Re: Expedited Freedom of Information Act Request

Dear FOIA Officer:

Pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, and the implementing regulations of your agency, American Oversight makes the following request for records.

On January 6, 2021, President Trump incited a mob to attack Congress while members were certifying the election for President-elect Joe Biden.<sup>1</sup> The apparent insurrectionists attacked the Capitol Building, forced their way past reportedly understaffed Capitol Police, and ultimately delayed the Congressional session by forcing lawmakers and their staffs to flee.<sup>2</sup> Four people died during this assault and a fifth person, a Capitol Police officer, died the following day from injuries incurred while engaging with rioters.<sup>3</sup>

While militia members roamed the halls of Congress, Trump reportedly fought against deploying the D.C. National Guard,<sup>4</sup> and the Defense Department reportedly initially denied a deployment request, before later reversing that decision.<sup>5</sup> Congress was only able to certify the win for President-elect Biden later in the evening after law enforcement, including the Capitol Police, and potentially the Federal Bureau for Investigation (FBI), the National Guard, and D.C. Metropolitan Police Department (MPD), reclaimed the Capitol.

This mob of Trump followers, animated by the President, attempted to violently stop the peaceful transfer of power. Now, in this moment of crisis, the public needs to understand the roles that senior officials played during this attack on American democracy.

Requested Records

American Oversight seeks expedited review of this request for the reasons identified below and requests that your agency produce the following records as soon as practicable, and at least within twenty business days:

1. All communications (including emails, email attachments, complete email chains, text messages (or messages on similar applications such as Signal or WhatsApp) and calendar invitations) sent or received by the officials listed below regarding events at the U.S. Capitol, U.S. National Mall, or surrounding grounds in Washington D.C. on January 6, 2021, including but not limited to the potential or actual deployment of law enforcement officers and/or National Guard troops, requests for assistance from members of Congress or Congressional staff, protests or armed activity at the Capitol, President Trump's rally, or concerns about security.

Please note that American Oversight does not seek, and that this request specifically excludes, the initial mailing of news clips or other mass-distribution emails. However, subsequent communications forwarding such emails are responsive to this request. In other words, for example, if a specified official received a mass-distribution news clip email referencing protests or violent activity at the Capitol, that initial email would not be responsive to this request. However, if a specified official forwarded that email to another individual with his own commentary, that subsequent message would be responsive to this request and should be produced.

2. All orders, directives, protocols, or guidance prepared, written, approved, or signed by the officials listed below, regarding events at the U.S. Capitol, U.S. National Mall, or surrounding grounds in Washington D.C. on January 6, 2021, including but not limited to the potential or actual deployment of law enforcement officers and/or National Guard troops, requests for assistance from members of Congress or Congressional staff, protests or armed activity at the Capitol, President Trump's rally, or concerns about security.

Specified officials:

- a. Jeffrey Rosen, Acting Attorney General
- b. Richard Donoghue, Principal Associate Deputy Attorney General
- c. Anyone serving in the capacity of Chief of Staff to the Acting Attorney General
- d. Anyone serving as White House Liaison

For both parts of this request, please provide all responsive records from December 31, 2020, through January 7, 2021.

Fee Waiver Request

In accordance with 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(iii) and your agency's regulations, American Oversight requests a waiver of fees associated with processing this request for records. The subject of this request concerns the operations of the federal government, and the disclosures will likely contribute to a better understanding of relevant government procedures by the general public in a significant way. Moreover, the request is primarily and fundamentally for non-commercial purposes.

American Oversight requests a waiver of fees because disclosure of the requested information is "in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of operations or activities of the government."<sup>6</sup> The public has a significant interest in the decision-making process that led to the deployment of troops and law enforcement officers to the nation's Capitol Building to face insurrectionists and the delay of said deployment while rioters overtook the Capitol. Records with the potential to shed light on this matter would contribute significantly to public understanding of operations of the federal government, including what threats were previously identified and how the federal government had anticipated responding. American Oversight is committed to transparency and makes the responses agencies provide to FOIA requests publicly available, and the public's understanding of the government's activities would be enhanced through American Oversight's analysis and publication of these records.

This request is primarily and fundamentally for non-commercial purposes.<sup>7</sup> As a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, American Oversight does not have a commercial purpose and the release of the information requested is not in American Oversight's financial interest. American Oversight's mission is to promote transparency in government, to educate the public about government activities, and to ensure the accountability of government officials. American Oversight uses the information gathered, and its analysis of it, to educate the public through reports, press releases, or other media. American Oversight also makes materials it gathers available on its public website and promotes their availability on social media platforms, such as Facebook and Twitter.<sup>8</sup>

American Oversight has also demonstrated its commitment to the public disclosure of documents and creation of editorial content through regular substantive analyses posted to its website.<sup>9</sup> Examples reflecting this commitment to the public disclosure of documents and the creation of editorial content include the posting of records related to the Trump Administration's contacts with Ukraine and analyses of those contacts;<sup>10</sup> posting records and editorial content about the federal government's response to the Coronavirus pandemic;<sup>11</sup> posting records received as part of American Oversight's "Audit the Wall" project to gather and analyze information related to the administration's proposed construction of a barrier along the U.S.-Mexico border, and analyses of what those records reveal;<sup>12</sup> the posting of records related to an ethics waiver received by a senior Department of Justice attorney and an analysis of what those records demonstrated regarding the Department's process for issuing such waivers;<sup>13</sup> and posting records and analysis of federal officials' use of taxpayer dollars to charter private aircraft or use government planes for unofficial business.<sup>14</sup>

Application for Expedited Processing

Pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(E)(1) and your agencies' implementing regulations, American Oversight requests that your agency expedite the processing of this request.

I certify to be true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief that the information requested is urgently needed in order to inform the public concerning actual or alleged government activity. On January 6, a mob of Trump supporters, incited by a speech from President Trump, attacked the Capitol Building to stop the certification of President-elect Joe Biden as president. This raised serious concerns about the security of the Capitol Building, security planning surrounding an important process for American democracy, and the actions or inaction of federal agencies before and during this attack. During the assault, President Trump reportedly fought against deploying the D.C. National Guard,<sup>15</sup> and the Defense Department reportedly initially denied a request, before later reversing that decision.<sup>16</sup> According to The New York Times, "Defense and administration officials" told the publication that Vice President Pence, not the Commander in Chief, ultimately ordered deploying the Guard.<sup>17</sup> If true, this raises questions about who is currently in control of the military's armed forces, and who was in control during the mob's assault on Congress. Furthermore, the public needs to know whether the president initially denied sending help to protect Congress from the mob that he incited. If true, this has serious implications about the president's commitment to democracy and his willingness to use the military for his own political ends. These records would help answer these questions and also help the public understand what steps security forces took to end the assault.

