REPORT OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES ON THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE FOREIGN AGENTS REGISTRATION ACT OF 1938, AS AMENDED

OCTOBER 1963

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA IN CONGRESS ASSEMBLED:

I have the honor to report on the administration of the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938, as amended, pursuant to Section 11 of that Act, which requires the Attorney General from time to time to report to the Congress concerning the administration of the Act, as well as the nature, source and content of political propaganda disseminated or distributed by agents of foreign principals registered under the terms of the statute.

In the light of the increasing interest of Members of Congress, various departments and agencies of the Executive Branch, the press and the public in the identity and activity of persons and organizations acting within the United States as agents of foreign interests and foreign governments, it has been the policy of the Department since 1950 to prepare an annual report on the administration and enforcement of the Act. This report is for the calendar year 1962, and is in supplement to the report submitted for the calendar year 1961.

STATISTICAL SUMMARY

During 1962, a total of 81 registration statements were filed and 55 terminated, leaving 419 active registrations on file as of December 31, 1962. The latter figure compares with 393 active registrations on file as of December 31, 1961.

Appendix II contains an alphabetical list of registrants who filed statements during 1962, together with the name of the foreign principal and a brief description of the nature of the agency relationship, while Appendix I contains a list of these statements according to registration number. Appendix III lists all registrants who were in an active status as of December 31, 1962, catalogued according to geographical area or nationality field with which their foreign principal is identified.

When a registration statement is filed by a partnership, corporation, association, organization or other combination of individuals, each partner, officer, director, or other person rendering assistance to the registrant on behalf of or in the interest of the foreign principal is required to file a short-form registration statement. A total of 429 short-form registration statements were filed during 1962, and are set forth in alphabetical order in Appendix IV. The identity of the registrant in support of whose statement the short-form registration statement was filed may be ascertained by consulting Appendix I in correlation with the registration number.

As in previous years, the largest number of new registration statements were filed by persons or organizations engaging in publicity, public relations, advertising or allied activities. In addition, a number of registration statements were filed by persons engaged in lobbying activities. Classification of statements according to the principal function reported will be found in Appendix V.

LEGISLATION

On July 6, 1962, the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations favorably reported an original Resolution (S. Res. 362) which authorized the Committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, "to conduct a full and complete study of the activities of all nondiplomatic representatives of foreign governments, and the extent to which such representatives attempt to influence the policies of the United States and affect the national interest."

The information which formed the basis for the preliminary study prepared by the staff of the Committee was obtained from the Registration Section, which Section is and continues to be a primary source of information for this investigation. As a result of this investigation a number of proposals for amending the Act have been under consideration and it is anticipated that the Department's legislative program, to be submitted at a later date, will reflect recommended amendments designed to facilitate the administration and enforcement of the Act.

ENFORCEMENT

Ordinarily, compliance with the Act is achieved through normal administrative procedures. In a few instances, however, the Department has been obliged to resort to prosecutive action to properly implement the Act.

On May 28, 1962, the time set for his trial, defendant William J. Shergalis entered a plea of guilty to an indictment returned in 1960, charging him with failure to register under the Foreign Agents Registration Act as an agent of the Cuban Government. It was alleged that Shergalis, who made a flight to Cuba on March 21, 1960, purportedly to pick up a former official of the Batista regime, planned and took part in this flight under the direction of officials of the Cuban Government. He was sentenced on July 6, 1962, in the Southern District of Florida, to serve a 5-year term for violation of the Act.

An investigation by this Department during 1962 into the activities of Igor Cassini, syndicated New York society columnist, and R. Paul Englander, a New York attorney, as possible agents of the Dominican Government revealed sufficient evidence to bring this case before a Federal grand jury in the District of Columbia.^{1/}

As a result of the Department's solicitation of the registration of two New York attorneys, Victor Rabinowitz and Leonard B. Boudin, a complaint was filed by them on November 15, 1961, seeking a declaratory judgment that their activities as legal representatives of the Revolutionary Government of Cuba did not require their registration under the Act. An appeal was entered on May 15, 1962, from an interlocutory order of the District Court denying the Government's motion for judgment on the pleadings. Subsequently, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ordered that the suit be dismissed on the pleadings as an unconsented suit against the United States. The complainants have petitioned the Supreme Court of the United States for a writ of certiorari.

