April 21, 2000	Reply Briefs to Case Dispositive Motions

2. Witness lists shall include individuals whom the parties expect to call live at trial of this case, as required by FRCP 26(a)(3)(A). The foregoing shall not limit the parties' right to designate deposition testimony pursuant to FRCP 26(a)(3)(B).

3. On or before March 22, 1999, the parties will organize the individuals identified in their respective Rule 26(a)(1)(A) disclosures into the following categories based on the likelihood that each such individual's testimony will be presented at trial, whether live or by deposition, and serve the information on opposing party: (1) will call; (2) very likely to call; (3) likely to call; (4) unlikely to call and (5) will not call.

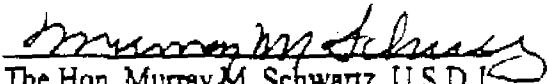

4. No motions shall be filed with the Court unless a statement is filed with the Court detailing efforts made to achieve agreement on the matters set forth in the motion.

5. Each party shall deliver to the other party "Bates-stamped" copies of all documents produced to one party by any non-party in response to a Rule 45 subpoena, unless the producing non-party produces to all parties simultaneously. Each party bears the costs of its set of copies; however, photocopying costs charged to another party shall not exceed 15 cents per page. Each party shall deliver: "Bates-stamped" copies totaling fewer than 1,000 pages within 5 business days after receiving the production, or within 10 business days for productions in excess of 1,000 pages. The photocopying cost figure will also apply to documents produced by the parties to one another with the requesting party bearing that cost.

6. The parties' disclosure of individuals pursuant to Rule 26(a)(1)(A) shall not constitute a waiver of work product.

7. All case dispositive motions accompanied by an opening brief and affidavit and a brief and affidavit schedule shall be served and filed no later than the deadline established by the Court. Failure to file said motions by the deadline shall be considered a waiver of all such motions. An order calling for a pretrial conference will issue in the absence of the timely filing of any such motion.