Moreover, I certify to be true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief that there is an urgent need to inform the public about the deployment of the National Guard and other law enforcement and security forces. As noted above, The New York Times has reported that the Commander in Chief did not order the National Guard to help Congress, but instead the Vice President gave these orders. The country should not live with ambiguities regarding who is providing orders to the military for any period of time. Further, at this moment of crisis, the public needs transparency about how government officials are responding to the apparent insurrection that trashed the halls of Congress. For stability, the public needs access to the requested records so they can trust that the government is doing what is in its power to ensure a peaceful transition of power. Further, if the president hesitated or stonewalled efforts to send forces to protect Congress, as reported, the public needs to know that as soon as possible, because it would imply the president may not be committed to a peaceful transfer of power. In addition, members of Congress are currently drafting and circulating articles of impeachment based on the events of January 6.<sup>18</sup> These records may be relevant to their current deliberations and any future trial.

I further certify that American Oversight is primarily engaged in disseminating information to the public. American Oversight's mission is to promote transparency in government, to educate the public about government activities, and to ensure the accountability of government officials. Similar to other organizations that have been found to satisfy the criteria necessary to qualify for expedition,<sup>19</sup> American Oversight "gathers information of potential interest to a segment of the public, uses its editorial skills to turn the raw material into a distinct work, and distributes that work to an audience."<sup>20</sup> American Oversight uses the information gathered, and its analysis of it, to educate the public through reports, press releases, and other media. American Oversight also makes materials it gathers available on its public website and promotes their availability on social media platforms, such as Facebook and Twitter.<sup>21</sup> As discussed previously, American Oversight has demonstrated its commitment to the public disclosure of documents and creation of editorial content.<sup>22</sup>

Accordingly, American Oversight's request satisfies the criteria for expedition.

Guidance Regarding the Search & Processing of Requested Records

In connection with its request for records, American Oversight provides the following guidance regarding the scope of the records sought and the search and processing of records:

- Please search all locations and systems likely to have responsive records, regardless of format, medium, or physical characteristics.
- Our request for records includes any attachments to those records or other materials enclosed with those records when they were previously transmitted. To the extent that an email is responsive to our request, our request includes all prior messages sent or received in that email chain, as well as any attachments to the email.
- Please search all relevant records or systems containing records regarding agency business. Do not exclude records regarding agency business contained in files, email accounts, or devices in the personal custody of your officials, such as personal email accounts or text messages. Records of official business conducted using unofficial systems or stored outside of official files are subject to the Federal Records Act and FOIA.<sup>23</sup> It is not adequate to rely on policies and procedures that require officials to move such information to official systems within a certain period of time; American Oversight has a right to records contained in those files even if material has not yet been moved to official systems or if officials have, by intent or through negligence, failed to meet their obligations.<sup>24</sup>
- Please use all tools available to your agency to conduct a complete and efficient search for potentially responsive records. Agencies are subject to government-wide requirements to manage agency information electronically,<sup>25</sup> and many agencies have adopted the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) Capstone program, or similar policies. These systems provide options for searching emails and other electronic records in a manner that is reasonably likely to be more complete than just searching individual custodian files. For example, a custodian may have deleted a responsive email from his or her email program, but your agency's archiving tools may capture that email under Capstone. At the same time, custodian searches are still necessary; agencies may not have direct access to files stored in .PST files, outside of network drives, in paper format, or in personal email accounts.

- In the event some portions of the requested records are properly exempt from disclosure, please disclose any reasonably segregable non-exempt portions of the requested records. If a request is denied in whole, please state specifically why it is not reasonable to segregate portions of the record for release.
- Please take appropriate steps to ensure that records responsive to this request are not deleted by the agency before the completion of processing for this request. If records potentially responsive to this request are likely to be located on systems where they are subject to potential deletion, including on a scheduled basis, please take steps to prevent that deletion, including, as appropriate, by instituting a litigation hold on those records.

Conclusion

If you have any questions regarding how to construe this request for records or believe that further discussions regarding search and processing would facilitate a more efficient production of records of interest to American Oversight, please do not hesitate to contact American Oversight to discuss this request. American Oversight welcomes an opportunity to discuss its request with you before you undertake your search or incur search or duplication costs. By working together at the outset, American Oversight and your agency can decrease the likelihood of costly and time-consuming litigation in the future.

Where possible, please provide responsive material in an electronic format by email. Alternatively, please provide responsive material in native format or in PDF format on a USB drive. Please send any responsive material being sent by mail to American Oversight, 1030 15th Street NW, Suite B255, Washington, DC 20005. If it will accelerate release of responsive records to American Oversight, please also provide responsive material on a rolling basis.

We share a common mission to promote transparency in government. American Oversight looks forward to working with your agency on this request. If you do not understand any part of this request, please contact Dan McGrath at foia@americanoversight.org or (202) 897-4213. Also, if American Oversight's request for expedition is not granted or its request for a fee waiver is not granted in full, please contact us immediately upon making such a determination.

Acting Attorney General
U.S. Department of Justice

Washington, DC 20530-0001

Dear Acting Secretary Miller and Acting Attorney General Rosen,

We write with grave concerns over reports that multiple active duty and retired military service members and veterans are under investigation, or have been arrested, in connection with their participation in the riot and insurrection in the U.S. Capitol last week. As veterans and Members of Congress, who have taken the Oath of Office twice over, we have sworn to protect the Constitution and hold accountable our fellow Americans who have served in uniform to the Oaths they themselves have sworn to our country.

As you know, Section 3 of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution provides that no person may hold civil or military office in the United States, who, having taken an Oath as an officer of the United States to support the Constitution, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the United States. This provision was enshrined in our Constitution in the Reconstruction Amendments which were adopted in the wake of the Civil War. Our leaders knew then that the security of our democracy requires that service members, veterans, and retirees of the U.S. military should be investigated, convicted, and found guilty if they committed insurrection or rebellion against our country.