^{1/} A four count indictment was returned on February 8, 1963, charging the defendants with failure to register under the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938, as amended. The defendants are accused of conducting a public relations program in return for about $195,000 and then conspiring to conceal the campaign's foreign sponsorship. This case is awaiting trial.

NATURE, SOURCES AND CONTENT OF POLITICAL PROPAGANDA

The bulk of political propaganda disseminated in the United States was by official foreign government information and tourist offices and pertained principally to the trade and travel advantages offered by the respective countries. In addition to striving to create an aura of good will and friendship, such propaganda had a strong nationalistic flavor designed to impress its reader with the country's cultural, scientific, political and economic attainments. The importance of attracting American tourists as well as favorable trade relations with the United States is reflected in an expenditure of 11.5 million dollars by the various foreign government information and tourist offices. Appendix VI contains financial data setting forth the expenditures of the official foreign government information and tourist offices within the United States.

As in past years, foreign governments and other foreign entities rely in part on American public relations firms for advice and counsel in the political propaganda area. In many instances American law firms have been employed not only in a legal capacity, but also as lobbyists before the various agencies of the Federal Government and Congressional Committees. Appendix VII of this report shows the amounts reported by American organizations and citizens as being received from the foreign principal. Included in this Appendix are the names of American public relations advisors and consultants who were retained by foreign governments during the calendar year 1962.

The volume and subject matter of foreign propaganda varies according to the significance each country attaches to the national and international issues it faces. However varied the viewpoint, the objective remains the same, to influence public opinion in the United States. Illustrative of such efforts is the following synopsis of principal propaganda trends from significant geographical areas:

Arab States. In 1962, the Arab Information Center expanded its representation to include the governments of Algeria and Kuwait along with Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Morocco, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Tunisia and the United Arab Republic. The Center distributed a broad range of material including a monthly magazine, The Arab World; a semimonthly news report entitled Arab News and Views; press releases, pamphlets, films, records and tourist information. According to its dissemination reports the Center distributes material on a continuing basis to the general public, embassies, United Nations delegations and members of the Secretariat, business and public relations leaders, newspapers, radio and television stations and travel agents.

The Arab World is designed primarily to impress the reader with the social, economic and political progress of the Arab people. It highlights the domestic challenges and problems confronting the member governments of the Arab League in areas such as agriculture, housing and water conservation.

International problems and issues having distinct political overtones are treated in Arab News and Views. It is through this organ that the Arab League attempts to enlist the support of other nations and international organizations on such issues as the Algerian war, Arab relocation, and border disputes with Israel. The Center also distributed pamphlets dealing with political issues as illustrated by the following titles: "Exodus: A Distortion of Truth;" "The Record of Israel at the United Nations" and "The Suez Canal."

A second source of Arab propaganda was the Palestine Arab Delegation, which absorbed the role previously played by the Palestine Arab Refugee Office. The Delegation primarily engaged in the preparation and distribution of news releases and pamphlets. The central interest of its principal, the Arab Higher Committee for Palestine, concerned matters touching upon the United Nations resolution for the repatriation or compensation by Israel of Arab refugees. This problem coupled with the recurring border disputes with Syria was the dominant theme of its propaganda. It was aimed at United Nations delegations, public officials and newspapers.

Distribution of releases, according to the Delegation's dissemination reports, seldom exceeded 200 copies.

Austria. Curtis J. Hoxter, Inc., a registered agent of the Austrian Government, distributed from time to time a bulletin entitled Austria - Commerce, Finance, Economy. Prominently mentioned was a new tariff cut by Austria for industrial and consumer goods which in some instances amounted to 15 to 20 percent. It was pointed out that this tariff cut benefited 49 items and was the third reduction since 1958. The opinion was expressed that American investors looking toward Western Europe were bound to focus increasing attention on Austrian blue-chip shares, mainly because of the favorable development of Austria's international balance of payments and the steady growth of the nation's gold and foreign exchange reserves.

Austrian relations with the Common Market were also emphasized. It was reported that the Austrian textile industry, one of the country's leading industries, was strongly backing the Austrian Government's decision to come to an economic arrangement with the Common Market, the key customer of that industry.

