REPORT OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL
TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES ON THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE FOREIGN AGENTS REGISTRATION ACT OF 1938, AS AMENDED
FOR THE CALENDAR YEAR 1969

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA IN CONGRESS ASSEMBLED:

I have the honor to report on the administration of the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938, as amended, pursuant to Section 11 of the Act, which requires the Attorney General from time to time to report to the Congress concerning the administration of the Act, as well as the nature, source and content of political propaganda disseminated or distributed by agents of foreign principals registered under the Act.

It has been the policy of the Department since 1950 to prepare a report each year. This report covers the administration and enforcement of the Foreign Agents Registration Act for the calendar year 1969.

STATISTICAL SUMMARY

In 1969, sixty-one new registration statements were filed and fifty-seven registrations were terminated, resulting in a total of 450 active registrations on file as of December 31, 1969. There were 383 short-form registration statements filed by individuals as officers, directors, employees or other persons rendering assistance to a registrant for or in the interest of the registrant's foreign principal.

During this same year, 120 amendments were filed to correct deficiencies in registration statements on file. The staff of the Registration Section reviewed 795 supplemental statements and processed 7,775 pieces of both incoming and outgoing correspondence which involved other government agencies, registrants and the general public.

ADMINISTRATION AND ENFORCEMENT

The Department employs normal administrative procedures to effect compliance with the Act, and all investigations are conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. A careful review of all statements and exhibits filed produced many requests by the Department for additional information or other corrective action from registrants, and as indicated above, resulted in the submission of 112 amendments to statements on file. As an additional result of these procedures, no prosecutive action for willful violations of the Act was required to be initiated during the year.

The Department has also continued the practice of disseminating copies of registration statements and supplements thereto to interested departments and agencies of the Federal Government as well as to certain Congressional committees.

NATURE, SOURCE AND CONTENT OF POLITICAL PROPAGANDA

The following is an analysis of the principal trends noted during 1969 in the propaganda material disseminated within the United States in the English language on behalf of foreign principals and geographical areas listed below. Principal publications are set forth together with the approximate circulation figures per issue.

During the year 1969, 5,362 dissemination reports were filed in connection with the distribution of 14,292 different pieces of propaganda which were submitted with the reports.

ARAB COUNTRIES

REGISTRANT	PUBLICATION	AVERAGE CIRCULATION
Arab Information Center	Arab News and Views (monthly)	23,000
	The Arab World (bi-monthly)	23,000
	Press releases and pamphlets	3,000 - 5,000
	Six Hundred Days Booklet	5,000
Palestine Arab Delegation	The Liberation of Palestine	10,000
	Diary of Crimes Pamphlet	10,000
	Jews Eradicating Christianity Pamphlet	5,000
Palestine Liberation Organization	Press releases (speeches, letters, telegrams)	350 each

The Arab World regularly reprinted articles and speeches related to the Arab countries although not necessarily written for or by the Arab Information Center. Examples of these reprints in the 1969 issues included addresses before the Middle East Studies Association and the American Bar Association, articles appearing in the Middle East Forum, and lectures at Lincoln and Columbia universities. As a further change from the standard magazine articles, poetry was used extensively by The Arab World; primarily reflecting on the tragedies resulting from the 1967 war, the poetry was usually presented in combination with photographs or sketches of items of historic and religious significance. In the same vein, each issue included color photographs, colored maps, and generous publications of original art work to illustrate the issues.

In content, The Arab World concerned itself with the Arab/Israeli conflict, but not to the exclusion of other matters of importance. Several articles dealt with the international aspects of the conflict: the definition and question of aggression; the application of the Geneva Convention for the Protection of Civilian Persons to Arab Territories under Israeli occupation; and Resolution 242 (adopted November 22, 1967) of the United Nations regarding the peaceful settlement of the crisis in the Middle East. The articles written about the Arab/Israeli dispute concluded that, as a result of the 1967 aggression, Israel violated the human rights of persons in the area; further articles stressed the tragic consequences of the Israeli occupation: the reprisals for resistance to occupation, the restriction of movement, the destruction of property (especially property of historic or religious significance to the Arab world), and the transfer of civilians into the occupied territory (reflecting in the Arab view, an Israeli determination of never returning these lands to their rightful, Arab, owners).

Other articles chronicled the history of the area and the recent dispute from various viewpoints: religious, military, diplomatic, economic, and social, but also inevitably reaching the same conclusions of Israeli guilt in all fields. The fine arts were given special attention by The Arab World in 1969. Of notable importance were the archeological excavations in Egypt and the planned 1972 exhibitions to be held at the New York City Metropolitan Museum for those findings. Other fine arts included in the 1969 issues of The Arab World were Arab fashions, Arab craftsmanship in Spain and the Americas, and, as previously mentioned, poetry.

The 1969 issues of Arab News and Views placed special emphasis on United Nations involvement in the Arab/Israeli conflict; gaining special attention, with the corresponding headlines, were the instances in which Israeli actions were condemned by either the United Nations Security Council officially or by the various representatives on that Council. Notable examples included the Israeli attack on the Beirut International Airport in December of 1968 which was condemned by a unanimous Security Council resolution of December 31, 1968, and the resolution of the Council, unanimously adopted on July 3, 1969, "which . . . deplored Israel's failure to show any regard for former U.N. resolutions which warned against measures taken by Israel affecting the status of Jerusalem." The final issue of Arab News and Views, appropriately entitled "Arab Views" was subtitled "A Digest of Arab Views at the United Nations General Assembly." This issue, presented in country by country format, revolved around the particular countries' views on the major issues of 1969: Zionism, Jerusalem, Israeli occupation, and the prospects for peace in the Middle East.

Other topics receiving considerable attention by Arab News and Views included the Sirhan B. Sirhan trial in California, King Hussein's visit to Washington in April, the changes of government within the Arab World (special issue in August/September), and a special issue of the history of and the hopes for Jerusalem (October/November).

The tenor of the booklets and speeches disseminated by the Palestine Arab Delegation can be seen in the following:

"The dangerous situation in the Middle East today which is bound to explode into a Third World War is the result of the Zionist criminal war of aggression against Jordan, the United Arab Republic, and Syria on June 5, 1967."

These booklets and speeches further chronicle the terror and massacre associated with the Zionist crimes in the Middle East; among these crimes are the usurpation of the Arab homeland, "Acts of Genocide" against the Arab people in the occupied areas, destruction of Christian Holy Places in the Middle East, and daily "Crimes Against Humanity" perpetrated by the Zionists.

These booklets and speeches continually indict the United States policy in the Middle East for permitting the United States to become an ally of the Zionist aggressors; this alliance was formed through pressure from Jewish voters, Jewish controlled newspapers, and Jewish financial resources in the United States. Reflected in these publications are steps the Palestine Arab Delegation feels should be taken by the United States toward the Middle East situation and a "Just Solution to the Palestine Problem." This solution involves United Nations co-operation to condemn the Israeli aggression in terms that would address themselves to the settlement of the actual problem: the Israeli usurpation of Palestine, the Israeli violation of Palestine's territorial integrity, the illegal expulsion of the Palestinians from their homeland, and their deprivation of the Palestinians' inalienable right to self-determination.

AUSTRALIA

Australian News and Information Bureau	Australian Daily News	550
	Australian News Weekly Round Up	2,000
	Australian Science Newsletter (monthly)	100
	Australian Monthly Finance and Commerce Notes	225

The Australian Daily News datelined its reports from major Australian cities with topics ranging from political visitors to fashion and cosmetic news. The topics were obviously chosen for publication not only on their own merit, but also their timely relationship to world news; thus the January issues conveying good wishes to President Nixon at his inauguration, the February announcement of maintaining land, sea, and air forces in Singapore after the 1970 British withdrawal, the extensive coverage and congratulations of the July moon landing (especially the excellent participation of the Australian tracking station), and Australia's defense role following President Nixon's decisions to withdraw numbers of United States troops from Vietnam.

