REPORT OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL
TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES ON THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE
FOREIGN AGENTS REGISTRATION ACT OF 1938, AS AMENDED
FOR THE CALENDAR YEAR 1964

APRIL 1965

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA IN CONGRESS ASSEMBLED:

I have the honor to report on the administration of the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938, as amended, pursuant to Section 11 of that Act which requires the Attorney General from time to time to report to the Congress concerning the administration of the Act, as well as the nature, source and content of political propaganda disseminated or distributed by agents of foreign principals registered under the Act.

It has been the policy of the Department since 1950 to prepare a report each year. This report covers the administration and enforcement of the Foreign Agents Registration Act for the calendar year 1964.

STATISTICAL SUMMARY

One hundred sixty-two new registration statements were filed in 1964, and 103 registrations were terminated, leaving 480 active registrations on file as of December 31, 1964. This represents a marked increase over the 419 active registrations at the close of calendar year 1963.

Appendix I contains an alphabetical list of all persons who were registered with the Department of Justice under the Act during 1964. Appendix II lists all registrations according to the geographical area or nationality field of the foreign principal which were active during the calendar year 1964. Registrations terminated during the year are marked with the symbol (T). Appendix III contains an alphabetical listing of all short-form registrations which were in active status during 1964. There were 869 short-form registration statements filed during the year by individuals as officers, directors, employees, or other persons rendering assistance to the registrant in the interests of the foreign principal.

During 1964, 236 amending statements were filed to correct deficiencies in registration statements already on file. The Registration Section processed and reviewed 743 supplemental registration statements and answered over 3,600 pieces of correspondence from other government agencies, prospective registrants, and the general public.

ENFORCEMENT

Compliance with the Act is ordinarily obtained through normal administrative procedures.

A careful examination of each statement filed generated many requests from the Department for further disclosure from registrants, and as indicated previously this resulted in the filing of more than 200 amended statements. No prosecutive action for willful violations of the Act was required to be undertaken during the year.

The case of Victor Rabinowitz and Leonard Boudin v. The Attorney General of the United States (376 U.S. 605) was decided by the Supreme Court on March 30, 1964. In a unanimous decision, the Court held, through Justice Goldberg, that the petitioners' activity on behalf of the Republic of Cuba and its governmental agencies in legal matters, including litigation involving the mercantile and financial interests of the Republic of Cuba, fell within the registration provisions of the Act and could not be properly deemed exempt under the so-called "commercial" exemption contained in Section 3(d) of the Act. The broad language of this opinion accounts in part for the increased number of registrations received during the year. The decision occasioned considerable inquiries and frequent conferences with representatives of the legal and other professions regarding the compliance with the Act. Furthermore, the proposed legislation authorizes the Attorney General to require a registrant to maintain separate books and records pertaining to his foreign principal thus facilitating an inspection of books and records pursuant to Section 5 of the Act.

NATURE, SOURCE AND CONTENT OF POLITICAL PROPAGANDA

Following is an analysis of the principal trends noted during 1964 in the propaganda material disseminated within the United States in the English language on behalf of the foreign principals and geographical areas listed below. Principal publications are set forth together with the approximate circulation figures per issue.

Arab States

The League of Arab States, which is composed of Algeria, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Syria, Tunisia, United Arab Republic and Yemen, maintains the Arab Information Center (AIC) in New York, with branches located in Washington, Chicago, San Francisco and Dallas. The two principal publications of the AIC are Arab News and Views, a bimonthly sheet (13,500); and Arab World, a monthly magazine (23,000).

The Palestine refugee problem continued to be a matter of prime concern. The AIC claimed that Israel had illegally occupied 30% more land than was granted her by the United Nations; had driven the refugees out of their homeland by force; and was continually violating United Nations resolutions on their repatriation. The refugees, numbering one million, were depicted as living in misery. Publicity was given to the mural in the World's Fair Jordan Pavilion which highlighted the refugee problem. Attention was also directed toward the first Palestine National Congress convened to establish the Palestine Liberation Organization, a government in exile pledged to the liberation of Palestine.

Israel's plan to divert waters of the Jordan River for irrigation was viewed by the Arab Information Center as a violation of international law protecting co-riparian states and a violation of the terms of the armistice. It was alleged that the project would eventually take the bulk of Jordan's present water supply, raise the salinity of the river and severely damage crops in Jordan. Israel's purpose in diverting the waters of the Jordan was believed to be her interest in settling large numbers of people in the Negev region in order to strengthen her position vis-a-vis the Arabs. According to the articles, the Arab League was faced with a choice between war and the initiation of its own diversion project, whereupon it chose the latter.