Belgium. The Belgian Government Information Center distributed from time to time the text of statements or speeches made by Belgian political leaders. Included in these statements was an address by the Belgian Trade Minister before an international conference in Puerto Rico on manpower problems. The Minister said that Belgium was following with interest the Peace Corps program of the United States and spoke of the recent creation of a new Belgian association, the "Peace Volunteers," which, with Belgian Government financial support, had sent a first team to Ecuador. He also reported that Belgium was continuing to give considerable assistance to the former Belgian Congo in the form of teaching personnel, scholarships and trainee programs for Congolese both in Belgium and the Congo.

Cuba. Propaganda filed with this Department under the provisions of the Act relative to the Cuban area was insignificant in amount. Inquiry by the Department concerning anti-Castro propaganda in general indicated that several Cuban exile groups published with varying regularity newspapers and newsletters which stressed the need for the liberation of Cuba and attacked both the Castro regime and Communism in Cuba. Illustrative of this are the publications The Cuban Report, an English language newsletter, and Trinchera, a Spanish language fortnightly newspaper, issued by the Student Revolutionary Directory, as well as the Spanish language newspaper Unidad, published by the Unidad Revolucionaria.

Various other publications issued by individuals and groups and circulated in the Cuban exile colony expressed either anti-Castro or pro-Batista sentiments as well as some criticism of United States Cuban policy.

In the field of pro-Castro propaganda, it is known that such material is disseminated within the United States through the agency of the Cuban Delegation to the United Nations, which distributes various kinds of propaganda material both by means of handouts from its headquarters office and through the United States mails. This propaganda emphasizes the propaganda objectives of the Cuban Government with respect to the United States and this hemisphere.

European Economic Community. The Information Office, European Community, a registered agent of the Commission of the European Economic Community, distributed a monthly publication entitled Bulletin from the European Community. The Bulletin gave a fairly detailed account of developments inside the Common Market as well as outside developments affecting the Common Market. In the first category belong reports on the beginning of the European Economic Community's twelve-year transition period (1958-1970), and on the adoption of the first detailed agricultural policy embodied in specific regulations. In the second category belong reports on discussions held by the President of the Commission of the European Economic Community on the "Atlantic Partnership" during his visit to the United States and on President Kennedy's July 4th "Declaration of Interdependence."

Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland. The weekly digest of news extracted from the press of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland is distributed by the Office of the Minister for Rhodesia and Nyasaland Affairs of the British Embassy in Washington.

Sir Roy Welensky, the Federal Prime Minister, pledged in a speech to the Federal Assembly that the breakup of the Federation would not occur while he was Prime Minister. Sir Roy added that he was determined that moderation would prevail and that the Federation would stand by its good neighbors, the Portuguese and South Africans. In another article,

Dr. Banda, leader of Nyasaland's Malawi Congress Party, stated that under no circumstances would he support the continued association of Nyasaland with Rhodesia. A British viewpoint was presented by Sir Richard Powell of the British Institute of Directors who was quoted as saying that whatever happened in the Federation, the link between the industrialists and businessmen of Britain and the Federation was so strong that no force could break it.

Racial problems were also given prominent attention by the press of the Federation. At the opening of the Parliament of the Federation, the Governor General, Lord Dalhousie, was reported as saying that a review of the Federal Public Service was almost complete and that it would soon be possible to introduce a rational non-racial structure, with equal opportunities for all. Sir Edgar Whitehead, Southern Rhodesia Prime Minister, expressed the hope that all discriminatory laws would be abolished by the end of the year, and that land would also be available by the end of that time in any part of the country for purchase by Africans. Another article reported that the Southern Rhodesian Prime Minister had instigated a "Claim Your Vote" campaign to encourage Africans to become voters.

Ghana. The Information Services of Ghana distributed a bimonthly pictorial magazine, Ghana Today, and occasional news releases consisting of reprints of speeches by President Nkrumah.

Attention was given to the "Work and Happiness" program of the ruling Convention People's Party which will form the basis of the Government's new Seven-Year Development Plan. Some of the aims of the program include employment for all the citizens of Ghana, compulsory and free secondary education, free medical services and cheap electricity from the Volta River Project.

In a speech to the National Assembly, President Nkrumah was quoted as saying that the general policy of Ghana was to build a strong socialist state at home and abroad, to assist in the achievement of total independence from colonialism and the unity of the African Continent, to follow a policy of non-alignment in international relations and support the cause of world peace. He also said that by the people's wish, Ghana will be a one-party state, a people's parliamentary democracy.