Regarding the Vietnam war, the Australian Daily News gave considerable coverage to Prime Minister John G. Gorton's statement of "Australia's full support and prayers in his (Nixon's) attempt to bring the fighting to an end in Vietnam." Mr. Gorton further stated that "even if there was a reduction of American forces it would be a shabby thing for Australia to reduce its Vietnam force." Conclusions regarding the Vietnam situation included an analysis of the strength of the ANZUS treaty which, Mr. Gorton asserted, was a guarantee of Australia's future security against physical attack; the same ANZUS treaty also imposed obligations on Australia to participate in joint defense proposals.

The final 1969 issues of the Australian Daily News concentrated on issues especially relevant to the October elections: regional security arrangements in South East Asia, economic policies of the Labor Government, and the role of the United Nations in world affairs. The November issues primarily reported the election results and explained their effect on the make-up of the new Parliament and the resultant federal/state policies. The December issues reflected changes in social and economic policies that would make for a more prosperous and productive 1970.

The Australian News Weekly Round Up reported similar timely subjects as did the Daily News; because of space limitations, the Round Up was designed to "give a broad picture of major Australian developments and events." Receiving proportionately more attention were defense related topics such as Vietnam, the ANZUS treaty, foreign policy proposals, and East/West talks and arrangements.

The Australian Science Newsletter placed primary emphasis on Australian developments in fields such as medicine, ecology, geology, insecticides, and the comprehensive research associated with the summer moon landing by the United States. These Newsletters reported on the research agencies in the above fields in both government and private institutions.

The Australian Monthly Finance and Commerce Notes concerned themselves mostly with the increased economic growth Australia experienced during 1969. This growth was reflected in areas of international commerce as well as in national institutions; however, "the outlook for the Australian economy in 1969-70 was for further strong growth even if the rate of expansion did not equal the outstanding record of 1968-69." Receiving considerable attention in the Notes was the development of Australia's natural resources; coal, copper, iron ore, and resources of the sea; of equal importance were the man-made resources and man-hours associated with the development of those natural resources.

BELGIUM

	Memo From Belgium	700
	Press releases	225

Belgian News, a monthly publication, was only issued during March, 1969, by the Registrant; this issue explained the Public Assistance programs in Belgium which are designed to provide aid only to the indigent and people incapable of providing for their own needs. The programs are organized as either "curative assistance" or "preventative assistance" and are constantly being reviewed to provide more adequate assistance to needy Belgians.

Memo from Belgium, another monthly publication only issued during the first part of the year (January, February, March, 1969), published articles of particular interest to residents of Belgium: the International Music Composition Contest, the policies of the European Economic Community as they relate to Belgium (especially agricultural policies), Belgian trade, human rights in Belgium, and the Western European Union.

One press release was published that was written to explain to American readers particular facets of Belgian life that might appear to be overly foreign. Included in this release were conversion tables for currency and weights as well as price comparisons for groceries and food between the two countries.

COLOMBIA

Samuel E. Stavisky & Associates	Press releases	500 each
Ruder & Finn	Press releases	150 each

One special issue of Colombia Today was distributed by the Registrant during 1969; this issue concentrated on the Administration of President Carlos Lleras-Restrepo and its accomplishments in 1968 and also provided basic data and economic information on the country itself. Presented in combinations of graphs, lists, and tables, it indicated a 7 per cent production increase from 1967, a five fold increase in electrical energy production since 1952, an increase of 33 1/3 per cent in minor exports since 1967, and a Gross National Product increase of 6 per cent in real terms. Coupled with economic progress were the governmental, constitutional, social, and agrarian reforms instigated by the Administration. According to the Colombia Information Center, 1969 marked the beginning of a period of steady development after the 1968 year of recovery.

Ruder and Finn, Inc. regularly published press releases on Colombian products and services. These covered a wide range of subjects including the improvements and difficulties of the capital, Bogota, Colombia's banking system and its five member Monetary Board controlling all banking operations in the country, Colombia's external loan projects, and the very important Colombian coffee industry.

The Samuel E. Stavisky & Associates press releases included copies of speeches made by President Dr. Carlos Lleras-Restrepo on his trip to the United States in June of 1969. Primarily economic in direction, the speeches also reflect on the progress made by Colombians in social and political areas as detailed in the Colombia Today Newsletter.

FRANCE

Comite' France Actuelle	France Actuelle (bi-weekly)	18,450
-------------------------	--------------------------------	--------

France Actuelle, subtitled a semi-monthly Report on Modern France, published a substantial number of articles relating to tourists and tourism in France and yet was in actuality primarily an economic report concentrating on French businesses and industry in general. Statistics offered by the magazine included the following:

France increased the value of its mechanical exports to America by 18,5 per cent.

From July 1968 to June 1969, the French produced 25.9 per cent more automobiles, trucks, and buses than the previous year.

In the past decade, some 150,000 Frenchmen per year have left their farms for industrial positions.

The 28th Paris Air and Space Show drew 1,350,000 visitors and was reported to have been the world's biggest and best.

France has a total of 1105 museums of all types all over the country.

Each of these statistics represent special articles in 1969 issues of France Actuelle; these issues were also supplemented by other short articles or pictures about that general subject. Other issues of France Actuelle were concerned with topics generally reflecting either other world news or the publishing season, notably the Apollo 11 moon walk and France at Christmas time.

GERMANY

Roy Blumenthal Inter- national Associates, Inc.	News for Release	100 each
	Films (two)	50
	Berlin Business Barom- eter (bi-monthly)	3100

News for Release related occurrences both in the economic and social fields between the United States and Berlin. Among the social items reported were the Jazz Festival to honor Duke Ellington, the tenth anniversary of the Jewish Community House in Berlin, the 19th Festival of the Arts, the Centennial of Berlin's State College of Music and Performing Arts, the International Film Festival, and the 125th anniversary of the Berlin Zoo.

Among the economic stories featured in News for Release were the opening of the October Berlin Goodwill Pavilion in the United States, the September Berlin Industrial Exhibit (a yearly demonstration of German business achievement in science and technology), the INTERCHIC International Women's Fashion Fair in Berlin (offering a 50 per cent rebate on first class round trip air fare to persons attending), and the International Green Week (West Berlin's traditional food and agricultural fair).

More substantive economic news about Berlin was also distributed by the Registrant in Berlin Business Barometer; this publication centered on the economic progress of Berlin relating to both intranational and international trade. Combining the business incentives Berlin offered with its advantages as a convention site, Berlin experienced a record 1969 business year. To adjust to this business boom, Berlin was forced to undergo a building boom; in 1968, Berlin had a five per cent increase in overall construction volume compared to 1967. Inherent in this boom were the overcoming of the housing shortages, the end of rent controls, and the corresponding increase in the real-estate market. The year of 1969 also brought problems to Berlin's economic life: the chronic shortage of labor being the most urgent. The incentive programs of the city were directed to meeting this problem; attract young working people to Berlin to reverse the shortage was the most often proposed of the incentive programs.

"Twenty-four Hours in Berlin" and "City Hall of Berlin" were two color films shown primarily to junior high and high school students throughout the country. Presenting introductions to the people and city of Berlin, these films were shown to an average of 50 institutions each per month.

GHANA

Ghana Information Services	Ghana Today (bi-weekly)	200
	GHANA: Press release	1700

Ghana Today, a small, eight page magazine, reflected not only the changing conditions in the country but also the changes that are being planned for future progress. Ghana Today began the year with the expectation of the then ruling National Liberation Council for a more promising 1969; among the promises made to Ghanians was the eventual opportunity to choose a new Constitution with provisions for government by the people. In showing the activity of the National Liberation Council, special emphasis was placed on reprinting laudatory remarks made by leaders of other countries about the Council; visitors received by the Council were also afforded special coverage in the magazine.

Economic progress was a popular topic of Ghana Today in 1969; not only were the state and private enterprises featured, but also the incentive programs offered by the government by virtue of the Capital Investment Act. To aid in the attraction of foreign investors as well as aiding Ghanaian exports, the new Kotoka International Airport was featured in a March issue of Ghana Today.