Recent news reports have identified retired or discharged servicemembers as being present at the Capitol and taking part in the riot that occurred on January 6, 2021. Additional news reports and security briefings suggest that the threat of insurrection in all 50 states and in the nation's capital will continue through January 21, 2021. Given the 14th Amendment provision previously referenced, we are concerned about further participation in insurrection or rebellious activities by current or former servicemembers that contravenes the oath we took to protect this country.

With this information in mind and as the investigations continue to reveal individuals with a relationship to the military, we request your prompt answers to each of the following questions:

1. For active duty, National Guard and Reserve servicemembers who are under law enforcement investigation for their role in the riot at the U.S. Capitol on Wednesday, January 6, 2021, what are the administrative tools available and what are administrative requirements the military service must enact?
2. For retirees who are under law enforcement investigation for their role in the riot at the U.S. Capitol on Wednesday, January 6, 2021 what are the administrative tools available and legal tools available to the military service to recall the retiree and administratively or legally prosecute the individual?
3. For federal contractors (to include those who are veterans and retirees) who are under law enforcement investigation for their role in the riot at the U.S. Capitol on Wednesday, January 6, 2021 what are the administrative tools available and legal tools available to suspend security clearances or employment on contracts?
4. For veterans who no longer have a Military Service Obligation and are not retirees who are under law enforcement investigation and are convicted of a federal crime for their role in the riot at the U.S. Capitol on Wednesday, January 6, 2021, are there any administrative tools available to the military services to adjust their military discharge that could affect benefits earned for military service?

Director*

The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) strongly urges you to appoint a special counsel to investigate, and if warranted, prosecute President Donald Trump, his associates, and any other federal official who may have been involved in recent attempts to subvert the outcome of the 2020 Presidential election, if those attempts amount to criminal violations of federal civil rights laws, including, but not limited to, Section 241 of Title 18 of the United States Code. By a unanimous vote on January 10, 2021, the ACLU National Board voted to support the impeachment of President Donald Trump because of his pattern of bad-faith conduct designed to subvert the results of a fair and free election. Regardless of what happens in the House or Senate with regard to impeachment and removal, the U.S. Department of Justice should initiate its own investigation to ascertain whether criminal violations of federal civil rights laws occurred.

The outcome of the 2020 presidential election is the most litigated ever in our country's history. More than 60 legal challenges have been filed to throw out lawfully cast ballots. These lawsuits have had a single purpose: to disenfranchise qualified American voters, particularly voters of color, who voted against President Trump. The courts—both federal and state, and including judicial appointees of both political parties—have unanimously rejected these challenges as without basis in fact or law.

Yet the President has not been deterred in his efforts to overturn the results of an election that he lost. Since President-Elect Biden was declared the winner, President Trump and his associates have embarked on a relentless and multi-pronged campaign attempting to overturn the clear results, including, in one instance, by exhorting the Georgia Secretary of State to “find” enough votes that would allow him to win that state—a clear and unambiguous attempt to undermine the will of the voters of Georgia and steal their electoral votes.

In addition to pressuring and threatening state and local officials to reverse election results in his favor, the President has repeatedly made scores of knowingly false statements attempting to undermine the integrity and legitimacy of the 2020 election, to impugn the votes of Americans in racial minority groups in particular, and to deny his loss at the ballot box. These statements have fueled the prevailing sentiment of his supporters that the election of President-Elect Biden is not legitimate. Following over eight weeks of persistent false statements about the legitimacy of the election results from the President and his surrogates, President Trump led his supporters in a rally on the National Mall at the very moment Congress was meeting to certify the election. After the President said, “we’re going to walk down to the Capitol,” a group of Trump supporters did just that and, once there, many of them broke into the Capitol building and disrupted the joint session of Congress convened to certify the election of Joe Biden to be the 46th President of the United States. Images of these rioters swarming the halls of our Capitol — carrying weapons, tactical gear, restraining zip ties, and, in a symbol of the white supremacy underpinning their violent acts, Confederate flags — while Members of Congress, staff, reporters, and the building’s caretakers fled for their lives will not soon be forgotten.

The President and his enablers must be held accountable for their efforts to subvert the November 2020 election, including for any federal crimes they may have committed in the course of their attempts to overturn the election results.

The President and his advisors have engaged in multiple concerted efforts to pressure or coerce state and local officials to reject, revise, or refuse to certify the vote totals, thereby overturning the results of the election in those states. Although vigorous lobbying of government officials is permissible, the scope and baseless character of the President’s personal intrusion into the machinery of the electoral process at the local and state levels is unprecedented, and the context in which it has taken place cannot be ignored: Election officials in Georgia, Pennsylvania, Arizona, and other states have faced intense pressure and acrimony from the President’s supporters, including death threats.<sup>1</sup>

In an especially notorious case, the President called the Georgia Secretary of State on January 2, and, during the call, stated that “I just want to find 11,780 votes”—i.e., enough to overcome the certified margin in the state—and raised the specter of possible criminal liability against him if he did not comply with the President’s demands.

These efforts ultimately failed, and the states performed their duty to certify the proper slates of electors, chosen by their voters. With options to overturn the election narrowing, the President and his enablers trained their sights on the Vice President and Congress as they prepared to certify the result of the electoral college votes. The President pressured the Vice President to refuse to accept the electoral votes of three states—Arizona, Georgia, and Pennsylvania—despite the fact that the Vice President has no legal authority to do so—in order to prevent certification of the presidential election. When that failed, the President exhorted his supporters to go to the Capitol, which they then stormed, disrupting the tally of electoral votes. At least five people died in the resulting chaos.

<sup>1</sup> In at least one case, the President’s pressure was effective: in Wayne County, Michigan, which includes Detroit, two local elections officials attempted to rescind their votes to certify election results roughly 24 hours after being contacted by the President.

Taken together, these acts and others provide evidence of a sustained and concerted attempt on the part of President Trump and his supporters to overturn the results of what his own Department of Homeland Security has called the most secure election in history. The fact that the President was unsuccessful does not and cannot absolve him from facing appropriate consequences for his actions, including criminal penalties if warranted.

