higher risk of depression, suicidal ideation, and suicide attempts than those not involved in or exposed to bullying (1). They also are more likely to experience physical health problems and difficulties with academic performance and school engagement (3). Any young person can be bullied, but certain groups may be particularly susceptible. For instance, according to a 2009 national survey of middle and high school students, 9 out of 10 lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgender youth reported experiencing some form of harassment at school the year before (4).

It is important to note that any involvement in bullying, either as a victim, witness, and/or as a bully, is related to negative outcomes (1, 2). In fact, youth who bully others also have increased rates of depression, suicidal ideation, and suicide attempts than those not involved in bullying behavior (1, 2). Bullies also are more likely to abuse alcohol or other drugs, engage in other risky behavior (e.g., early sexual activity), abuse others in intimate relationships, and engage in criminal activity as adults than non-bullies (3). Youth who witness frequent bullying, perhaps because of their social environment, also are at increased risk for alcohol and drug use, depression, or anxiety (3). Further, the fear of being bullied or harassed can cause extreme anxiety and disrupt a child's ability to excel in school and life (3).

HOW CHILDREN ARE FARING

According to 2008-10 data, 42% of 7th graders, 35% of 9th graders, and 28% of 11th graders in California report being bullied or harassed at school at least once in the past year for any reason. The percentages of 7th grade girls and boys who reported being bullied at least once because of their race, sexual orientation, gender, religion, or disability has increased slightly since 2004-06, though the patterns are not as clear for 9th and 11th graders.

When youth are bullied or harassed at school, the most common specific reason cited is because of their race or national origin, with 19% of 7th graders, 17% of 9th graders, and 14% of 11th graders in 2008-10 reporting at least one bullying incident in the past year for this reason. Among African American/Black students, 25% said they had been bullied due to their race at least once in the past year, followed by 24% of Asian American and 23% of Pacific Islander students. Other reasons cited include sexual orientation (8-12% of students in grades 7, 9, and 11 citing one or more incidents at school in the past 12 months), gender (7-11%), religion (9-10%), disability (4-6%), and "any other reason" (15-27%).

Seventh-graders and non-traditional students (those enrolled in Community Day Schools or continuation programs) typically report more bullying or harassment than students in grades 9 and 11. Students who report feeling less connected to their schools more often report being bullied or harassed.