Amidst governmental and economic reform, the Ghanians did not exclude social and intellectual development. Although experiencing difficulties in book shortages and distribution, measures have been undertaken by the government to improve the situation throughout the country. Ghanians celebrated March 21st as the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, a day closely tied to the 20th Anniversary of the Adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. But encouraging the intellectual and social needs of an ever-increasing number of people could be self-defeating without simultaneously attempting to improve the country's human resources. The newly established Ghana Manpower Board relates to the "essential features of Ghana's present and future population and the implications of these features in relation to the current and projected economic situation and ultimate welfare of the society."

A press release issued in September headlined the news of the return of Ghana to civilian government after the "three year rule of the country's military regime." The Progress Party, headed by Dr. Kofi Abrefa Busia, won a wide majority of the seats in the National Assembly thus enabling him to be sworn in as the Prime Minister of Ghana. In addition to listing the academic achievements of the new Prime Minister, the press release also listed the ministers and Parliamentary secretaries in the new government.

By far the most detailed source of government policies, statements, and decisions were three British Information Service publications: Policy Background, Policy Statements (both published by the Economic and Political Affairs Division of BIS), and the series publications of the Reference and Library Division of BIS.

The Policy Background issues during 1969 were frequently directed to news items of that year, however many issues provided background information on the effect of policies initiated several years previous. Notable among the non-news related issues were those explaining the setting up of residences in the United Kingdom as permitted under the 1962 and 1968 Commonwealth Immigrants Acts, the plans for government expenditures through 1971 (with an average rate of growth at just over three per cent per year), and the regulations covering the shipping of personal gifts to individuals in the United Kingdom.

The Policy Statements to some extent duplicated the news related items of the Policy Background issues. Each issue dealt with a specific topic; rather than presenting the background of that particular topic, the Statements contained actual policy decisions or speeches by government officials on the subject in question. Policy Statements in 1969 reiterated Britain's stand on Nigeria ("We are not prepared to do anything that would involve recognition of tribal secession in Africa, which would cut us off from Nigeria, outrage African opinion and produce no useful result.");

on the Cold War ("We must, unless we are to despair of mankind, approach with hope the concept of trying to get easier relations between . . . East and West, the Communist and non-Communist worlds.");

on Vietnam ("Her Majesty's Government has always, where we considered appropriate to do so, expressed anxieties about American policies, and even dissociation from particular actions involved in the fighting of this war.");

on the Common Market (" . . . a Europe strengthened by Britain will be able to play a more significant part in world trade and development, on a one-world basis."); and finally on Northern Ireland (" . . . the question of partition is not involved here; there will be no change in the status of Northern Ireland without the consent of the people of Northern Ireland The Border is not an issue in this question.").

Today's British Papers, as well as British Weeklies, reported news stories as reported in either daily or weekly British newspapers. Today's British Papers, usually organized on a topical basis, reprinted parts of editorials from independent, conservative, and liberal newspapers on news related topics. These editorial reprints concerned such 1969 news items as Vietnam, the Common Market, Apollo 11, Africa, NATO, and European affairs. The newspapers quoted by Today's British Papers ranged from The Daily Telegraph (conservative) to The Guardian (liberal) and included such independent newspapers as The Sun, The Times, and The Scotsman.

The Factel Series was a monthly publication of reprints concerning governmental decisions establishing new commissions or policies and contained in greater detail much of the same 1969 news related subjects as Today's British Papers: commissions for a more effective pollution control; Britain's role in and positions on international organizations (notably the Council of Europe and the International Labor Organization); Britain's role in international tourism, British economic aid to South and Southeast Asia, and the problems of Northern Ireland.

A bi-weekly review of British affairs, British Record published the official British positions on events and topics dominating each reporting period covered. Including wide ranges of subjects in each issue, British Record attempted only to summarize the major news events, leaving more detailed coverage to other BIS publications. Other BIS special publications included booklets and reprints on government in Great Britain and the services that government provided for inhabitants of the country. Among such booklets issued in 1969 were "Social Services in Great Britain," "British Financial Institutions," "The Police Service in Great Britain," and "The British Parliament." BIS publications such as Fact Sheets on Britain and Fact Sheets on the Commonwealth as well as Regions of Britain generally included geographic, economic, and social material not found in the news related publications.

The political propaganda disseminated by the British American Chamber of Commerce consisted of reprints of testimony before Congressional committees and telegrams to governmental officials. The subject matter of all these reprints was the U.S. government's various policies and decisions affecting importers. These reprints were all directed toward achieving the following goals set by the Chamber:

"...cut out unnecessary costs; cut out unnecessary red tape and formal procedures; remove unnecessary relief delays; and avoid the unnecessary retention of customs attorneys."

IRAN

Downs & Roosevelt, Inc.	Iran Fact and Opinion (monthly)	2000
	Iran Fact Sheet	2100

Iran Fact and Opinion is a six page newsletter reporting both economic and social development in the country. Of importance to the press during 1969 were the activities of the Iranian Shah; his visits, especially the August visit to the earthquake reconstruction sites, became major articles for the publication. Of comparable importance were the economic development records achieved within the country, especially all records regarding oil production.

A supplementary Iran Fact Sheet was also published which presented the position of the Iranian government on the border dispute between Iran and Iraq (Shad al-Arab issue). Despite the strained relations between the two countries, the Iranian government had not resorted to retaliatory actions against the Iraqis. The Iranian government continued to believe that this dispute could be settled peacefully if the Iraqi authorities would negotiate on conditions of justice and fairness to all (granting the Iranian government control of the area in dispute). Downs and Roosevelt, Inc. reprinted articles appearing in the Washington Post newspaper on the dispute as an appendix to this Fact Sheet.

ISRAEL

Israel Communications, Inc.	Press Releases	700

The Jewish Agency - American Section, Inc.	The Israel Digest	3000
	Press Releases	150
Ruder and Finn, Inc.	Press Releases	300
	Business and Economic News from Israel	50 - 100

The Jewish Agency - American Section, Inc. press releases in 1969 were concerned with presenting an overall, comprehensive view of Israel and were not limited to one general topic. These press releases, publishing texts of speeches, as well as background information on Israel, varied in context but all presented the initiative, growth, and future plans of the State of Israel. Concluding that "the country's hope for peace and survival is dependent on three interlinking factors: 1. political and military; 2. economic and financial; and 3. social and human," the Jewish Agency - American Section, Inc. published press releases on all three factors during the year.

The specifics for these three factors could be found in the Jewish Agency - American Section, Inc.'s magazine, The Israel Digest. In politics, the major concern of the magazine, the Digest discussed the Knesset (Parliament) and the overwhelming vote of confidence it gave Prime Minister Golda Meir and her National Unity Coalition Government. This government stressed unity in that "the nation is unanimous, its determination absolute and strength tempered to persevere in the struggle to defend itself until the longed-for arrival of peace."

The following statements present the major thrusts of the political and military articles printed by the Digest throughout year:

"the aim of the Arab aggression which led to the Six Day War" was to exterminate Israel;

"Jordan continues through 1969 to serve as the main base for terrorist activities" against Israel;

"the U.N. serves as the Arab mouthpiece" because the Arabs refuse to speak with the Israelis about peace;

"the Soviet Union (is) encouraging tension" in the area and was "a central factor in the encouragement and inflaming of the crisis in the spring of 1967;" and

"Four Power talks have brought peace no nearer" to the Middle East.

In relation to political and military factors regarding Israel, the conclusions presented by the Digest in 1969 were that "the Jewish People are determined not to weaken in the struggle for peace." "No power in the world has yet been created which can wear away and crush the spirit and vitality of this (Jewish) people."

The economic, financial, social, and human factors were rooted deeply in the political and military factors surrounding the conflict according to the Israeli political propaganda. The Israeli economy, geared to the war economy necessary for the political and military goals, sought, according to the Digest, financial resources from a wide variety of industries and investments; one article, pointing up the Jewish unity approach of the Digest, reported that:

"...groups of Israeli youngsters, some no older than five, have taken to peddling old books they have collected, nearly torn magazines, small toys, strings, ribbons, colored papers, and an infinite variety of trinkets-- all to raise money for the purchase of Phantom airplanes from the U.S."

Coupling the social and human aspects of the situation with a repetition of the political and military goals, the Israel Digest placed considerable importance on education and the hope it presented for the Israeli future. However, as with all other hopes for the future, Israel Digest predicated their success on the successful conclusions of all aspects of the conflict with the Arab nations.