The Arab Information Center viewed Israel as an aggressive, expansionist power with plans to attack neighboring states. It was stated that Israel is working on nuclear power "and other means of mass destruction" and creating an arms race in the Middle East. The United States was said to be unaware of the true picture, largely because of Zionist propaganda.

A large number of articles featured the progress of the Arab League and of its individual members. Measures for economic cooperation and the signing of a Joint Arab Defense Pact in September were described. Stress was placed on the political and spiritual unity of the "Arab Nation."

The United Arab Republic distributed some material separately through Hamilton Wright Organization, Inc., New York. The publications consisted primarily of intermittent information releases (100), which were predominantly concerned with tourism, but also included releases on the Aswan Dam and its threat to submerge the famous Abu Simbel Temples. The offer of the Kennedy Administration to contribute $12 million toward the $36 million required to save the temples was recalled with the expressed hope that Congress would give its approval to the offer.

Another Arab organization which disseminates propaganda in the United States is the Palestine Arab Delegation, which represents a Lebanon-based group known as the Arab Higher Committee for Palestine. The publications of the Palestine Arab Delegation include intermittent news releases (750) and letters to United States and United Nations officials. The publications dealt with what was termed the conquest of Palestine by Israeli Zionists with the resultant exile of the Palestinian Arabs. It was requested that the United Nations force the Israelis out of Palestine and return the refugees to the homeland.

Various articles disseminated by the Delegation expressed concern that Zionists are exerting undue influence on United States Senators and other officials. It was stated that this small Zionist minority was determining United States policy in the Middle East. Suggestions to give extensive American military aid to Israel were viewed with alarm, with the warning that if such aid were given the Arab States might be forced to reconsider their neutrality.

Australia

The Australian News & Information Bureau of New York distributed the Australian Daily News (550), Australian News Weekly Roundup (1800), and Australian Monthly Finance and Commerce Notes (120).

Prominent among the subjects mentioned in these publications in 1964 was the Malaysian situation. It was stated that the Australian Government supported Malaysia and would not allow Indonesia to crush the Federation even though Australia desired good relations with Indonesia. Various types of Australian aid to Malaysia, including troops, pilots, aircraft and other equipment, were mentioned.

Spokesmen for the Australian Government were quoted in support of the United States effort in Viet-Nam, although they also voiced the opinion that the effort was not prospering. President De Gaulle's suggestions for neutralization of South Viet-Nam were rejected as being impractical to halt subversion.

Regarding Southeast Asia in general, a major long-term threat was seen in what was termed the aggressive attitude of Communist China. Defense of Southeast Asia was regarded as vital to Australia's interests. Many articles described the build-up of Australian military power both within the country and in support of the areas to the north. It was stated that Australia intended to stand beside the United States and Britain in resisting communist aggression in Southeast Asia.

In the area of economic development, it was pointed out that the Gross National Product increased 9.5% in Fiscal Year 1963, and that exports increased 30% while the foreign exchange reserve increased 36% over the previous year. Many articles featured the development of industries such as mining, gas and oil in which American companies are participating.

Considerable attention was devoted to the Australian territory of Papua-New Guinea, describing the first full-scale elections and progress in the areas of education and industrial development.

British Guiana

Prior to the election in December 1964, the Cheddi Jagan Government of Guiana distributed material in the United States through the British Guiana Public Relations and Information Office in New York. Its principal publication was News from British Guiana, an intermittent news release (150).

A predominant theme of the material was opposition to replacement of the Governor and dissolution of the legislature by Great Britain in order to hold new elections in the fall under a system of "proportional representation," which would increase the power of Guianese of African origin. The British move was interpreted as an effort to destroy the East Indian Guianese control over the government. It was asserted that Britain had been pressured into the move by the United States, motivated by fear that British Guiana would become another Cuba and Cheddi Jagan, another Castro.

The publication blamed agents of the CIA and British intelligence for fomenting the sugar workers' strike. Also the United States was alleged to be directing opposition to the government by the Trades Union Council through the Institute for Free Labor. The United States was accused of welcoming the racial strife between the Negro and East Indian communities as an environment in which it might be possible to bring the Negroes to power.

On other issues editorial support was given to the claim of Guiana to jurisdiction over border areas to which Venezuela was also laying claim, and for British and American foreign aid to be granted with no strings attached.

The Peoples National Congress (PENACO), the primary opposition (anti-Jagan) party, disseminated its material through the PENACO Information Service, New York. Its main publication was New Nation, a weekly newspaper (250).

New Nation's main theme was opposition to the Jagan government. The government, controlled by the Peoples Progressive Party, was accused of corruption, racial discrimination, pro-communism, and all forms of incompetence, while PENACO was portrayed as multi-racial, democratic and anti-communist. Strong favor was expressed for the system of proportional representation, by which it was hoped that PENACO would win control of the Government.