Prominence was given the conference of African Freedom Fighters which was called for by Ghana. On this occasion, President Nkrumah warned that the objective of African unity can be seriously undermined by tribalism, which provides one of the "happiest hunting grounds" for colonialists.

Great Britain. British Information Services (BIS) distributed a publication entitled Today's British Papers. This publication is a daily summary of the more significant issues covered by the British press and is considered by many readers as indicative of British opinion on a wide range of subjects both national and international.

BIS continued to follow the practice of distributing the text of statements by British Government officials, such as an address by the Prime Minister to the American Newspaper Publishers Association in which he touched upon several subjects including European Unity and Britain and the European Community; a speech by the Lord Privy Seal in the House of Commons on the European Economic Community and a speech by the Foreign Secretary in the United Nations General Assembly dealing with Berlin, the Congo, Laos and disarmament. In addition, BIS published the British Record containing brief comments on political and economic developments. BIS also distributed pamphlets reflecting the views of the British Government on a number of issues, such as the movement toward European integration, the British policy of guiding dependencies to responsible self-government within the Commonwealth, and Parliamentary Government in the Commonwealth.

India. The Information Service of India, which functions as a wing of the Embassy of India, is the principal source of Indian propaganda disseminated in the United States. Indiagram, a daily press release, records the Embassy's viewpoint on a vast number of subjects. It is aimed primarily at news agencies, press bureaus, radio and television stations. During the early months of 1962, a weekly summary of these press releases was mailed to Indian students in this country. The Service also disseminated a fortnightly Economic Newsletter and a fortnightly India News.

In foreign affairs, the Embassy's central concern appeared to be in two areas. The first was the Sino-Indian border dispute over the McMahon Line and China's subsequent movement into Indian territory. The second was the continuing diplomatic struggle with Pakistan over the State of Kashmir.

Internally, the chief topic was India's third Five Year Plan. The aims and progress of the country toward agricultural improvement, industrial development and general economic advancement received considerable attention. Other subjects touched upon with frequency were: India's policy of non-alignment, her opposition to British entry into the Common Market, her opposition to nuclear testing, and her views on "colonialism."

The Information Service also maintains a library of films, pamphlets and other publications which are made available upon request.

Indonesia. The Republic of Indonesia makes known its views on a number of subjects through its Embassy Information Office. Its major vehicle of expression is a monthly illustrated feature magazine, Report on Indonesia. This publication contained articles treating political, social, economic and cultural affairs. Those topics most often repeated included the dispute over West Irian (one-half of the island of New Guinea) which was formerly held by the Netherlands; the policy of non-alignment pursued by President Sukarno; its desires for trade as well as aid from both the world powers and the general subject of Indonesian nationalism. Supplementing the magazine were unscheduled but frequent news releases dealing with issues of a more transitory nature, most prominent of which was the day to day developments over West Irian.

Israel. The principal sources of Israeli propaganda disseminated in the United States were the Israel Office of Information, The Jewish Agency for Israel - American Section, and the Israel Government Tourist Office.

The major publications of the Israel Office of Information are Land of the Bible Newsletter and Israel News Briefs. The former is a four-page newsletter emphasizing religious and cultural topics. However, it also included short articles on a variety of subjects pertaining to the urban and frontier life in Israel. The Israel News Briefs was composed of paragraph treatments of topics ranging from scientific progress to unemployment.

The Israel Digest of Press Events in Israel and the Middle East is a bimonthly newsletter published by the Jewish Agency for Israel. Its interests are broad and include foreign and domestic developments significant in Israel, the economic affairs of the homeland and, to a lesser degree, Israel and World Jewry, science, education and culture. Specifically treated on a continuing basis were the following representative subjects: Th Eichmann trial and appeal; internal economic growth; provisions for immigrants; military border disputes with Syria, especially in the area of Lake Kinneret; foreign relations; investments abroad; and the Israeli reaction and viewpoint with reference to the problem of the Arab refugee. The average number of copies transmitted, according to the Agency's dissemination reports, was 17,000. Newspapers and other publications were the largest recipients, with 2,000 copies, and libraries following with 1,200 copies. Bearing on essentially the same topics, press releases, occasional pamphlets and reprints of speeches were prepared by the Agency and distributed to the press and a "small mailing list of interested persons."