The press releases issued by Ruder and Finn, Inc. focused on the major Israeli industries and the bi-products of those industries available in the United States. These promotional releases in 1969 were primarily about the Israeli fashion industry and the Israeli food producers. Methods of advertising and promoting these products ranged from Food Fairs debuting in major U.S. cities to the Israeli Fashion Week offering opportunities for American buyers in Israel.

The Business and Economic News from Israel advertised the expansion of industry in Israel; knitting plants, agricultural farms, chemical works, ready-to-wear industries, and research firms and industries were all included in articles on exports from and investment in Israel. The conclusion that Israel provided unexcelled opportunity for economic advancement by industries was advanced by the News through the use of statistical reports, growth charts, and descriptions of the appeal of any Israeli industry.

The wide variety of booklets disseminated by the Israel Information Services was concerned solely with aspects revolving around the Six Day War. A selection of their titles easily reflects the subject matter of the booklets disseminated during 1969:

"Abba Eban: Not Backward to Belligerency, But Forward to Peace"

"The Arab Design for Israel's Annihilation: The Record of Aggression"

"Barbed Wire Shall Not Return to Jerusalem"

"Arab Terror Strategy: The Latest Phase of the Twenty Year War"

"Jordanian Belligerency: A Review of Jordan's Policies Towards the State of Israel"

Ruder and Finn, Inc. published political propoganda for the Japan National Tourist Organization and Expo-1970 during 1969. These press releases extolled not only the benefits of Expo-1970 in and of itself, but also extolled the arrangements and special considerations undertaken by the Japanese government to further enrich Expo visitors' stay in Japan. Among these special arrangements and considerations were a tax exemption on lodgings and the lodgings' services for the entire 1970 "Expo" year, the building of 51-story Keio Plaza Hotel in downtown Tokyo, the opening of the world's largest outdoor sculpture museum in Hokone, and the opening of the newly completed Tomei Expressway to connect Tokyo with the more distant tourist attractions in Nagoya.

The Japan Trade Centers in Chicago and New York published news releases relating to U.S. - Japan trade relations. The Chicago office reported in 1969 that they provide information on Japanese products for American importers, assist Japanese business on imports as well as on exports, and provide statistical and marketing data on Japanese trade and industry. This information, specifically concerning the Midwestern United States, showed that "midwestern sales to Japan are at a rate of over three quarters of a billion dollars a year." Each news release showed evidence of these sales in major farm and factory industries; by 1975, this market was expected to reach about $1.25 billion according to the Trade Center's news releases.

In addition to the above, the news releases of the Chicago office also reported personnel changes within the organization or in organizations closely associated with Japan--U.S. trade, i.e. the Japanese Chamber of Commerce.

The New York Office of the Japan Trade Center issued press releases on essentially the same items as the Chicago office. Unique to the New York Office, however, were the numerous releases on special fairs for and displays of Japanese products. These products, from toys to computers, reflected the variety available as a result of increased Japan--U.S. trade.

The Japan Steel Information Center reported in its press releases that Japan's steel industry continues to lead world steelmakers in steel production via the basic oxygen furnace. All the press releases revealed that the steel consumption can be used as an index of the activity of the economy: the more steel used, the more construction (both private and public), the more railroads, the more vehicles, and the more industrial production available for a progressing people.

The United States--Japan Trade Council published by far the most literature on U.S.--Japan trade. In addition to publishing the Council's quarterly activities reports, the U.S.--Japan Trade Council published news releases on special topics in the trade relations area. U.S. government regulations affecting U.S.--Japan trade were accorded far more attention by the Council than by any other Registrant. Some of these in 1969 were the Federal Power Commission's regulations making it far more difficult for private utility and gas pipeline companies to pursue their own independent "Buy American" policies (a move the Council deemed a "step in the right direction"), the discussion of "voluntary quotas" on textiles suggested by the Department of Agriculture (which the Council felt would make the U.S. the "big loser" in the long run), and Maryland's proposed law that would prohibit Maryland's public agencies from using in public works any items from a country which "discriminates" against Maryland's products (such a "Buy American" law, the Council asserted, would impose additional costs on the taxpayers). Other issues of the Council's News reported city by city percentages in their trade with Japan as well as overall statistical reports of the U.S.--Japan trade in 1969. These statistics were also published as booklets and distributed throughout the year by the Council.

Peking Review		2000

Peking Review, a bi-weekly magazine, was the major source of political propaganda disseminated about Red China in the United States. Articles published in this magazine were also often repeatedly published as booklets, pamphlets, or excerpts from them were used on posters. Directed to the Communist nations as well as the non-Communist nations, Peking Review made constant use of the invectives associated with Red Chinese propaganda; the "Soviet revisionist running dog clique" appeared almost as frequently as the "United States imperialist aggression."

In substance, Peking Review reflected news related topics during 1969 but not with the same regularity as other countries' publications. The news items most frequently covered concerned Chinese relations with other countries, especially those whose diplomatic missions were in full favor with Peking. One such country given considerable favorable coverage during 1969 was Albania; following the celebration of the 25th anniversary of Albania's liberation, articles proclaimed "the profound revolutionary friendship of the fraternal Albanian people for the Chinese people's great leader Chairman Mao as well as for the Chinese people."

The successful September 23rd underground nuclear test followed by a new hydrogen bomb test on September 29 occasioned articles on China's ability to deal a "crushing blow to imperialist-revisionist-aggressive plots." Providing the opportunity to give encouragement to oppressed peoples (South Vietnam in particular) as well as contributing to the end of nuclear monopolies, the nuclear tests represented, according to Peking Review, a "magnificent victory of Mao Tse-tung thought."

Chairman Mao Tse-tung and his writings were the center of all Red Chinese publications. From the miraculous stories of healing to the richness of the harvests, all the benefits experienced by the Red Chinese people were in some way a direct result of continued reading and study of Chairman Mao's writings. Each Red Chinese publication began its pages with a thought by Chairman Mao and all articles in those publications ended with a testimony to the effectiveness of that thought. A sampling of titles from the myriad of pamphlets and booklets published in 1969 is evidence of the pervasiveness of Chairman Mao's thought:

"Put Mao Tse-tung's Thought in Command of Everything"

"Chairman Mao Tse-tung on People's War"

"Great Victory for Chairman Mao's Revolutionary Line"

"Mao Tse-tung on the Policy Concerning Industry and Commerce"

"Mao Tse-tung's Thought is the Invincible Weapon"

These writings of Chairman Mao were directed toward the Chinese people as well as the peoples in other nations; special directives were issued during the year to the areas within China experiencing considerable poverty because of poor farming conditions. Peking Review proudly boasted of one such area that made great efforts in studying and applying Chairman Mao's thoughts which resulted in the "vigorous progress in both revolution and production and changed the commune's former state of poverty." The conclusion reached by this series of articles on the successful application of Mao's thought was embodied in still another quotation from the Chairman: "Of all things in the world, people are the most precious. Under the leadership of the Communist Party, as long as there are people, every kind of miracle can be performed."

The international application of Mao's thought was most often specifically applied to South Vietnam during 1969. One instance providing considerable opportunity for stressing the importance of Chairman Mao's thought was Ho Chi Minh's funeral. At the funeral, the Red Chinese delegation expressed Mao's support of the Vietnamese people in "carrying the war against U.S. aggression and for national salvation through to the end."

Unique to the Red Chinese political propaganda disseminated in the United States were phonograph recordings of Chairman Mao's thoughts, of Chinese operas based on Mao's thoughts, and of songs compiled from Mao's thoughts. Also unique were the posters extolling the virtues of the Chinese Communist Party and its leader, Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

RHODESIA

Office

Rhodesian Viewpoint (bi-weekly)	3,800
Rhodesian Commentary (monthly)	6,200
Booklets and Pamphlets	25-50
	each per month

Rhodesian Viewpoint directed its publication of articles to attacks on the U.S. sanctions against Rhodesia and the subsequent strained relations between the two countries as well as to the British reaction and inaction regarding the four year old Rhodesian independence. Considerable attention was given a resolution sponsored by 29 members of the U.S. House of Representatives calling for an end to the ineffective sanctions against Rhodesia; previous articles by Rhodesian Viewpoint had spotlighted the problems arising for the United States as a result of these sanctions (increased dependence by the U.S. on the U.S.S.R. for materials previously traded from Rhodesia, depletion of stockpiles of materials previously traded from Rhodesia, and the reduction of U.S. exports to Rhodesia from $22.9 million in 1965 to $2.1 million in 1968).