Criminal Violations of Federal Civil Rights Laws. As the Department of Justice well knows,<sup>2</sup> numerous federal laws protect voter participation and the integrity of our elections. Among them is Section 241 of Title 18 of the United States Code, a key civil rights statute, which prohibits conspiracies “to injure, oppress, threaten, or intimidate any person in any State, Territory, Commonwealth, Possession, or District in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States, or because of his having so exercised the same.” If the President engaged in acts to prevent the vote of citizens of the United States from being counted and taking effect, those actions amount to unlawful election interference. For example, the President of the United States, during his call with officials from Georgia, urged the officials to “find” precisely enough votes to swing the election in his favor and raised the specter of criminal prosecutions for the officials if they did not succumb to his will. That conversation and any other communications with Georgia officials deserve a thorough examination to determine whether they demonstrate an intent to deprive the people of Georgia of their right to vote, secured to them by the Constitution. There must be a full investigation into President Trump’s various acts that appear to have been intended to overturn or subvert the results of an election he lost. This should also include his actions on January 6, 2021, in relation to the mob attack on the U.S. Capitol.<sup>3</sup>

Requirement to Appoint a Special Counsel. Justice Department regulations require the Attorney General, or, in cases where the Attorney General is recused, the Acting Attorney General to appoint an outside counsel when a three-prong test is met. First, a “criminal investigation of a person or matter [must be] warranted.”<sup>4</sup> Second, the “investigation or prosecution of that person or matter by a United States Attorneys’ Office or litigating division of the Department of Justice would present a conflict of interest for the Department.”<sup>5</sup> Third, “under the circumstances it would be in the public interest to appoint an outside Special Counsel to assume responsibility for the matter.”<sup>6</sup> If the regulations’ three-prong test is met, then the Attorney General or Acting Attorney General must select a special counsel from outside the government who would have the authority to secure necessary resources for the investigation and prosecution and have full investigatory and prosecutorial powers.<sup>7</sup>

There is little doubt that an investigation is warranted in this matter. The President of the United States sought to coerce state officials to manufacture additional votes for him that would swing an election he lost in his favor. He has daily repeated falsely that the election was stolen from him and engaged in numerous other acts attempting to change, reject, subvert, or otherwise undermine the results. The franchise is at the very core of our democracy, and it is a crime to intentionally interfere with its exercise. For those reasons, a criminal investigation is warranted.

There would be a conflict of interest for the Department of Justice to pursue this investigation under its own authority. The Department of Justice is ultimately supervised by the President, a classic conflict of interest. Given the accusations made by President Trump and his efforts to misuse the Department of Justice's powers for personal gain, to avoid any appearance of bias, an independent special counsel is necessary to promote public trust in the process and to ensure the results of the investigation are respected by everyone, including those that support President Trump.

It would be in the public interest for an outside counsel to pursue this investigation. The integrity of our election is a gravely serious matter, and investigations into its systematic subversion should be conducted with the utmost integrity and clarity.

The faith of the people in their government and their trust in the government's ability to protect their right to vote and to ensure their vote will be counted have been imperiled by the actions of the President. A full investigation, and, if warranted, prosecution, by an independent special counsel are necessary to reveal any criminal activity that may have been perpetrated within the highest halls of power and to hold those responsible to account for their actions.

Thank you for your attention to this urgent request.

Sincerely,

Acting Attorney General Jeffrey A. Rosen
U.S. Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530-0001

Dear Acting Attorney General Rosen:

Yesterday was a dark, frightening, and shameful chapter in the annals of our nation's history. For the first time since the War of 1812, the United States Capitol was breached and invaded by armed, would-be insurrectionists bent on overthrowing a lawfully elected government. These invaders were not, however, agents of a foreign power commanded by a foreign sovereign, but American citizens directly incited to mob violence by an American President.

Many of the most critical enforcement and charging decisions will and should wait for the next Attorney General. However, the country cannot afford for the Department of Justice to sit on its hands in the coming weeks. This was not a spontaneous demonstration of legitimate grievance, but a planned criminal insurrection that must be investigated and prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. Swift and decisive action must be taken and this despicable attack on our democracy answered.

The Insurrectionists Must be Investigated. The plain language of 18 U.S.C. § 2384 is clearly applicable to a violent incursion onto government property with the intention of hindering the certification of a lawful election. Nor is that the only federal law that may apply to yesterday's actions. See, e.g., 18 U.S.C. §§ 111, 373, 1361, 2384. Each and every participant in this attempted coup must be identified, investigated, and held accountable.

The President, His Family, and Allied Officials Must be Held Accountable Under the Law. Yesterday's events did not happen in a vacuum. The path was paved by months of lies and wild conspiracy theories by President Trump, his family and closest associates, and Members of Congress who supported and legitimized his baseless allegations. The moral culpability of the president and his enablers is beyond dispute. There are also serious, fact-specific questions about the legal culpability of the president, his family, and other officials for directly inciting yesterday's attack. Immediately before the insurrectionist mob stormed the Capitol, the president made his wishes explicit, telling an angry crowd, "You'll never take back our country with weakness. You have to show strength and you have to be strong... We're going to walk down Pennsylvania Avenue, ...

and we're going to the Capitol, ... and we're going to try [to] give our Republicans... the kind of pride and boldness that they need to take back our country." Similar statements were made by members of Trump's family, his congressional allies, and others close to him. No one is above the law, and the Department of Justice must investigate those responsible without fear or favor. That must include the president, his family, his closest associates, and potentially culpable Members of Congress.

The President Must be Advised of Potential Legal Consequences of Abusing the Pardon Power.

Throughout his tenure, this president has made a practice of using his pardon power to the benefit of his ideological and personal allies. Many of yesterday's potentially criminal acts fall under federal law and are thus subject to the pardon power. However, the Office of Legal Counsel should advise the president that issuing a pardon under corrupt circumstances could render him vulnerable to prosecution when he leaves office in a few short weeks.

Even on a day where four people died, we should count ourselves fortunate that the immediate consequences of an armed attack on the seat of our nation's democracy were not worse. However, if those that perpetrated this attempted coup are not held accountable, the long-term consequences will be incalculable. Armed insurrection is not a legitimate part of the political process. If this is allowed to stand without accountability, there will be a next time, and that next time will be worse. The rule of law must prevail.