China - (People's Republic of)

There were several registered organizations within the United States in 1964 distributing publications emanating from the People's Republic of China, often referred to as Communist China. One of these, Imported Publications and Products of New York, terminated its contract in February, 1964. Henry H. Noyes (China Books and Periodicals) of San Francisco was engaged in selling magazines primarily, and Philip Frankfeld (New Era Books) of New York sold books and pamphlets predominantly. Among the major publications sold or distributed were Peking Review, a weekly news magazine (350); China Pictorial (400); China Reconstructs (400), a monthly magazine; Evergreen, a bimonthly youth magazine (50); Women of China (40) and China's Sports (40), quarterly magazines, and a number of small books and pamphlets.

By far the greatest number of articles dealt with China's role as a leader of the new emerging forces, particularly in Africa.

Considerable coverage was given Chou En-Lai's trip to Africa as the symbol of the growing revolutionary movement to overthrow colonialism and neocolonialism. Much attention was given to the "Liberation movement" of the Congo rebels, and to the "successful revolution" in Tanzania.

The publications also focused attention on Asia, with particular emphasis on Indonesia, Pakistan and Ceylon. Indonesia's opposition to Malaysia was supported. Pakistan's friendship and cooperation with China were contrasted with the growing hostility and Western alignment of India. Ceylon was praised for its expropriation of Western capital. Virtually every neutralist or newly independent nation was featured in at least one article, as well as leftist or revolutionary groups in such countries as Japan, Indonesia, New Zealand, Australia, Laos, Thailand, Angola, South Africa, Venezuela and Peru.

Another subject treated widely was the Sino-Soviet dispute. China, it was said, possessed the true Marxist-Leninist line of revolutionary change. The Soviet Union was charged with splitting the world Communist movement by insisting on a meeting of Communist Parties to deal with the dispute. The Soviets (particularly Khrushchev) were accused of betraying East Germany in a bid for improved relations with Bonn, and of compromising Communist unity by engaging in disarmament talks with the United States. The Communist Parties of Albania, Indonesia and Japan as well as lesser Parties in other countries were quoted extensively on the side of China, while the Yugoslav Communist Party was strongly denounced as "revisionist" (i.e., adhering to Moscow rather than Peking). Khrushchev's fall was hailed as a victory over revisionism.

Condemnation of alleged United States imperialism was also a strong theme in the publications of the People's Republic of China. The United States was viewed as the principal enemy of Mainland China because of the United States' leadership in "world reaction to the forces of progress and democracy." Many articles dealt with South Viet-Nam, particularly after the Tonkin Gulf incidents, and the United States was warned that aggression against North Viet-Nam would constitute aggression against China. The war in Viet-Nam was described as a losing effort to extend United States colonial domination.

Articles in the publications criticized the United States' activities in Laos; deplored the United States' bases in Japan; accused the United States of aggression in the Congo, Panama, Cuba and India; and charged the United States with encouraging the Brazilian Government to persecute its Chinese minority. The United States was viewed as weakening domestically because of clashes between the capitalists and uprisings of progressive forces such as the Negroes. In foreign affairs the United States was said to be losing its dominance over Western Europe and Latin America, with the NATO, CENTO and SEATO alliances crumbling.

Other articles pictured China as making rapid domestic progress toward socialism and industrialization, with emphasis on agriculture as the base of the economy. Virtual self-sufficiency in petroleum was claimed. Most of the loans by the Soviet Union were said to have been paid back, and the claim was made that the budget was balanced with a small surplus in 1963.

China (Republic of)

Material for the Republic of China was disseminated in the United States by Chinese News Service, New York. The principal publications were News from China, a daily sheet (55); Free China Weekly, a newspaper (4,500); and Background on China (55) and Features from China (55), intermittent feature sheets.

Most frequent were articles describing the aggressiveness of the Peking regime. The Mainland Chinese were said to be the culprits behind the war in Viet-Nam and the threat to Laos. United States policy was described as generally weak and defensive, and more vigorous action against North Viet-Nam was recommended. Suggestions for a negotiated solution to the war were termed disastrous appeasement.

Peking was accused of frequent intervention in Africa, with the intention of taking over the continent. It was also charged that Peking inspired the Indonesian action against Malaysia. The hope was expressed that the Western countries would note Peking's ambitions and take united action to stop Peking. The articles stressed the grave threat to the world which that regime poses now that it has an atomic device.

On the subject of the Sino-Soviet dispute, it was argued that since Moscow and Peking were still pursuing the "same goal," it would be unwise for the West to take comfort. It was further pointed out that the dispute might be healed in the future, with grave consequences for the rest of the world.