A special issue in October commented on the State Department's official policy toward Rhodesia as spelled out in a letter addressed to persons who inquire as to this policy. In response to this U.S. policy letter, the special issue reiterated the Rhodesian belief that its actions relating to independence are domestic in nature and immune from intervention by the United Nations or any other nation-state; Rhodesia claimed that there is no denial of political rights to its African population stating that there is a "nonracial qualified franchise providing equal opportunities for all citizens to qualify and register as voters" under the 1961 and 1965 constitutions; the consideration that the British government has declined its reasonable proposals for a solution of the conflict between them; and the denial of any "impediment to the formation of political parties with lawful objectives" in Rhodesia.

In somewhat repetitive fashion, the Rhodesian Viewpoint directed numerous remarks to the British; the June issue reporting the election results (giving overwhelming endorsement of the government's plans to declare a Republic and enact a new constitution) provided an opportune time for the publication to attack the British views once more. Quoting from both British and American sources as to the ineffectiveness of the sanctions against the country, the Prime Minister of Rhodesia (Ian Smith) reported that the support received in the election meant that the last ties with the British government were severed. The British did nothing, could have done nothing, and after four years of independence will probably do nothing about the Rhodesians in the future were the conclusions drawn by Smith. In the final edition for the year, Rhodesian Viewpoint quoted one or two sentence statements of persons in power around the world relating to the Rhodesian situation. The conclusions of all were that the sanctions were ineffective, the British assessments have consistently been in error for four years, U.N. action was both uncalled for and ineffective when taken, and the argument that Rhodesia is a threat to either its domestic peace or international tranquility is absurd in the light of the progress maintained by the country.

Rhodesian Commentary published more articles dealing with Rhodesian life, culture, and economics than Rhodesian politics. Although the major political news stories were reported, they usually were relegated to second or third page coverage instead of first page headlines. Some of the topics covered in Rhodesian Commentary included economic and industrial initiations (especially schools); these initiations included the opening of the first stage of a four year plan to develop 20,000 acres near the capital, the opening of the runway extension on the Salisbury Airport making the new runway nearly three miles long, and the approval of new industrial projects which will have an annual output of 32 million British pounds when in production.

The Prime Minister's New Year Message to the Nation said that "1969 would be a year of decision--a turning point in our affairs." Reflecting these decisions or turning points were articles explaining Rhodesian immigration, a new agricultural college, sporting events (especially those dealing with horses), and historical events either requiring special celebrations or special commemorative stamps. These articles, coupled with economic development in Rhodesia,

President Chiang Kai-shek's New Year message reflected the direction taken by all Nationalist Chinese political propaganda during 1969; he stated that although the government of the Republic of China was forced to withdraw from the mainland of China, "it has continued to make immense contributions in putting out the flames of Maoist aggression and thus has defended the freedom and peace of the Asian and Pacific region."

The Nationalist Chinese propaganda made frequent references to the Nationalist Chinese ability to undermine the Peking regime to the point of total collapse. News From China, repeatedly admonished the residents of Taiwan to renovate and progress in their responsibilities toward their captive 700 million brothers on the mainland. References to the future "triumph of counterattack and national recovery" were interspersed with the observations that this task was being furthered by the internal decay of the Maoist regime.

Economic progress of the island was spotlighted several times during the year; according to the directorate general of Budgets, the actual growth of national income in 1969 was up by 8.4 per cent compared with the 1968 figures. However, the fields of agriculture and industry were not able to report as favorable a growth rate due to two successive typhoon attacks in the fall.

Issues of News from China were heavily influenced by major news items in the world; also special attention was afforded to visits of foreign dignitaries to the Republic of China. Related to these news items, a late 1969 issue of the English China News selected the following as being part of the ten biggest news items during the year:

Typhoons Elsie and Flossie causing an estimated US$87.5 million total loss;

The 10th National Congress of the ruling Kuomintang and its stress on political rejuvenation and the recruitment of younger talents;

The multi-million dollar banana scandal at Kaohsiung which resulted in the downfall of not only the banana export racket kingpin, but also one Cabinet member; and

The launching of a twelve year master science development program designed to help the Republic of China progress in science and technology; the US$30.0 million project marked the most ambitious government program to date.

The publication Background on China reprinted articles from the official Communist Chinese news agency in Peking (Hsinhua) on topics related to the Republic of China's government. Frequent among these articles were those denouncing the Republic of China--United States co-operation in military and economic areas. Also the recipient of Red Chinese newspaper attacks were the United States--Soviet arms talks and the United States presence in Vietnam.

All other publications released by the Chinese Information Services carried articles relating to the Republic of China's development in all fields of technology and science. These publications at various times during the year printed articles detailing more than current events, but essentially these publications were closely tied to world news and the effect of that particular news topic on Nationalist Chinese development.

NETHERLANDS

Arnold & Porter Memoranda and letters 100 each

Three items of literature were received during 1969 from the Registrant on behalf of the International Federation, a Holland based firm; all of these items were directed to explaining why the current escape-clause tariff on Wilton and velvet floor coverings should be allowed to expire as scheduled on December 31, 1969.

One memorandum presented a background to the escape-clause tariff as well as reporting the Tariff Commission Report for 1969 which concluded that "the U.S. producers in the aggregate would be little affected by the termination of the duty increase." This memorandum concluded by presenting portions of President Nixon's trade message to Congress on November 18, 1969, which in part stated that escape-clause adjustments are only "temporary relief measures, not permanent features of the tariff landscape." The other materials distributed by Arnold & Porter presented these same recommendations and conclusions in varying forms, such as letters to Congressmen and other memoranda.

NEW ZEALAND

Ruder & Finn, Inc.

Press releases

Press releases for the New Zealand Meat Producers Board promoted New Zealand meat as both a profitable and quality export from the country to the United States. One such release even relayed the assurances of the New Zealand meat industry to U. S. lamb feeders that while the New Zealand exports to North America would undoubtedly increase in 1970, "every effort would be made to ensure the continuing stability of the U.S. market."

Another press release suggested that the increased export trade with the United States gave both countries an opportunity to increase the role of the meat industry in the overall national economy; this increased role would then lead to expanded investments by all concerned with the trade. The stated purpose of the press releases, no matter how many advantages were explained, was the attempt by the Registrant to stop a suggested imposition of import quotas on lamb; the arguments presented against these quotas by the Registrant ranged from "economically indefensible" to "politically alarming."

NORTH VIETNAM

China Books and Periodicals

Vietnam Courier (weekly)	375
Vietnam (magazine) (monthly)	350
Booklets and Pamphlets	25-50 (each)

Vietnam Courier, directed all its articles in 1969 toward the United States and the serious setbacks the United States had suffered as a result of the war of aggression it was fighting in South Vietnam. Articles reprinting speeches as well as articles written especially for the weekly paper all concluded that the United States policy of war and aggression was designed to "increase the U.S. role of international gendarme and to suppress the national liberation movements" wherever they so occurred.

The last issue of the paper contained attacks on the November 3rd speech by President Nixon and the "change of policy" on the battlefield and at the conference table. Opposing the "Vietnamization" proposals and the withdrawal of troops on an unannounced timetable, the Vietnam Courier presented its proposals for ending the war:

"Any correct solution to the Vietnam problem must be based on the respect for the fundamental national rights of the Vietnamese people and the right to self-determination of the people of South Vietnam. As the aggressor, the United States must put an end to its aggression, withdraw totally and unconditionally from South Vietnam its troops and those of the foreign countries belonging to its camp; it must give up its attempts to maintain the puppet administration; and let the people of South Vietnam settle themselves their own affairs without any foreign interference."