Sincerely,

Hon. Mitch McConnell, Majority Leader, United States Senate
Hon. Nancy Pelosi, Speaker, United States House of Representatives
Hon. Charles E. Schumer, Minority Leader, United States Senate
Hon. Kevin McCarthy, Minority Leader, United States House of Representatives
United States Capitol
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Leader McConnell, Speaker Pelosi, Leader Schumer, and Leader McCarthy:

As you know, yesterday, Wednesday, January 6th, 2021, the President of the United States, Donald J. Trump, and his co-conspirators, directly incited and encouraged an armed and violent insurrection against the government of the United States, with the express purpose of preventing the peaceful transfer of power and overturning the results of a free and fair election.

In the months leading up to yesterday's events, the President, members of his administration, and numerous elected members of his party, intentionally spread false and inflammatory claims regarding the legitimacy of the election, and both implicitly and explicitly promised violent or armed opposition to prevent the election from being certified and the President-Elect from taking office.

Yesterday, following the President's incitement, a mob attacked and violently forced entry into the United States Capitol Building, endangering the lives of Capitol Police, Members of Congress, and building staff, and causing a delay in the certification of the results of the recent presidential election.

In the course of their attack, the insurrectionists trespassed on and destroyed Federal property, including flagrantly looting the Capitol, and openly bragged about their exploits on social media. The attackers carried white supremacist symbols including the flag known as the "Confederate battle flag," as well as anti-Semitic and fascist symbols including swastikas. At the same time as many were carrying these symbols of the enemies of the United States, some of the attackers were observed removing the flag of the United States, throwing it to the ground, and replacing it with a flag bearing the name of President Donald J. Trump.

Respectfully, we draw your attention to 18 U.S. Code § 2383, which states: "Whoever incites, sets on foot, assists, or engages in any rebellion or insurrection against the authority of the United States or the laws thereof, or gives aid or comfort thereto, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both; and shall be incapable of holding any office under the United States."

In addition, we draw your attention to the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, which states: "No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof."

In light of yesterday's appalling events, we, the undersigned members of the New York State Senate, call on the United States Congress to hold President Donald J. Trump accountable for inciting an insurrection against the government of the United States, using all avenues available, up to and including impeachment and immediate removal from office.

In addition, we call on Congress to hold accountable any members of Congress who may have incited, encouraged, assisted, or offered aid and comfort to insurrectionists, using all avenues available, up to and including expulsion of members.

We further call on the United States Department of Justice to thoroughly, transparently, and impartially investigate the incidents of Wednesday, January 6th, and bring to justice anyone and everyone involved, including the President of the United States and his co-conspirators.

As elected representatives of the people of the State of New York, we stand by the two hundred forty-four year old democratic and pluralistic promise of the United States of America. We will not allow it to be destroyed by the divisive and hateful actions of an aspiring petty tyrant and his followers.

Former Attorney General William Barr says President Donald Trump's conduct as a violent mob of his supporters stormed the U.S. Capitol was a "betrayal of his office and supporters."

In a statement to The Associated Press, Barr said Thursday that "orchestrating a mob to pressure Congress is inexcusable."

Barr was one of Trump's most loyal and ardent defenders in the Cabinet.

His comments come a day after angry and armed protesters broke into the U.S. Capitol, forcing Congress members to halt the ongoing vote to certify President-elect Joe Biden's election and then flee from the House and Senate chambers.

Barr resigned last month amid lingering tension over the president's baseless claims of election fraud and the investigation into Biden's son.

The top federal prosecutor in Washington D.C. said Thursday that President Trump was not off limits in his investigation of the events surrounding Wednesday's riot at the U.S. Capitol, saying "all actors" would be examined to determine if they broke the law.

Asked if federal agents and prosecutors will look at the incendiary statements made by speakers at Trump's rally shortly before a mob of his supporters breached security at the Capitol and wreaked havoc inside, acting U.S. Attorney Michael Sherwin said: "Yes, we are looking at all actors here, not only the people that went into the building, but ... were there others that maybe assisted or facilitated or played some ancillary role in this. We will look at every actor and all criminal charges."

Asked specifically if that included President Trump, who had urged the crowd to "fight like hell," before the rioting began, Sherwin replied, "We are looking at all actors here, and anyone that had a role, if the evidence fits the element of a crime, they're going to be charged."

Good Afternoon

News Nation is trying to confirm the following regarding Mayor Bowser not requesting additional deployment from other federal law enforcement.
Can you confirm this?

“To be clear, the District of Columbia is not requesting other federal law enforcement personnel and discourages any additional deployment without immediate notification to, and consultation with, MPD if such plans are underway,” Bowser wrote in a letter to acting U.S. Attorney General Jeffrey Rosen, acting Secretary of Defense Chris Miller, and Secretary of the Army Ryan D. McCarthy.

MURIEL BOWSER
MAYOR

January 5, 2021

The Honorable Jeffery Rosen
Acting United States Attorney General
950 Pennsylvania Ave, NW
Washington, DC 20530

The Honorable Ryan D. McCarthy
Secretary of the Army
101 Army Pentagon
Washington, DC 20310

The Honorable Chris Miller
Acting Secretary of Defense
1000 Defense Pentagon
Washington, DC 20301

Dear Acting Attorney General Rosen, Secretary McCarthy, and Acting Secretary Miller:

As the law enforcement agency charged with protecting residents and visitors throughout the District of Columbia, the Metropolitan Police Department (MPD) is prepared for this week's First Amendment activities. MPD has coordinated with its federal partners, namely the US Park Police, US Capitol Police and the US Secret Service—all of whom regularly have uniformed personnel protecting federal assets in the District of Columbia. This week, MPD has additional logistical support of unarmed members of the DC National Guard, who will work under the direction of, and in coordination with, MPD.

The District of Columbia Government has not requested personnel from any other federal law enforcement agencies. To avoid confusion, we ask that any request for additional assistance be coordinated using the same process and procedures.

We are mindful that in 2020, MPD was expected to perform the demanding tasks of policing large crowds while working around unidentifiable personnel deployed in the District of Columbia without proper coordination. Unidentifiable personnel—in many cases, armed—caused confusion among residents and visitors and could become a national security threat with no way for MPD and federal law enforcement to decipher armed groups.