Also disseminating information on behalf of the Israeli Government was its Tourist Office in New York. Published in the form of a newsletter were details regarding travel to Israel, accommodations and similar facts.

Japan. The United States-Japan Trade Council, Inc., located in Washington, D.C., was one of the chief spokesmen for increasing trade between the two countries. The Council, a non-profit association, includes among its members more than 450 American and Japanese firms. Its activities are supported in part by the Japan Trade Promotion Office, New York City.

Among the statistical surveys which the Council disseminated during the past year was one documenting the income and employment benefits of exports to Japan for each State of the United States. According to the report, the leading State in terms of jobs created by exports to Japan was Texas, while the industrialized Eastern, Northern and Central States reaped the biggest dollar returns from America's exports to Japan. The survey stated that the United States exported more to Japan over the last five-year period than to any other country except Canada.

The Japan Trade Center, New York, an office of the Japan External Trade Organization, the trade promotion agency in Japan, provided information on sources of supply of Japanese products in Japan and in the United States. On behalf of the Trade Center, Ruder & Finn, a public relations firm in New York City, conducted a broad trade promotion program for Japanese products and industrial techniques.

Korea. Acceleration of Korea's economy through its first five-year economic development plan was given much publicity in the monthly magazine Korean Report, distributed by the Korean Research and Information Office, Washington, D.C. The plan proposed to expand the gross national product by 40.8 percent; consequently, the Report requested economic and technical assistance from all friendly nations, particularly the United States.

In an effort to construct a new political and social climate conducive to sound economic growth, the Report advised that a Foreign Investment Encouragement Law had been passed to provide guarantees, benefits and protection to foreign investors. Economic progress is necessary, the Report stated, in order to insure the maintenance of military power critical to the security of the country and the free world.

Nigeria. Nigerian economic development was one of the central themes of the newsletters and business reports distributed by the Consulate General of Nigeria in New York.

An article describing the new six-year, 1.8 billion dollar National Development Plan stated that the program aims at raising the standard of living by increasing agricultural and industrial production, accelerating the diversification of the economy, and expanding employment opportunities. The article said that half of the money needed for the program will be raised from the government's own resources and half will come from foreign aid. In discussing the plan, the Federal Minister of Commerce and Industry said that everything would be done in order to make investors welcome and to attract foreign aid.

An article entitled, "Government Slashes Salaries and Allowances of Top Officials," told how Premier Akintola of Western Nigeria had set an example by cutting his own pay and allowances by $4,695. This was explained as being part of the austerity measures instituted in order to finance the region's 600 million dollar, six-year development plan which is part of the national program. The Eastern Nigerian newsletter described that region's development program as aiming at a shift of emphasis from social service to economic growth.

The Nigerian literature also contained news of political events. The Prime Minister was quoted as saying that good example, not force, was Nigeria's goal of leadership in Africa. He stated that it would be wrong for Nigeria to force its leadership on others just because of its size and population.

Pakistan. Like neighboring India, Pakistan directs her public information program from her Embassy in Washington. Also like India her main concern was the diplomatic struggle over the status of Kashmir. The volume of propaganda from Pakistan, however, is considerably smaller in quantity. In its bulletins and newsletter entitled Pakistan Affairs, Pakistan accused India of hiding behind the Russian veto of a Western supported resolution for a peaceful negotiated settlement of the Kashmir problem. It was also pointed out that the previous Russian veto prevented the Security Council from taking action against India for her entry into Goa. Also given attention on a lesser scale in this publication were: anti-Muslim riots in India, world disarmament and the necessity of vigorous economic growth in Pakistan.

People's Republic of China. Propaganda material from this source was distributed in the United States by Imported Publications and Products; Henry H. Noyes, dba China Books and Periodicals; and Philip Frankfeld, dba World Books. Included among the major publications disseminated were a weekly news magazine, Peking Review; an illustrated monthly magazine, China Pictorial; a bimonthly magazine of Chinese youth and students, Evergreen; and a quarterly, Women of China. Politically slanted novels, writings of Mao Tse-tung and pamphlets lauding the "great leap forward" were also imported for distribution.