Other forms of the same propaganda were distributed also in a small, monthly magazine entitled Vietnam. Displaying the "Glorious Exploits" of the Liberation Forces of South Vietnam in both photo and story, the magazine also included the effects of the fighting. Pictures of war, injured women and children, as well as determined women and children avenging their losses, were interspersed among short articles on such topics as visits to liberated zones, education of children within the fighting zones, and hospital care in South Vietnam. These articles, directed more to the effects of the war than the attempts to conclude the war, continually mentioned sneak enemy attacks and the continuous bombing of children's villages by U.S. planes.

The Vietnamese response to "American aggressors" was portrayed as valiant and worthy of the recognition of becoming members of the "Congress of Good Nephews and Nieces of Uncle Ho." Conclusions as to the effectiveness of the Vietnamese response can be seen in the following statistics offered by Vietnam: "From the night of February 22 to March 30, 1969, many repeated attacks on cities, province capitals, townships, and almost all division headquarters and major logistic bases of the U.S. (resulted in) 104,000 enemy troops wiped out or captured, among them 52,000 G.I.'s."

The content of the miscellaneous booklets and pamphlets issued on behalf of North Vietnam is obvious in a random sampling of the following titles: "Vietnam and the Failure of the U.S. War of Destruction Against the D.R.V.N. (official documents)"; "The Resistance Will Win"; "Twelve Years of U.S. Imperialist Intervention and Aggression In Laos (published in 1967)"; and "U.S. War Crimes in Vietnam."

PORTUGAL

Casa de Portugal	Noticias e Factos	150

Downs & Roosevelt	The Portuguese Economy: 1967-1968	450

News and Facts, the English publication of Casa de Portugal, is a summary newsletter published fifteen times per month. Concerned with news and news items happening in Portugal, News and Facts presented a summary of the news item and then included a more lengthy article delving into the details of the subject.

Included in the 1969 issues were the important resignations, deaths, accomplishments, and plans of the Portuguese officials, both in and out of government. Receiving considerable coverage during the July issues was the Portuguese Prime Minister's visit to Brazil; this five day official visit was characterized by News and Facts as "not one of flowery speeches extolling the Luso-Brazilian traditional ties, but one of action, which I hope will bear concrete fruit in producing many agreements'." A joint communique issued by both countries stated "their intention to intensify 'political, economic, and cultural co-operation'." Other important news relating to international co-operation included a visit from the South African Foreign Minister to Portugal in June, the Tenth Congress of the European Economic and Financial Press meeting in May, Portugal's continuing contributions to NATO's defense efforts, correspondence between the Portuguese Foreign Minister and the Secretary-General of the United Nations about Portuguese Consul-General relations with Rhodesia which Portugal decided not to terminate, and Portuguese relations with Angola and Mozambique and the maintenance of their colonial status.

Important speeches given by Portuguese officials were also reprinted in special editions of News and Facts. Most of these speeches were given by the official during a trip outside of the country, however some are also official notifications of Portuguese policies. Examples of both include the texts of the Prime Minister's speeches at the openings of both Angola's and Mozambique's Legislative Councils in the spring as well as the Prime Minister's Address to the Nation in April; the Portuguese Ambassador's speech to the Washington Club and the texts of the speeches delivered at the ceremony of the Transfer of Powers (Foreign Affairs) in October, both of which stressed continued U.S.--Portuguese co-operation in the international sphere.

Other publications by Casa de Portugal included a Portuguese language edition of News and Facts published more frequently than the English edition and containing more short news items than the English edition. This Portuguese edition contained short, datelined news dispatches from the Portuguese news agency (ANI) of Lisbon which reflected the major news interest stories affecting Portugal both domestically and internationally.

The economic publication by Downs and Roosevelt was published on behalf of the Overseas Companies of Portugal; this booklet, subdivided into three sections on Metropolitan Portugal, Angola, and Mozambique included statistics, graphs, analyses, and photographs of a wide variety of economic information: agriculture, fisheries, industry (mining, manufacturing, construction), transport, tourism, and foreign trade. Reporting record growth for 1967 and 1968, the preliminary estimates included in the report indicated that the growth rate will continue to rise for Metropolitan Portugal; the economic outlook for Angola pointed to continued expansion of the general economy, but not a spectacular growth; Mozambique would have to be content with the potential that perhaps is greater than that of Angola, but its economic activity was not as dramatic as that of Angola.

were designed to present Rhodesia as a developed country, secure in its future, and not dependent on the results of sanctions applied by other countries.

In addition to the above regular periodicals, the Rhodesian Information Office also disseminated an assortment of booklets relating to special events or topics on Rhodesia. Most common among these booklets were addresses made by government officials including the Prime Minister's press conferences, the Minister of Law and Order announcing the abolition of the mandatory death penalty, and the Minister of Commerce and Industry on the industrial potential of Rhodesia. Other booklets disseminated were on special African tribal habits, the Border Lands area, a Jackal hunt, and booklets answering special, isolated questions on Rhodesian history or travel.

South African SCOPE (monthly)	25,000
Panorama (monthly)	4,289
Booklets and Pamphlets	200-
	each per month

NEWS from South Africa datelined articles from major South African cities on news of current interest in the country. Recent topics ranged from new government agreements to new developments in medicine, however no one theme was consistently portrayed in this publication.

Of primary importance to other South African propaganda was the economic development of the country; second in importance seemed to be the explanation of the country's political growth and the doctrine of apartheid. In that regard, the South African Digest reported an anticipated gross domestic product for 1969 at higher than the target growth of 5.5 per cent. Business conditions in every sector of the economy, except agriculture, experienced a revival in activity over the 1968 economic year; sectors including communications, transport, fine arts, construction, industry, mining, and agriculture were highlighted during the year. Prospects for 1970, as reported by the Digest, were optimistic; at current prices, the gross domestic product was estimated to increase by 10.5 per cent over the 1969 figures.

Of less importance to the South African Digest, but more so to South African Scope and South African Panorama, was the issue of apartheid, or separate development of the races in South Africa. Rarely in South African publications do members of the different races appear in pictures together and rarely do separate pictures of different races appear on the same page; if such occurs, the member of the black race is usually a visiting dignitary or a "coloured" South African being rewarded for some exceptional achievement. When articles do center on black development, they are usually written to spotlight some particular industry or service furnished by the government; the fall issues of Scope contained articles on the Ovamboland Hospital and the Itireleng Creche (kindergarten), both of which are entirely serviced for and staffed by black people in South Africa. Comparable articles on the Pretoria Occupational Therapy College and Rand Afrikaans University reported on similar services for white South Africans.

Aside from the attempt to merely show the progress of the separate race development, the Information Service of South Africa also distributed booklets, pamphlets, and magazines which emphasized the ideological foundations of apartheid. Since the "whites got to South Africa before the Bantus did," and since "he made South Africa an economic success" and "he has done most to create a South African culture," the conclusion reached was that the "white South Africans deserve a fairer hearing. The problem has grown to its present proportions precisely because the whites did not kill off the non-white races. . ." This problem resulted in the conclusion that "integration is not possible now; maybe one day it will be, but not now." The solution, therefore: apartheid, a measure by which the South Africans can "alleviate their fears caused by an inferiority of numbers, and to give them the time to do what they can to coax the non-whites into the twentieth century."

And the final justification to the solution: "In the meantime, they (the white South Africans) prevent the Communists from setting up shop on this prized piece of real estate, and they prevent the non-whites from tearing each other apart. Relentless vigilance, relentless order."

Other publications dealing with the issue of apartheid included "South Africa in Pictures," "South Africa: An African-Rooted Nation," "Prison Administration in South Africa," and "Performing Arts in South Africa."

Economic publications were also included in the miscellaneous distributions by the Information Service of South Africa; among these were "Focus on South Africa," "South Africa in World Strategy," "Taking Factories to the People," and "Orange River Project."

SWEDEN

	Nyheter fran Sverige (weekly)	360
Swedish Chamber of Commerce of the U.S.A.	Newsletter	450

The English News from Sweden included translations of government speeches that reflected divergent steps in policy decisions; the first such speech was the Foreign Minister's announcement of the "Government's decision to recognize North Vietnam" and was announced as a "move taken after long consideration and timed so that it would not disturb the Paris negotiations." Another major speech announced that "Sweden has gone on record as the first country in the world to prohibit the nation-wide use of DDT."