Another theme of the material was aid by Taiwan to underdeveloped countries. Many articles described technical aid to Africa, Latin America, Viet-Nam, Laos and other Asian countries. Others dealt with foreign delegations that came to Taiwan primarily to study agricultural techniques.

European Community (Belgium, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Luxembourg and The Netherlands)

Largest of the offices representing the Community in the United States is the European Community Information Office in Washington, D. C. A branch office was opened in New York in 1964. There were three publications: European Community, a monthly news magazine (32,000); Labor in the European Community, a bimonthly magazine (1,000) and Common Market Farm Report, a biweekly news sheet (1,000).

Most articles dealt with the growth of the Community and its three constituent organizations: the European Economic Community, the European Coal and Steel Community and Euratom. According to the publications, Community exports and imports were 11% higher in 1963 than in the corresponding three quarters of 1962, and the gross national product increased 30% in six years compared to 22% for the United States. Plans were described for the creation of a customs union within the Community in a few years.

Second in emphasis in the material was the Kennedy Round of General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) negotiations. Spokesmen for the Community were quoted as supporting an "open" policy in trading with other countries rather than isolating the Community by tariff barriers. It was contended, however, that since the average U. S. tariff was considerably higher than that of the Community, some modification should be made of the suggested across-the-board 50% tariff cut.

Another subject was European political unity. Most of the foreign ministers of the EEC were quoted as favoring European political integration, including the entry of Britain in the Community. President De Gaulle was said to oppose political unity as premature for the present, saying that it would result in subordination of Europe to the United States. A plan agreed upon by the EEC ministers was described, by which a single cabinet for the members would be created by 1965, and EEC, ECSC and Euratom would be fused by 1967.

European Free Trade Association (Austria, Denmark, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom, Associate: Finland)

Representing the European Free Trade Association in the United States is the EFTA Information Office in the U. S. A., Washington, D. C. Its two principal publications were the biweekly

EFTA Reporter (10,000) and the monthly EFTA Bulletin (1,800), both magazines.

A recurrent theme in 1964 was the growth of EFTA. The rejection of Britain's bid to join the Common Market was seen as a spur to EFTA's development. It was expected that industrial tariffs within EFTA would be eliminated by 1967. Intra-EFTA trade during Fiscal Year 1963 was quoted as up 11% over 1962. Further moves toward unity in EFTA were mentioned, including the suggestion to set up permanent controlling institutions.

Articles in the publications reflected favorable sentiment toward European unity, with representatives of most EFTA countries expressing a favorable attitude. Concern was expressed about what was termed the growing rivalry between EFTA and the EEC which was allegedly caused by the older European concepts of sovereignty. France was viewed as the greatest current obstacle to the growth of European unity, but the present split in Europe generally was viewed as only temporary.

Ghana

The Ghana Information Services, New York, distributed the following publications: Ghana Today, a weekly news pamphlet (1,900); and Ghana Reconstructs, a bimonthly pictorial magazine.

Two recurring topics were anticolonialism and antiracialism. The African scene was presented as a dialectical struggle between the forces of freedom and the forces of imperialism and white supremacy. South Africa and the Portuguese territories of Angola and Mozambique were criticized severely for their racial and colonial stands.

Belgium and her NATO allies were charged with attempting to recapture control over the Congo in order to gain military control of Africa. Congolese Premier Tshombe was described as a puppet of Union Miniere and Ghana called for the withdrawal of NATO forces from the Congo and the creation of an all-African United Nations Congo contingent. These publications opposed Western influence in Africa, which was equated with the perpetuation of white supremacy.

Premier Chou En-Lai's visit to Ghana in January 1964 was given broad coverage with particular note made of the similar views expressed by both Communist China and Ghana on colonialism and disarmament. The two countries agreed that an Afro-Asian/Latin American/Peoples Anti-imperialism Conference should be held. Ghana supported Communist China's right to be seated in the United Nations, and Chou En-Lai was quoted in favor of increased Afro-Asian representation in the United Nations.

With regard to the problems of Africa, various articles pointed to the need for an African High Command to settle military disputes and a Pan-African Union to unite Africa against imperialism. President Nkrumah was described as best qualified to speak for Africa.

Ghana was characterized as the vanguard of the African movement for political and economic development. Ghana was said to be making continual and phenomenal political and economic progress due to what was termed the wise and democratic leadership of President Nkrumah.

Great Britain

The British Information Services, New York continued to be the prime source of material relating to Great Britain distributed in the United States. Its principal publications were Today's British Papers, a daily sheet (700); British Weeklies, a weekly news sheet (600); and information sheets, pamphlets and other publications.