To be clear, the District of Columbia is not requesting other federal law enforcement personnel and discourages any additional deployment without immediate notification to, and consultation with, MPD if such plans are underway. The protection of persons and property is our utmost concern and responsibility. MPD is well trained and prepared to lead the law enforcement, coordination and response to allow for the peaceful demonstration of First Amendment rights in the District of Columbia.

Sincerely,

Muriel Bowser
Mayor

Hey Marc,

we are piecing together a story on what happened yesterday, and are told that Acting Attorney General Jeff Rosen had signed off on the decision to use a light footprint of federal officers to help police protests yesterday, deferring to MPD/Bowser who had specifically asked for limited federal presence beyond the Guard members they had already requested. Would you have any comment on this?

Also we understand there was some intelligence re the pro-Trump groups coming to DC to storm the U.S. capitol - do you have any comment or guidance on why that wasn't considered urgent/credible?

Many thanks

Hi Marc,

Regarding the acting attorney general’s statement: “Earlier this afternoon, the Department of Justice sent hundreds of federal law enforcement officers and agents from the FBI, ATF, and the U.S. Marshals Service to assist the Capitol Police in addressing this unacceptable situation, and we intend to enforce the laws of our land.”

Can you clarify for me:

1. When specifically did Rosen (or whomever, correct me if it wasn’t Rosen) give the order to muster those “hundreds”?
2. When specifically did they arrive at the Capitol? Pictures from the late afternoon and early evening don’t seem to show an enlarged law-enforcement presence.
3. To the above point, can you clarify what specifically they did? Were they held in reserve or did they clear out the Capitol building and grounds? What did they use to do it, how many arrests did they make?
4. Who specifically was the on-scene commander?
5. What preparations beforehand did the Justice Department make for the march on the Capitol? There is a very stark contrast between how aggressively federal police phalanxed federal buildings during the Black Lives Matter protests and how easily the insurrectionists overran the Capitol. What accounts for that?

If it’s easier to call me, I’m (b)(6).

Thanks,
Spencer

Statement of Acting Attorney General Jeffrey A. Rosen

“Yesterday, our Nation watched in disbelief as a mob breached the Capitol Building and required federal and local law enforcement to help restore order. The Department of Justice is committed to ensuring that those responsible for this attack on our Government and the rule of law face the full consequences of their actions under the law. Our criminal prosecutors have been working throughout the evening with special agents and investigators from the U.S. Capitol Police, FBI, ATF, Metropolitan Police Department and the public to gather the evidence, identify perpetrators, and charge federal crimes where warranted. Some participants in yesterday’s violence will be charged today, and we will continue to methodically assess evidence, charge crimes and make arrests in the coming days and weeks to ensure that those responsible are held accountable under the law.”

Hi,

Below and attached are the digest articles formatted correctly. I will begin to pull TV eyes on this.

Kaei can you add these to what you have and send to me when you are done. I will add TV eyes and any straggler articles. Don't worry about local coverage unless it is actually DC local coverage and important.

Acting Attorney General Jeff Rosen condemned the violent rioters who stormed the Capitol on Wednesday and said federal agents were being deployed to quell the conflict.

In a statement Wednesday afternoon, hours after supporters of President Donald Trump attacked Capitol police and entered the building, Rosen said the Justice Department had sent federal agents to restore order on the Hill. The department was coordinating with the National Guard, Capitol and D.C. police, as well as the Departments of the Interior and Homeland Security, acting attorney general said.

"The violence at our Nation's Capitol Building is an intolerable attack on a fundamental institution of our democracy," Rosen said in his statement.

Rosen had previously posited sedition charges against anti-racism protesters who took to the streets amid a reckoning on police violence this summer. Those protesters had been a common target among the Trump administration, which branded itself as an advocate of "law and order." The Trump administration deployed federal agents to city streets across the country at the time, at times charging at and detaining protesters.

WASHINGTON — Acting Attorney General Jeffrey Rosen says the violent pro-Trump protest at the U.S. Capitol was an "intolerable attack on a fundamental institution" of democracy.

Rosen said Wednesday that the Justice Department has been working with U.S. Capitol Police and other federal law enforcement agencies to secure the Capitol. He says hundreds of federal agents from Justice Department agencies were sent to assist.

He called it an “unacceptable situation” and said federal prosecutors “intend to enforce the laws of our land.”

Dozens of President Donald Trump’s supporters breached the security perimeter and entered the Capitol as Congress was meeting, expected to vote and affirm Joe Biden’s presidential win. They were seen fighting with officers both inside the building and outside.

Police declared the Capitol to be secure about four hours later.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers are vowing an investigation into how law enforcement handled Wednesday’s violent breach at the Capitol, questioning whether a lack of preparedness allowed a mob to occupy and vandalize the building.

U.S. Capitol Police, who are charged with protecting Congress, turned to other law enforcement for help with the mob that overwhelmed the complex and sent lawmakers into hiding. Both law enforcement and Trump supporters deployed chemical irritants during the hourslong occupation of the complex before it was cleared Wednesday evening.

Four people died, one of them a woman who was shot and killed by police inside the Capitol. Three other people died after suffering “medical emergencies” related to the breach, said Robert Contee, chief of the city’s Metropolitan Police Department.

Police said 52 people were arrested as of Wednesday night, including 26 on the Capitol grounds. Fourteen police officers were injured, Contee said.

Rep. Zoe Lofgren, D-Calif., chairwoman of the House Administration Committee, said the breach “raises grave security concerns,” adding that her committee will work with House and Senate leaders to review the police response and its preparedness.

Lawmakers crouched under desks and donned gas masks while police futilely tried to barricade the building when people marched to the Capitol from a rally near the White House in support of President Donald Trump. Washington’s mayor instituted an evening curfew in an attempt to contain the violence.

Rep. Val Demings, D-Fla., a former police chief, said it was “painfully obvious” that Capitol police “were not prepared for today. I certainly thought that we would have had a stronger show of force, that there would have been steps taken in the very beginning to make sure that there was a designated area for the protesters in a safe distance from the Capitol.”

In an interview with MSNBC Wednesday night, Demings said it appeared police were woefully understaffed, adding that “it did not seem that they had a clear operational plan to really deal with” thousands of protesters who descended on the Capitol following Trump’s complaints of a “rigged election.”