Chinese Communist propaganda during the year 1962 spoke of the Sino-Indian border conflict as nothing more than a defense against India's intrusions into and occupation of Chinese territory along the western sector. The United States, on the other hand, was accused of war provocations in Cuba, Laos, South Viet-Nam, the Congo and West Berlin. With strongly worded speeches the Chinese Communists supported the Cuban people in what was termed "their sacred struggle to safeguard their fruits of revolution against U.S. aggression." The propaganda cautioned special vigilance with regard to the Kennedy Administration's "global strategy" which it declared was concentrating on military strategy to enslave the whole of mankind and secure world hegemony.

According to this propaganda, United States imperialism was the root cause of tension in the world. In support of this view it cited the opposition of the United States to the restoration of Taiwan to the Mainland. It also argued that the United States

Government's appeals for disarmament were nothing more than a ruse to cover up its large-scale arms drive and war preparations. In addition, it contended that the "warmongering capitalists" who controlled the United States were interested only in profits realized from the production of military material and not in attaining a true disarmament that would ensure world peace.

Portugal. George Peabody & Associates, a registered agent of a Portuguese Government agency, distributed a publication entitled A Newsletter from Portugal; another entitled Travel News from Portugal; and various press releases on behalf of its foreign principal. The Newsletter dealt primarily with the Portuguese economy and foreign trade.

Casa de Portugal, also a registered agent of the Portuguese Government, occasionally distributed pamphlets dealing with political questions, including one entitled "The Invasion and Occupation of Goa by the Indian Union," which contained a speech delivered by Prime Minister Salazar in the National Assembly, who said that Prime Minister Nehru of India was a racist, prejudiced against the West, a pacifist in theory, but an aggressor in practice. He expressed satisfaction with the efforts made by President Kennedy to dissuade Prime Minister Nehru from attacking Goa, but added that the attack which took place was a defeat not only for Portugal but for the United States as well.

Another major source of political propaganda which expounded the Portuguese point of view in world affairs was the public relations firm of Selvage and Lee, Inc. Its foreign principal, The Overseas Companies of Portugal, is an affiliation of industrial, commercial and agricultural enterprises which have financial interests in the African Provinces of Angola and Mozambique. While Selvage and Lee itself disseminated considerable printed matter, it also sponsored The Portuguese American Committee on Foreign Affairs and Dr. Martin Camacho, its Chairman, through which it channeled information. The Committee was also an original source of statements pertaining to the Portuguese affairs in Africa.

Central to the issues discussed in the propaganda was the activity of the "Afro-Asian" countries in the United States with reference to Portuguese possessions. It strongly emphasized that as a long term ally and NATO partner, Portugal's defense of Western values in Africa should receive firm support from the United States. This position was highlighted by attacks against the rebel movement in Angola as examples of terrorism, racism in reverse and the communist world conspiracy. A second mainstream of the propaganda concerned racial policy and the economic picture in Angola and Mozambique. It contended that the Portuguese were pursuing an enlightened multi-racial policy while maintaining economic stability and growth amidst surrounding chaos. Especially noted was the Congolese Government, first by comparison and second, for allowing rebels to use the country as a base for military excursions.

Selvage and Lee also acted to facilitate and encourage journalists and news correspondents to visit the Provinces. While the bulk of printed material from the firm and the Committee took the form of pamphlets, reprinted speeches and newspaper articles, extensive use was made of the "letter to the editor" technique.

Republic of China. The Chinese Government's determination to retake the Mainland "as soon as the time is ripe" constituted the main theme of the propaganda disseminated by the Chinese News Service, an information agency of the Republic of China at 1270 Sixth Avenue, New York. Every Tuesday the News Service published Free China Weekly, which at various times stated that the Republic of China never based its hope of a solution to the Chinese Communist problem on the outbreak of a global nuclear war. The opinion was expressed that it was up to the Chinese people themselves to save their own country.

The Republic of China took the side of the United States in the Cuban crisis, contending that the issue at stake was not whether Cuba had a right to build up her own defense, but whether the Soviet Union should be allowed to install weapons of mass destruction in that strategic area.

Nationalist Chinese propaganda further supported the United States in its resumption of nuclear tests in the atmosphere, stating that free peoples everywhere must realize that U.S. supremacy in nuclear deterrent power is the best guarantee of world peace. They contended that the Soviet Union's violation of the agreed test moratorium in September of last year demonstrated the folly of relying on the pious hope of indiscriminate suspension or paper declarations without the guarantee of international inspection.