Of considerable importance to News from Sweden were the increasing numbers of conscientious objectors who had left their U.S. Army positions to seek asylum in Sweden; one article reviewed a film entitled "Deserter USA" in which the "deserters are portrayed as being insecure in Sweden in as much as they were admitted to the country on 'humanitarian grounds'. They maintain that this offers no indication as to how long they will be permitted to stay and results in an inability to find decent jobs." The Vietnam issue received even more attention in latter issues of News from Sweden; in the last issue of the year, the Minister of Education reflected that "it is an American tragedy that the U.S. actions appear as defending the vestiges of an old colonial system," and that "Sweden wants to give assistance as soon as possible to the reconstruction of Vietnam, but this assistance would not be given before the war is over."

Other topics receiving considerable attention in the News from Sweden were pollution (the world wide environmental conservation conference will be held in Sweden in 1972), health (controls on tobacco advertising were tightened as a result of a voluntary agreement by the tobacco trade and the government), and consumer protection (a consumer ombudsman would be appointed to handle complaints from the public and negotiate with businessmen to correct improper practices).

The Swedish Chamber of Commerce of the U.S.A. Newsletter was published for members of the Chamber; this Newsletter was strictly an economic report of industrial production, exports, imports, and general trade information relating to Sweden and the United States. Beginning with the economic news relating to the U.S. production and trade, the Newsletter then continues with economic news from Sweden; the optimistic reporting of the Swedish news reflected increases in nearly every conceivable form or means of production, from cars to engineering orders, from power consumption to potato crops. Fervently desiring favorable trade with the United States, the Newsletter reported changes in American laws, agreements, or treaties affecting that trade; in addition, any U.S. government sanctions or statements regarding trade were also accorded considerable coverage in the Newsletter. Some of these items included the government's participation in ending the longshoreman's strike in January and February, the extension of the surtax and the construction cutback, the rise of the cost of living, the rise in unemployment, and the averages on the stock market board.

Investment Opportunities in Switzerland was the subject of numerous press releases issued by James F. Fox, Inc. on behalf of Investors Overseas Services, Ltd., Geneva. These releases, sent to financial and real-estate editors as well as financial organizations, explained the holdings of the IOS, and their new acquisitions during the year; the December issues particularly stressed the importance of the newly created Investment Properties International, Ltd., the real-estate development company of IOS. Other issues presented the economic outlook for the company for the new year as well as comparison charts and graphs for the past year (the "figures represent a 29 per cent increase over consolidated earnings for the third quarter of 1968 and a 58 per cent increase over earnings for the first nine months of 1968").

Investors Overseas Services, Ltd. also ventured into a variety of international funds and holdings; Jamaica holdings were the subject of an October press release while earlier that month, a new mutual fund in Australia was announced. Land acquisition in Louisville, Kentucky, was the subject of the December releases. In addition to these diverse holdings, the literature on the IOS never failed to spotlight what it considered the advantages of becoming part of or learning more about the company as an entire entity.

TIBET

The Office of Tibet

Tibetan Review

Besides regular news coverage of current situations in Tibet, the Tibetan Review also printed reports on the activities of the free Tibetans living in exile. As stated by the editors, "above all TIBETAN REVIEW seeks to provide a forum for a free and frank discussion of the question of Tibet and to present to the world the aspirations and just demands of the Tibetan people."

Monthly articles in the Review were sure to include the subjects of Red China and a current report on and statements by the Dalai Lama. Commenting on Chinese Communist tyranny and oppression, the Tibetan Review sympathized with India who was the unfortunate subject of all kinds of nefarious anti-India activities by the Chinese. Further denunciation of the Chinese Communists included a stirring plea for Tibetans to remember "their responsibility to their own culture and civilization." Continuing, "as for China, her 'responsibility' is to quit Tibet. In another sense China is of course 'responsible'--responsible in the sense that she is fully guilty of the crimes against the Tibetan people."

Statements of the Dalai Lama, especially in retaliation to comments made by the Chinese Communist press, were reprinted by the Tibetan Review. Concluding a statement issued on the 10th anniversary of the Tibetan National Uprising in Lhasa, the Dalai Lama said that "it would serve the Chinese well to remember that nowhere in the annals of history has oppression succeeded in altering mankind's eternal desire to live in freedom; freedom to follow his own stream of thought and freedom to act in a way he considers most beneficial to the welfare of all." This same theme was continued in the Dalai Lama's birthday message given in July of 1969; the message of the celebrations was universal in wishing and praying that His Holiness would soon lead the Tibetan people back into freedom and independence.

The Industrial Development Corporation of Trinidad and Tobago announced current developments and investments in the country; new appointments in the Corporation were also announced. Articles written by persons in development positions within the country were reprinted by the Newsletter in order to present policies that had been formulated by the government or by important industrial concerns.

The Corporation also distributed reprints of articles appearing in other publications which related to the industrial development of Trinidad and Tobago; one such article on investment opportunities in Trinidad and Tobago was reprinted in a booklet from the New Commonwealth Trade and Commerce magazine. Still another booklet recorded the cultural participation of Trinidad and Tobago in the Expo '67 displays in Montreal, Canada; this booklet, like the many others issued by the Corporation, presented the accomplishments of the country optimistically with special emphasis on the planning for the future.

The major topic of all items of Soviet political propaganda during 1969 was V.I. Lenin and the preparations undertaken during the year to celebrate 1970 as the centenary of his birth. One aspect of these preparations was a contest conducted during the last three months of the year during which time Moscow News printed quiz questions associated with Lenin's life and work. Three first prizes, free one week vacations in the Soviet Union, were to be awarded as well as souvenir badges carrying Lenin's portrait to each participant in the quiz contest. To assist in this contest, as well as to write of Lenin's philosophies, Moscow News printed at least three to four major articles on Lenin in each issue published; claiming that "Leninism has become the banner of peoples' struggle for the renovation of the world" and his ideas responsible for the "indomitable social progress of mankind," these articles all reached the conclusion that "Lenin's name and cause will live forever."

Moscow News, published weekly, was strongly influenced in article selection by current news events. In a special supplement to a December issue of the paper, a "Statement on the Situation in the Middle East" was published. Concluding that Israel is organizing armed provocations against the Arab nations, this statement urged

"all nations, all peace-loving states, to give effective support to the Arabs in their just struggle for the withdrawal of the Israeli troops from the occupied Arab territories, for freedom and independence, and against the intrigues of the imperialist forces in the Middle East, and for a just settlement of the Middle East crisis, in the interests of establishing a durable peace in that region, in the interests of peace in the entire world."

In another 1969 news related topic, Moscow News reported that the Soviet people congratulated "the American space specialists from the bottom of their hearts on the new success in the conquest of outer space." Specifically, Moscow News praised Armstrong, Aldrin, and Collins (Apollo 11) for their "courage and presence of mind" on the initial moon flight and Conrad, Gordon, and Bean (Apollo 12) for the "profoundness of the scientific work done and the engineering know-how" of the astronauts.

Other topics appearing in Moscow News included the centenary of the birth of Mahatma Gandhi whom the publication praised as a "symbol of the struggle waged by the people of India for national liberation and renaissance"; the Soviet proposals at the 24th Session of the United Nations General Assembly which showed a "new and vivid expression of the principled policy of peace pursued by the Soviet Union, and its firm and consistent course in the struggle for the strengthening of the universal peace and security of the nations"; and the Soviet Union's friendship with neighboring countries, especially the "genuinely friendly and mutually beneficial relations between Finland and the U.S.S.R."

Two magazines disseminated regularly by Eastern News Distributors were Sputnik and Soviet Film, both monthly publications. Sputnik is a small digest publishing articles in fields of history, science, space, human interest, and the arts. Concerned with the achievements of the Soviet peoples in these fields, Sputnik also published a book section which often included samples of current fiction, but more frequently contained personal memoirs of famous Soviet heroes.

Soviet Film is a monthly review of the Soviet film industry and its current achievements; over half of each issue in 1969 of this magazine was devoted to pictures taken from recent films as well as press photographs of famous Soviet film stars. The subject matter of these films ranged from historical and documentary films such as "The Shores of Injustice" about the Vitus Bering expedition to the shores of Kamchatka to the funny children's films fully utilizing animals, circus people, and animated cartoons.