Today's British Papers and British Weeklies are composed of reprints of articles and wide quotations on current affairs from a range of British newspapers. In the information sheets, pamphlets and other publications, the greatest number of articles featured the economic and political progress and problems of the Commonwealth countries. Britain's aid and multilateral cooperation among the members of the Commonwealth in the fields of trade, education, health and other areas were described. Britain's participation in the Colombo Plan and in the Volunteer Societies, which are similar to the Peace Corps, were cited as examples of this cooperation.

British publications stressed Britain's determination to protect Malaysia from Indonesia and to support the Aden-South Arabia federation in the face of attacks by Yemeni Republicans. The hope was expressed that Southern Rhodesia would plan a more representative form of government before being given independence. The Commonwealth as a whole was looked upon as a major political, economic and racial link between the developed and underdeveloped countries.

With respect to relations with Europe, several articles emphasized Britain's strong and continuing support of EFTA, and approval of the progressive reductions of tariffs within it. The surcharge placed on imports to Britain was termed the only alternative to aggravation of the financial crisis; and it was hoped that the need for this surcharge would soon pass. Hope was held out that Britain would eventually join a united Europe.

Regarding the cold war, the United States was described as Britain's prime ally in the defense and perpetuation of Western democratic values in the world. An Atlantic Nuclear Force was proposed as a means of strengthening NATO and allowing greater participation by the European allies. Britain also proposed an Atlantic alliance in which the United States would be an equal partner with Europe.

Some articles supported United States disarmament proposals while others opposed China's request for a conference to ban nuclear weapons. The opinion was expressed that the Soviet Union was becoming more reasonable because of its fear of nuclear war. The United Nations was described as the only hope for world peace and progress and various articles supported the idea of forming the United Nations peace force.

India

The Information Service of the Indian Embassy disseminated two regular publications: Indiagram, a daily news sheet (600) and India News, a weekly paper (18,000).

The principal theme was India's relations with Pakistan. Much space was devoted to the communal rioting against non-Muslims in Pakistan and Kashmir following the theft of the hair from Mohammed's beard. The Pakistani Government was accused of inciting the riots in order to create pressure on India and to jeopardize the Indian position in Kashmir. Pakistan was said to be hindering the flight of thousands of refugees to India, and accepting India's pleas for a high-level conference to end the riots only after long delay.

Pakistan was also accused in the publications of a large number of shooting and intrusion incidents on the east and west borders of India. India viewed the firing on the Kashmir border as an attempt by Pakistan to create a crisis atmosphere while the United Nations Security Council was discussing Kashmir. Indian spokesmen contended there was no need for the United Nations debate because Kashmir was an integral part of the Indian Union and thus constituted a matter of Indian internal affairs. Furthermore, it was believed that the debate should not be held during the period of tension and rioting. Many articles, particularly after the death of Nehru, expressed India's desire to end the disputes and achieve friendship with Pakistan.

Communist China was described as an aggressive and expansionist power in the light of the explosion of the nuclear device and the boasts which accompanied it. India was said to be capable of making a nuclear bomb but did not desire to do so. Many articles described India's pleas for measures to stop the building and explosion of nuclear bombs. China's capabilities were cited as the main reason why India did not want the war in Viet-Nam to escalate. Many articles described the building of India's defenses with the aid of Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union.

India's economic progress in many areas was discussed and credit was given to the aid from the United States and international organizations such as the World Bank. Many articles concerned the improving climate for foreign investment, particularly in such industries as petroleum and chemicals.

Indonesia

Two periodicals were distributed by the Embassy of Indonesia in 1964: News Release, a weekly sheet (250); and Report on Indonesia, a bimonthly magazine (1700). Predominant among the topics was Malaysia, which Indonesia vowed to "annihilate" because of its status as a "mechanism of British colonialism". Indonesia and its leader Sukarno were described as guiding forces in the struggle between the New Emerging Forces, representing freedom and democracy, and the Old Established Forces in the world, representing colonialism and imperialism.

Israel

Two registrants distributed the bulk of Israeli publicity in the United States. One, the Jewish Agency - American Section, Inc., New York, distributed The Israel Digest, a biweekly news pamphlet (8,500), press releases and other material. Another office, Israel Information Services, New York, distributed News from Israel, a biweekly sheet (10,000); Land of the Bible Newsletter, a monthly pamphlet (16,000); and other publications.

Foremost among the issues treated in these publications was Israel's relations with the Arab countries. Israel viewed its plan to divert water from the Jordan River as legal and constructive, arguing that Jordan, Syria and Lebanon had agreed with Israel in 1953 to share the water under the Johnston Plan, but the Arab League had vetoed the agreement in 1955. It was asserted that Israel would take no more water than had been allotted to her under the Plan.