The rioters were egged on by Trump, who has spent weeks falsely attacking the integrity of the election and had urged his supporters to come to Washington to protest Congress’ formal approval of President-elect Joe Biden’s victory. The protests interrupted those proceedings for nearly seven hours.

The mob broke windows, entered both the Senate and House chambers and went into the offices of lawmakers, including House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif.

Demings said there were “a lot of unanswered questions and I’m damn determined to get answers to those questions about what went wrong today.”

A police spokeswoman could not immediately be reached for comment late Wednesday.

Rep. Karen Bass, D-Calif., said she was outraged to see accounts on social media of a Capitol Police officer posing for a photo with a protester. “Would you take a selfie with someone who was robbing a bank?” she asked. “I can’t imagine if a couple of thousand of (Black Lives Matters) protesters had descended on the Capitol ... that there would be 13 people arrested.”

Rep. Tim Ryan, D-Ohio, suggested there could be leadership changes at the Capitol police.

“I think it’s pretty clear that there’s going to be a number of people who are going to be without employment very, very soon because this is an embarrassment both on behalf of the mob, and the president, and the insurrection, and the attempted coup, but also the lack of professional planning and dealing with what we knew was going to occur,” Ryan said.

Acting Attorney General Jeffrey Rosen condemned the rioters who forced their way into the Capitol Wednesday, saying the Department of Justice (DOJ) would “enforce the laws of our land.”

“The violence at our Nation’s Capitol Building is an intolerable attack on a fundamental institution of our democracy,” Rosen wrote in a statement, pledging to work with various federal and municipal law enforcement agencies. “We intend to enforce the laws of our land.”

The statement came hours after rioters interrupted debate in both chambers as lawmakers were gearing up to formally certify President-elect Joe Biden’s victory.

Rosen said DOJ responded by directing officers from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives and U.S. Marshals to assist “to assist the Capitol Police in addressing this unacceptable situation.”

Rosen, previously the deputy attorney general, has been in the role since Dec. 23, after then-Attorney General William Barr resigned as President Trump pressured him to appoint a special council to investigate Biden’s son, Hunter, over tax allegations.

The tone of Rosen’s statement differs significantly from those previously issued by Barr, who, like Trump, frequently criticized left-leaning protestors.

He was particularly vocal as Black Lives Matter protests spread across the country in May and June, adopting Trump's concern for respect for law enforcement and damage at various monuments.

"Federal law enforcement actions will be directed at apprehending and charging the violent radical agitators who have hijacked peaceful protest and are engaged in violations of federal law," Barr wrote in May. "The violence instigated and carried out by Antifa and other similar groups in connection with the rioting is domestic terrorism and will be treated accordingly."

Just days later, Barr personally ordered law enforcement to push back protestors from Lafayette Square outside of the White House as officers cleared the area with chemical irritants.

1/7 What happened at the Capitol 'was domestic terrorism' Washington Post

Meryl Kornfield

After supporters of President Trump descended on the U.S. Capitol building, hoping to stop the counting of electoral college votes, lawmakers and experts alike repeated a phrase to describe the violent mob: "domestic terrorists."

"Those who performed these reprehensible acts cannot be called protesters; no, these were rioters and insurrectionists, goons and thugs, domestic terrorists," Senate Minority Leader Charles E. Schumer (D-N.Y.) said in a speech after lawmakers reconvened. "They do not represent America."

"What happened today was domestic terrorism," GOP spokesman Michael Ahrens tweeted. "Our soldiers have died carrying the American flag into battle for our freedom. To see that flag used in the name of unfounded conspiracy theories is a disgrace to the nation, and every decent American should be disgusted by it."

Members of both political parties pointed to the destruction of government property, threats to law enforcement and two explosive devices found near the Capitol as acts of terrorism as far-right extremist groups rallied in the nation's capital to contest the results of the presidential election. In the media, CNN executives told the organization's journalists that they could refer to the siege as "domestic terrorism."

National security experts agreed with that assessment, comparing the aggressive takeover of the federal landmark to the FBI's definition of domestic terrorism: "Violent, criminal acts committed by individuals and/or groups to further ideological goals stemming from domestic influences, such as those of a political, religious, social, racial, or environmental nature."

The FBI, which is investigating the violence, declined to comment when asked if the raid was considered domestic terrorism.

But the agency has acknowledged that homegrown violent extremism has become an increasingly prevalent threat, especially in the past four years.

"A majority of the domestic terrorism cases that we've investigated are motivated by some version of what you might call white supremacy, but it includes other things as well," FBI Director Christopher A. Wray told Congress in 2019.

In April, the State Department designated the Russian Imperial Movement as "Specially Designated Global Terrorists," the first time in history the government classified a white supremacist group as a terrorist threat.

Kid glove treatment of pro-Trump mob contrasts with strong-arm police tactics against Black Lives Matter, activists say

Even members of groups that have publicly supported Trump, such as the Proud Boys and the “boogaloo” movement, have faced prosecution after last summer’s unrest.

But the violence Wednesday indicates how anti-government, white supremacy and other far-right groups are still able to subvert law enforcement, even as their plans were widely shared on social media. Despite the masses that breached the Capitol, only 52 arrests were made, according to D.C. police.

“The fact that the planning to assault the Capitol happened in public shows the bankruptcy of the intelligence apparatus that has been built since 9/11,” Michael German, a former FBI special agent and Brennan Center for Justice’s Liberty and National Security Program fellow, told The Post.

The United States has no domestic terrorism statute, and concerns that the government could infringe on citizens’ constitutional protections of speech and assembly have hampered the ability to respond to threats, experts say.

Recent intelligence assessments focusing on Black and environmental rights extremists have allowed some white supremacy and anti-government groups to act with impunity, German said.

“That has conditioned them to believe they are authorized to act this way,” he said. “So it’s not surprising at all that you would see people who aren’t covering their faces, aren’t trying to hide their identity, attacking police officers and invading and vandalizing the Capitol and disrupting our democracy in the process.”

After the largely White mob was allowed to leave the Capitol mostly unscathed, Black Lives Matter protesters compared the police treatment with their own confrontations with law enforcement.

The unrest could also encourage further violence, experts warned.