A considerable number of the films dealt with political topics which had foundations in both fiction and history. A new Soviet documentary film dealing with a news related political topic in 1969 was "Comrade Berlin" which premiered on the 24th anniversary of the defeat of the German Nazis.

Other Soviet publications were disseminated by subscription only and did not have a general circulation in the United States. These subscriptions included those to the following magazines:

Soviet Military Review
New Time
International Affairs
Soviet Union
Soviet Women
Moscow News
Twentieth Century

Other subscriptions disseminated in the United States included several Russian language periodicals, booklets, and books.

YUGOSLAVIA

Yugoslav Information Center	Yugoslav Facts and Views	2100
	Yugoslav NEWS Bulletin	2100

Each issue of Yugoslav Facts and Views was devoted to a single subject or occurrence; the last issues were directed to ushering in the new year with the planned fairs, films, and observances duly noted. Of special importance during the year was Yugoslavia's participation in world conferences, world meetings, and world organizations; her role in the peace-making areas, especially disarmament, was the subject of a speech reprinted in November in which the Yugoslav Deputy Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs addressed the United Nations concluding that Yugoslavia is of the opinion that the Committee on Disarmament "should and could intensify its work and that it must begin without delay the consideration of the substantive disarmament measures on its agenda."

The United Nations again received attention in an October issue in which the Deputy Secretary stressed Yugoslavia's hope that the United Nations would continue, as in the past, to act in the "interests of world peace, independence, development, and progress." Foreign Affairs also received attention in a speech by President Tito in May: "in foreign policy, we shall continue to work with all peace-loving countries against the danger of war, for equitable relationships among nations, against interference in internal affairs and for the freedom of every nation."

Outside the realm of international affairs, the Yugoslav Facts and Views discussed national news, relating speeches given in the Federal Assembly as well as a special edition listing the amendments to the Yugoslav Constitution adopted by that Assembly. Business and economic news did not receive much attention; fashion, the fine arts, and sporting events were not included in the publication during the year.

Yugoslav NEWS Bulletin datelined major news events from Yugoslav cities; these events were not only factually covered, but the Yugoslav reaction to the event invariably was included in the article. Visits to the country by foreign dignitaries were included in the Bulletin as well as visits to foreign countries by Yugoslav officials; the articles on the visits by Yugoslavians were usually accompanied by speeches or statements revealing what the accomplishments of the trip were intended to be. Articles on a trip by President Tito to Africa endorsed the trip as being one in which the President would be able to discuss bilateral cooperation in the light of world developments.

Celebrations both within the country and in foreign countries were covered in the Bulletin; the solemn celebration of the Yugoslavian National Holiday (November 29th) was in great contrast to enjoyment of the extensive Dubrovnik Summer Festival in July and August. The summer months also brought expressions of congratulations from President Tito to the Apollo 11 crew for their moon flight: "With awareness of the historic significance and uniqueness of this great event, on behalf of the people of Yugoslavia and on my own behalf, I send the American people and you (Mr. Nixon) personally cordial congratulations upon the magnificent success of science and astronautics in your country." Other Tito-Nixon correspondence included President Tito's message of condolence on President Eisenhower's death, the February exchange of correspondence expressing wishes for the further promotion of relations between the two countries, and the initial yearly congratulations on the January inauguration.

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

Information Office

European Community

European Community, a magazine published jointly in the interests of the Common Market, the Coal and Steel Community, and Euratom, dealt with the current problems and discussions affecting the European community as a whole. Current subjects such as the British entry into the EEC were discussed with the magazine affording the British considerable space to present their proposals for the British entry. The magazine did not however, attempt to favor or reject the proposals; the treaty provisions regarding the acceptance of new members into the European Economic Community (Common Market) were presented with the conclusion being that in the due, procedural way, the subject would be resolved.

Monthly sections of the magazine detailed new publications of the three organizations as well as presenting what was entitled "Community News." A summary of world and European news that would either relate to or have some effect on the functioning of the organizations was presented through short, datelined articles; those items particularly affecting the communities later appeared as special articles in the magazine. Some such items were tax measures taken by individual countries and the overall effect they have on the communities, the establishment of a common commercial policy towards non-member countries, final arrangements for financing the common agricultural policy, and the further co-ordination of economic policies and monetary cooperation between the member nations and the entire trade world.

EUROPEAN FREE TRADE ASSOCIATION

EFTA Information Office

EFTA Reporter
EFTA Bulletin

14,500

The EFTA Reporter confined itself solely to the trade aspects of the Association in 1969 printings; statistics on the trade were reported as well as any favorable prospects for future trade.

Frequent reports on the progress during 1969 appeared in the Reporter; a country by country analysis of this progress appeared in a September issue. An overall summary of the 1969 EFTA trade appeared as a final issue of the year: imports of the EFTA countries were 9.4 per cent higher than the first nine months of 1968 and exports were 15 per cent higher for that same period.

Treaties, agreements, and conferences on increasing the trade between the EFTA countries and the rest of the world were also frequently included in the Reporter. The Nordic Economic Cooperation Organization was the subject of an issue on the economic policy objectives of the countries of Denmark, Norway, Finland, and Sweden; the final conclusions being that on all subjects, except tariffs, there is already complete provisional agreement.

An issue on the history of the Association provided the opportunity for the Reporter to mention some of the accomplishments of the group; the most important among these being the abolition by 1970 of tariffs on manufactures traded between the member countries: the progress EFTA experienced made this objective obtainable by December of 1966.

The EFTA Bulletin did not deal solely with the trade statistics and trade agreements as did the Reporter; the Bulletin contained articles detailing backgrounds and viewpoints on specific trade agreements or proposals. A special section in each Bulletin (EFTA Record) recorded special communiques from the Council of the Association or a record of meetings held by the Council. This Section thus provided an authoritative source for council decisions that could be referred to when reading the Reporter.

Each issue of the Bulletin spotlighted a particular country in articles entitled "_____ (name of country) in the setting of the European Free Trade Association." These articles presented not only the economic history of the particular country involved, but also explained the benefits that country derived from its association with EFTA. Of more particular importance in these articles were the detailed statistics offered as appendices to support the claim that the country in particular has been greatly benefited by its EFTA Association.

WORLD COFFEE INFORMATION CENTER

Samuel Stavisky Associates for	Annual Coffee Statistics	100
World Coffee Information Center	Magazine reprints and press releases	75

Press releases on behalf of the major coffee producers of the world were released infrequently during 1969; each release however specifically directed its contents to a particular occurrence or the publication of further materials on the production of coffee. One release, announcing the distribution of the book, "Annual Coffee Statistics" summarized the conclusions of this 224 page report in just a few short paragraphs:

"Europe is continuing to catch up with the United States in imports of coffee with record purchases in 1968."

"...the statistics show that the total exportable production of green coffee will drop about 10.8 per cent below the 1967/68 total and yet a rise in the production of other forms of coffee will offset this decline."

"...exchange receipts from 1968 coffee shipments represented 1.1 per cent of total world trade calculated at $212.5 billion."

The World Coffee Information Center also reprinted articles from a variety of magazines, newspapers, and government publications relating to the production and trade of coffee. These reprints, distributed in the form of press releases, reported the same conclusions and statistics included in the Annual Report of the world coffee trade.

The principal purpose of Congress in enacting the Foreign Agents Registration Act was to require public disclosure by persons engaging in propaganda activities and other activities for or on behalf of foreign governments, foreign political parties, and other foreign principals, so that the Government and the people of the United States may be informed of the identity of such persons and may appraise their statements and actions in the light of their associations and activities. The emphasis of the Department of Justice in its administration of the statute has been toward the achievement of this purpose. In performing its functions, the Department has continued to rely upon its normal sources of information and upon the investigative efforts of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Registration under the Act does not imply recognition by the United States Government either of the de jure existence or legality of the foreign principal, nor does registration indicate approval by the United States Government of the propaganda material disseminated or of the activities of the registered agent.

Respectfully submitted,

Attorney General