The mass flight of refugees from the Mainland to Hong Kong and Macao during April and May of last year was heralded by the News Service as a collective bid for freedom and survival. Pointing to the fact that the refugees represented a cross section of the Chinese population, the News Service contended that they repudiated all that the Chinese Communist regime stands for. The propaganda asserted that as a result of Communist misrule the Mainland was facing an industrial and agricultural crisis of unprecedented magnitude with moral deterioration within its army and militia.

The News Service further declared in its publications that to suggest the admission of the Chinese Communists to the United Nations as representative of the Chinese people was similar to inviting the executioner to speak for his victim, and stated that the move to sever diplomatic relations with Laos after the latter set up ties with the Peiping regime showed the resolution never to tolerate any "two-China" device.

Republic of the Congo. One of the central themes of the news releases distributed by the Information Bureau of the Republic of the Congo involved that country's determination to end the Katanga secession. Mario Cardoso, Charge d'Affaires of the Central Government, was quoted as saying that the demands made on Mr. Tshombe were not unreasonable as the Central Government had promised to work for a federal constitution which would guarantee provincial autonomy much like that possessed by the American states. He stated that Mr. Tshombe did not want such a federation, but rather was willing to have a confederation in which Katanga would maintain its own military forces, currency, and tax collecting authority as well as direct its foreign relations which concerned economic matters. Mr. Cardoso pointed out that this would give the province more independent authority than the American states had under the Articles of Confederation.

In a reprint of an interview given to the press, Prime Minister Adula was quoted as saying that the Congolese Government supported the efforts of the Angolans to free themselves from colonial control. Mr. Adula said that this was part of the national policy towards all African peoples who do not yet have their independence.

A booklet entitled "From Leopoldville to Lagos: Our African Policy" elaborates the Congolese policy on African unity. The main principles of this policy are described as follows: 1) The doctrine of positive neutralism expresses the Congo's desire to avoid aligning itself with any "bloc," even a neutralist bloc; 2) On the African level, constant action will be taken against the formation of "blocs;" 3) The respect for sovereignty should govern the cooperation and progressive unification of the African states; 4) A bond of fraternal collaboration should be established which excludes imperialism and fosters close cooperation in social, economic and cultural fields.

Republic of South Africa. The Information Service of South Africa disseminated a bimonthly magazine, South African Scope; a weekly newsletter, South African Summary; a monthly pictorial magazine, South African Panorama; and a fortnightly Digest of South African Affairs. These publications covered a variety of cultural, economic and political events in South Africa.

Considerable attention was devoted to the development of the Transkei, which as various articles pointed out is the first Bantu territory within the Republic of South Africa to achieve self-government under a democratic constitution. A booklet, "South Africa in Fact," explained that the policy of apartheid, or separate development, envisions a "number of autonomous Bantu nations alongside, and in cooperative association with, the white nation - a South African Commonwealth." The article states that the South African Government will spend $160,000,000 on the development of the homelands in the next five years.

One of the stated purposes of the South African policy of apartheid is to avoid another "Congo disaster" by giving the Bantu gradual self-government as they prove themselves responsible. "There will be no peace in Africa until the whole continent is re-divided on an ethnic basis," Mr. de Wet Nel, Minister of Bantu Administration and Development, is quoted as saying.

U.S.S.R. Four Continent Book Corporation, Imported Publications and Products, Crosscurrents Press, Cross World Books and Periodicals, World Books, and Select Magazines, Inc., are the registered agents which handled the distribution of Soviet materials in the United States during the past year. The material disseminated included a weekly news summary, New Times; a monthly journal of political analysis, International Affairs; editions of Communist documents and numerous policy statements on general and complete disarmament, and the monthly publications, Soviet Union, Soviet Woman, Culture and Life and Soviet Literature.

One of the larger markets for such material appeared to be the Soviet Embassy, Washington, which paid Crosscurrents Press over $62,000 for materials received by Crosscurrents from the Novosti Press, Moscow, pursuant to exclusive rights to translate, publish and distribute such material. The remainder of the material was distributed through individual subscriptions and local book stores.

The first group flight in space which was successfully completed by two Russian cosmonauts last year was a major highlight of Soviet propaganda in 1962. This victory was heralded as a triumph of Socialism and Communism over capitalism.