The Arab moves to counteract the diversion were termed political rather than economic.

President Nasser of the United Arab Republic was charged with planning a future attack on Israel, because Israel presented a geographic and military barrier to his plans of expansion. The aid given by German scientists to Egypt was deplored and Israel requested that the Bonn Government recall the scientists. United States aid to Nasser was criticized, but President Johnson's statement to Premier Eshkol that the United States "supports the security of Israel and its neighbors" was viewed as reassuring. Israel expressed the desire to live in peace with the Arabs but claimed it was necessary to build up military strength to deter Nasser.

Israel's scientific and economic progress also received broad coverage. Many articles described programs of technical aid to underdeveloped countries, citing Africa in particular. Israeli efforts to create trade outlets were discussed, particularly the negotiation of a trade agreement and a probable future status of association with the European Common Market. Israel's progress in water desalinization, nuclear research and other technical fields was recounted. Interest was expressed in the upcoming United States-Israel project in nuclear desalinization.

Anti-Semitism outside of Israel was believed to be on the rise, especially in Latin America and the Soviet Union. In particular, the Soviet treatment of Jews was stated to be straining Soviet-Israeli relations and suggestions were made that the problem be brought to the attention of the United States Government.

Japan

The United States-Japan Trade Council, Washington, D. C., an association of American firms of which the Japan Trade Promotion Office is a member, distributes intermittent news releases (300) and pamphlets on various matters affecting the interests of the Council.

In connection with Japanese exports, the publications were primarily concerned with United States non-tariff trade barriers affecting Japanese products, such as buy-American policies, country-of-origin marking, antidumping laws and some Customs practices. Buy-American policies were seen as detrimental to American interests as well as Japanese interests.

Many articles described the increasing volume of United States exports to Japan emphasizing the $3 billion balance of trade in merchandise in favor of the United States over the last decade. It was asserted that Japan would need more access to United States markets in order to continue importing on a large scale from the United States. Among the retarding factors in trade was said to be the 19.7% average United States tariff on Japanese goods as compared to a 12.1% Japanese tariff on American goods. Also, the proposed interest equalization tax on foreign borrowing was seen as a threat to Japanese efforts to finance its purchases of United States goods through the American capital market. Japan's continual battle to keep exports up with imports in spite of a high rate of industrial growth was described. It was stated that unless Japan could find sufficient markets in the West, she would be forced to turn to other areas including Peking.

Korea

The Embassy of Korea distributed Korea Report, a monthly magazine (33,000). Its primary concern in 1964 was the problems of economic and political progress in Korea and the efforts of the Chung Hee Park regime to solve them. A second major topic was the desire for unification with North Korea, rejecting neutralism as a basis. Friendship and alliance with the United States was expressed with the hope that economic aid would be continued. The hope was also expressed that Korea and Japan would be able to establish diplomatic relations.

Pakistan

The Embassy of Pakistan distributed Pakistan Affairs, a biweekly news pamphlet (10,000), and Interim Report Series: Pakistan's Second Five Year Plan 1960-65, a report sheet on economic developments (10,000). Kashmir was the major subject of discussion, with charges that India has violated the United Nations resolutions in favor of a plebiscite which would decide whether Pakistan or India should have jurisdiction over the territory. Fear was expressed that the Indian arms buildup would be used in the future to threaten Pakistan. It was stated that Pakistan could not agree with the American and British views that the SEATO alliance is only designed for defense against communists.

Pan American Coffee Bureau (Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama and Venezuela)

Two offices disseminated literature for the Coffee Bureau. The Pan American Coffee Bureau, New York, printed an intermittent magazine, Coffee and the U.S. Consumer (500). The World Coffee Information Center (Samuel E. Stavisky & Associates, Inc.), Washington, D. C., printed a monthly magazine, The Coffee Agreement and Coffee Prices: Questions and Answers (500), and intermittent informational releases.

United States participation in the International Coffee Agreement (ICA) was the dominant subject of the material. The hope was expressed that Congress would pass legislation to fulfill ICA obligations of implementing coffee import provisions. Failure of the legislation was seen as tantamount to the destruction of ICA.

The need for stabilization of coffee prices was stressed as vital to the economic development of many Latin American countries, and more important than aid under the Alliance for Progress. It was pointed out that during the period 1957-63, coffee prices declined by 40% while prices of United States exports to Latin America rose four percent. It was suggested that this situation would damage both areas economically, as witnessed by the 35% decline of American exports to fifteen coffee producing countries during 1957-62.