As in the past, peaceful coexistence and economic competition with states of differing social systems was the predominant theme of Soviet publications. These policies were described as being aimed at making the Soviet Union the world's greatest industrial power within the coming decade. The socialist countries expressed confidence in their victory in this economic race, contending that the advantages inherent in socialist production relations insure rapid and uninterrupted scientific and technical progress.

While emphasizing the Soviet Union's desire for "peace," the United States was blamed for keeping the world in a perpetual fever of war preparations through, for example, the conducting of a series of nuclear atmospheric tests on Christmas Island. It accused the United States of wrecking the Geneva Conference on the cessation of nuclear weapons testing, claiming that the proposal for international inspection is a guise for setting up a system of international espionage.

The Soviet Union through its propaganda took credit for the surge of national liberation movements, claiming that if it were not for the determined fight of oppressed people in Asia, Africa and Latin America and the support of the Socialist countries, the newly liberated countries would have been doomed to remain agrarian and the source of raw material exploitation by the imperialistic forces.

Cuba was labeled by Soviet propaganda as the first serious obstacle to dictation by Washington. It declared that the danger to world peace created by the United States blockade of Cuba last year was averted only by the good will and sanity of the Soviet Union. Soviet assistance in arms to Cuba was described as merely insurance that Cuba would be safe from United States invasion and free to shape its own destiny. There was lavish praise for the Soviet Union's self-control and presence of mind during a crisis which it declared was prompted by the criminally reckless foreign policy of the United States.

It emphasized, but with less frequency than in the previous year, that one of the chief causes of world tension is the need to conclude a German peace treaty. The West was cautioned not to mistake the Soviet Union's patience in this matter as consent to interminable delay, since it holds that both German states have an equal right to existence and the German people have voluntarily chosen the road of Socialism and peace.

Yugoslavia. Revocation of the Most Favored Nation clause by the United States Congress during October of last year was viewed by the Yugoslav News Bulletin as a severe unilateral act which resulted in political and economic discrimination against Yugoslavia. The Bulletin, published several times a month by the Yugoslav Information Center, 816 Fifth Avenue, New York, forecast a definite deterioration of relations between the two countries as well as damage to Yugoslavia's economic interests.

According to the Bulletin, the bloc division of the world means inevitable world war; consequently, Yugoslavia's policy of coexistence and nonalignment was upheld both as a democratic concept of international relations and the means of achieving Socialism. These concepts, the Bulletin declared, do not mean Yugoslavia is passive or neutral on the questions of Socialism and peace or the struggles of oppressed people for independence and freedom from imperialist and hegomonistic pressure. The Bulletin praised the new Yugoslavian Constitution which it said included the right of the workingman to management and self-government.

Speaking of the Chinese campaign against Yugoslavia, the Bulletin stated that the four-year-old campaign had intensified. The Bulletin explained that the Soviet Union's efforts to achieve an agreement between the capitalist countries and socialist states are predicated on the belief that socialist development can progress in peaceful competition. On the other hand, the Chinese leaders, declared the Bulletin, feel that such an agreement has no lasting value and is a waste of time.

With regard to disarmament, the Bulletin stated that it would become much more feasible if discrimination against China was discontinued and its participation in the United Nations allowed. Nuclear testing was denounced on the grounds that it constitutes a serious threat to the safety and security of mankind.

The special role of the United Nations in the Cuban crisis was emphasized by the Bulletin, stating that the United Nations was confirmed as an irreplaceable international instrument for the preservation and consolidation of peace.

In addition to the Bulletin, the Information Office distributed a Belgrade-published newspaper, Yugoslav Life, and several booklets on trade.

Coming directly from Belgrade was a monthly magazine called Review, and a bimonthly Review of International Affairs, published by the Federation of Yugoslav journalists.

Registration under the Act does not imply recognition by the United States Government either of the de jure existence or legality of the foreign principal nor does registration indicate approval by the United States Government of the propaganda material disseminated by the registered agent.

The principal purpose of Congress in enacting the Foreign Agents Registration Act was to require public disclosure by persons engaging in propaganda activities and other activities for or on behalf of foreign governments, foreign political parties and other foreign principals, so that the Government and the people of the United States may be informed of the identity of such persons and may appraise their statements and actions in the light of their associations and activities. The emphasis of the Department of Justice in its administration of the statute has been toward the achievement of this purpose. In performing its functions, the Department has continued to rely upon its normal sources of information and upon the investigative efforts of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Respectfully submitted,