Portugal

Four organizations distributed the bulk of Portuguese literature in the United States in 1964. Two of them, Selvage and Lee, Inc., Washington, and its affiliate, Portuguese-American Committee on Foreign Affairs, Boston, terminated their activities on behalf of Portugal on April 30, 1964. Selvage and Lee was replaced as agent of the Overseas Companies of Portugal by Downs and Roosevelt, Inc., New York, which disseminated Africa: News and Opinion, a pamphlet (10,000) published at irregular intervals, reprints of newspaper articles and other pamphlets. Casa de Portugal, New York, continued to distribute various pamphlets for the Portuguese Government, including the monthly Portugal: An Informative Review (100).

A prominent theme in the material was Portugal's concern for its African territories of Angola, Mozambique and Guinea. Portuguese Africa was described as an island of racial and economic progress and stability in a continent of chaos. Communists and revolutionary Africans were accused of joining forces for the purpose of driving Western influence out of Africa and substituting Communist-controlled black rule.

Portugal was depicted as a Christian, anti-communist country bent on completion of its program of welfare and racial integration in Angola and Mozambique. It was claimed that unlike the rest of Africa, the Portuguese territories are devoid of racial hatred. The rebellions within these territories were said to have been effectively thwarted, with the native populations remaining friendly toward Portugal.

Regarding United States-Portugal relations, the view was expressed that American foreign policy toward Portuguese Africa was influenced by over-zealousness for anti-colonialism. The United States was also criticized for its policy in the United Nations, which was described as opposing Portuguese administration in Africa while allegedly ignoring the rebellions in Portuguese territories. It was charged that the United States was aiding both the Congo and Algeria, which in turn were working against Portugal. The United States was reminded that it should not forget allies like Portugal with its valuable contribution of bases in the Azores.

Propaganda opposing Portugal is disseminated by two offices in New York: the Angola Office and Joseph Massinga. The former distributes various pamphlets accusing the Portuguese of atrocities against Angolans and requests funds to support the Angola National Liberation Front, Leopoldville, headed by Holden Roberto. The second, Joseph Massinga, distributes pamphlets opposing Portuguese rule in Mozambique and requests support for Frelimo, a liberation movement headed by Eduardo Mondlane, with headquarters in Dar-es-Salaam, Tanganyika.

South Africa

The bulk of propaganda regarding South Africa is distributed by the Information Service of South Africa in New York. Among its main publications are South African Summary, a weekly news sheet (5,100); South African Scope, a monthly news magazine (13,000); South African Panorama, a monthly pictorial magazine (1050); Business Report, a weekly news sheet on economic matters (2,500), and a number of intermittent pamphlets.

The defense of South Africa's "apartheid" policy was the subject most frequently stressed in the publications. The central thesis was that apartheid was not discrimination against blacks by whites; rather, it was the separate progress and development of national and ethnic groups based on their desires for self-determination. Many articles and pamphlets described the political and economic progress of the separate communities of non-white peoples, contrasting it with the turmoil and racial tension in the rest of Africa.

In broad perspective, South Africa was pictured as a bulwark of stability and anti-communism in an unstable and leftist-leaning Africa. South Africa was described as a Western country. It considered itself strategically valuable to the West because of the growing jeopardy of Western influence and control in the Middle East. Apartheid was presented as the only solution to the problem of African nationalism and as the keystone to South Africa's position.

The economic progress of South Africa was also described. Many articles featured the growth of industries and the development of scientific innovations. South Africa was pictured as economically stable and prosperous. Opportunities for American investment in such areas as mining and oil exploration were advertised.

Another theme of the material was the desire of South Africa to maintain its control over the mandate territory of South West Africa in the face of a United Nations decision which might change the status of that territory. The articles stated that South West Africa was not economically self-sufficient and that South Africa was aiding in its economic and political development. The new African countries were said to be hoping for the overthrow of South West Africa, and the Soviet Union was accused of landing agents to attempt subversion.

Spain

The Embassy of Spain distributes a monthly magazine, Spanish Newsletter (12,000). 1964 topics included Spain's economic growth, featuring domestic reforms and efforts to enter the common market. Spain was termed a politically stable, progressive, Christian and anti-communist nation. Cultural, economic, military and other ties between Spain and the United States were highlighted.

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Six registered organizations disseminated printed material emanating from the Soviet Union in 1964. Four Continent Book Corporation, New York and Imported Publications & Products, New York, handled such material as Moscow News, a weekly newspaper (30); New Times, a weekly news magazine (35); International Affairs, a monthly journal (55); Soviet Union (40); and Soviet Woman (10); monthly pictorial magazines, as well as a number of books, pamphlets and non-English publications.

Cross World Books and Periodicals, Chicago, sells books published in the Soviet Union as does Philip Frankfeld, doing business as New Era Books, New York. Crosscurrents Press, New York, publishes the weekly pamphlet Soviet Documents (3,000) for the Soviet Embassy and United Nations Mission, which in turn distributed it. Eastern News Distributors, New York, contracted beginning October, 1964 to sell Moscow News (12,500).

The greatest number of articles featured Soviet advances in various fields, particularly industry. The gross national product increase for 1963 was placed at 5%, with a 39% total increase in the last five years. Domestically and internationally, the forces of progress and Communism were said to be advancing under the leadership of the Soviet Union, while capitalist forces were said to be crumbling.

Peace, especially the avoidance of World War III, was stressed by spokesmen for the Soviet government. Also emphasized were the Soviet disarmament proposals, which called for cessation of weapons production and abolition of foreign bases prior to any inspection. Similar coverage was given Khrushchev's proposal for a world agreement renouncing the use of force in boundary disputes.

NATO was viewed as weakening and developing into a United States-Bonn alliance. Opinion was expressed that the United States was still ruled by imperialistic circles who favor war, but the forces of peace were believed to be gaining in influence. There was some mention of the necessity for the United States and the Soviet Union to "work together for peace".

On the subject of anticolonialism, foremost attention was given to the struggle in Africa, where in spite of the emergence of "progressive" forces much neo-colonialism was said to exist. The NATO Committee for African Affairs and Western operations in the Congo were cited as cases in point. NATO was also frequently charged with intervention in the Cyprus crisis. The United States was accused of colonial adventures in Viet-Nam, Latin America, Africa and other areas. In contrast, the Soviet Union was pictured as the true friend of the developing countries, as evidenced by its contribution to the building of the Aswan Dam.

West Germany was described as an arms factory, rapidly building with the thought of dominating Europe and avenging its losses of World War II. Behind this policy allegedly were numbers of Nazis, Neo-Nazis and German expatriates from Eastern countries. A large number of articles featured certain aspects of World War II, with particular emphasis on Nazi aggression and Soviet victory. West Germany was criticized for what was termed its soft treatment of war criminals.

Several articles were devoted to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development. Opposition to all barriers to trade and economic development was expressed. The West, and particularly the United States, was criticized for its practices of high tariffs and restricted credits which were described as "colonialist" in nature. The Soviet Union appealed for the elimination of economic barriers between the West and the socialist and underdeveloped nations.

Yugoslavia

The Yugoslav Information Center of New York distributes the bulk of material emanating from Yugoslavia. Its principal publications are Yugoslav News Bulletin, an intermittent news sheet (900) and Yugoslav Life (530), a monthly newspaper.

A prominent subject was the position of Yugoslavia as a leader of non-aligned nations. The Cairo Conference of neutralist nations, the successor to the 1961 Belgrade Conference, received considerable attention. A large number of articles also dealt with meetings between Yugoslav officials and leaders of neutralist and European powers.

The United Nations Conference on Trade and Development was highly publicized, with repeated emphasis on Yugoslavia's call for multilateral as opposed to bilateral aid, long term credits, aid for the diversification of production, and the lowering of trade barriers. Yugoslavia and the neutralist countries in general were described as a vital third force between the large power blocs, furthering the causes of peace, economic development and anticolonialism.

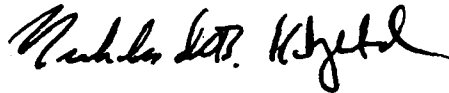

Yugoslavia was described as making great political and economic progress. Many articles claimed that conditions within the Communist Party and the country as a whole were liberalizing, with more democratic conditions for the average working man. It was claimed that the standard of living in Yugoslavia was steadily rising and that industrial production was up 16% over 1963.

In other articles, the desire for the payment of German war reparations to Yugoslavia was emphasized with the hope that the United States would aid in influencing West Germany to pay. The publications also gave credit to United States contributions to Skopje after the earthquake disaster.

The principal purpose of Congress in enacting the Foreign Agents Registration was to require public disclosure by persons engaging in propaganda activities and other activities for or on behalf of foreign governments, foreign political parties and other foreign principals, so that the Government and the people of the United States may be informed of the identity of such persons and may appraise their statements and actions in the light of their associations and activities. The emphasis of the Department of Justice in its administration of the statute has been toward the achievement of this purpose. In performing its functions, the Department has continued to rely upon its normal sources of information and upon the investigative efforts of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Registration under the Act does not imply recognition by the United States Government either of the de jure existence or legality of the foreign principal nor does registration indicate approval by the United States Government of the propaganda material disseminated by the registered agent.

Respectfully submitted,