On their social media channels, white supremacists and neo-Nazi groups have celebrated the disruption of the election process, said Colin Clarke, a senior research fellow at the Soufan Center, a nonprofit think tank focused on global security issues. In one meme posted on Telegram, an app used by these fringe groups, the woman who died after she was shot in the Capitol building is lauded and compared to a photo of a Black person instigating violence.

“I truly think that the imagery that we’re seeing already today from the Capitol is going to serve as critical propaganda for militia groups, for neo-Nazis and for far-right extremist groups,” Clarke said. “I think what they gained today was so valuable for this movement.”

Clarke said the groups have grown online in recent years with the spread of conspiracy theories, and Trump’s recent baseless claims that the election was stolen has further enraged them.

After the election, Clarke warned in an op-ed in the Los Angeles Times that Trump’s rhetoric could encourage a “sizable minority” that the government is illegitimate a catalyst for past uprisings internationally.

“I’ve seen this play out in other countries,” he told The Post. “I’m just shocked to see now playing out in my country.”

Aruna Viswantha and Sadie Gurman

WASHINGTON Federal authorities had planned to deal with protests this week with a relatively small, minimally visible presence, according to law-enforcement officials, hoping to avoid inflaming tensions as a show of force had done during unrest last year in Portland, Ore., and other cities.

That approach seemed to have backfired on Wednesday, when thousands of pro-Trump rioters surrounded the U.S. Capitol and some easily breached the barricades and stormed the building, with one woman fatally shot by Capitol Police, according to law-enforcement officials, and three others dead in what the city's police chief described as "medical emergencies."

Some rioters fired what he called "chemical irritants" at officers who were guarding the complex to gain access to the building.

The small group of Capitol Police officers guarding the building as lawmakers began a joint session of Congress to count the 2020 electoral votes was quickly outnumbered as rioters approached the building. Once inside, they broke into lawmakers' offices and roamed freely.

Lawmakers were forced to shelter in place and halt debate over the ratification of President-elect Joe Biden's Electoral College win following rioters breaching the Capitol building.

Trump gives speech near the White House at 'Save America Rally', afterwards instructing attendees to march down Pennsylvania Ave.

Rioters gathered on the Capitol lawn as the Senate began to vote on certifying the election results.

Officials said they had expected a repeat of relatively minor scuffles between far-right and far-left factions that broke out after dark at similar protests in November.

"The Capitol Police were unprepared for the sheer size of the protest," said David Gomez, a retired FBI executive. Once the rioters barged into the Capitol, other federal law enforcement agencies were slow to respond, either out of deference to President Trump or because of a lack of experience with dealing with riots, which isn't their primary mission, Mr. Gomez said. "Up until they breached the Capitol, the possibility existed that it was going to be a large protest that didn't cross those barricades. Once they did that [law enforcement personnel] were overwhelmed and couldn't respond quickly enough," he said.

Defense Department officials had previously said they anticipated around 350 members of the D.C. national guard would be enough to support Washington, D.C., police during the protests this week, mainly to assist with traffic control. They wanted to avoid the optics of having any U.S. military personnel on the steps of the U.S. Capitol, and ordered the officers to avoid straying east of 9th Street in downtown Washington, blocks from the Capitol grounds, officials said.

After the building was breached, the Defense Department announced it would activate another 1,100 D.C. National Guard troops, but it was unclear if they would be deployed to the Capitol or elsewhere in the district.

The response was a marked difference from the way in which the Trump administration responded to protests over racial injustice last year, in which federal agents in riot gear sometimes showed up in force. In June, for example, federal law-enforcement officers were widely criticized for using tear gas to clear a largely peaceful crowd from Lafayette Square near the White House shortly before Mr. Trump made a visit to St. John's Episcopal Church, which is adjacent to the park, to stand outside with a Bible.

"We have fully activated the D.C. National Guard to assist federal and local law enforcement as they work to peacefully address the situation," said Acting Defense Secretary Christopher Miller. "We are prepared to provide additional support as necessary and appropriate as requested by local authorities."

Late Wednesday, New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, a Democrat, said his state would send 1,000 National Guard troops to D.C. "NY stands ready to help ensure the will of the American people is safely carried out," he tweeted.

Acting Attorney General Jeffrey Rosen condemned the events at the Capitol as "an intolerable attack on a fundamental institution of our democracy." Mr. Rosen said the Justice Department sent agents from the FBI, U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, and the U.S. Marshals Service to help Capitol Police.

Also, officers from Washington's Metropolitan Police Department were sent to the Capitol to assist in restoring order, clearing the building and establishing a perimeter, Mayor Muriel Bowser said. At her request, the Maryland, New Jersey and Virginia state police had deployed to help and she invoked a mutual-aid agreement with police departments in several surrounding jurisdictions. As of Wednesday night, there were at least 52 arrests, including four for carrying pistols without licenses, one for possession of a prohibited weapon and 47 for curfew violations and unlawful entry. Twenty six of the arrests were on U.S. Capitol grounds, police said.

The U.S. Capitol Police is the federal law enforcement agency that protects members of Congress and Congressional buildings, with around 1,900 officers, according to its website.

The incidents they encounter are normally more minor than those of other police departments that patrol the streets and investigate cases, but the force expanded its ranks after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, and again when it merged with the Library of Congress police in 2009.

They were on the scene and suffered injuries themselves when Rep. Steve Scalise (R, La.) was shot in 2017 at an outdoor practice for the annual charity congressional baseball game. Lawmakers also present at the practice have attributed their survival to the actions of the Capitol police.

Sen. Rand Paul (R., Ky.), who was in the batting cage at the time of the shootings, said at the time on MSNBC: "I probably heard 50, 60 shots," adding: "Everybody probably would have died except for the fact that the Capitol Police was there."

Still, Wednesday's breach by the pro-Trump rioters raises questions about whether Capitol Police are equipped to handle more widespread threats and violence.

Former Senate historian Donald Ritchie said the Capitol Police might be excused for misreading the pro-Trump crowd. "This is just so totally out of character for the way in which Americans protest or Americans congregate or show their political feelings," Mr. Ritchie said, noting that the Capitol has seen massive protests over myriad issues over its history. "I'm astonished that it happened," he said, "for the same reasons the police were astonished that it happened."

The coronavirus pandemic also posed new challenges for the police department.

As Congress has remained open for business during the pandemic, at least a dozen officers had tested positive for the coronavirus by May 2020, and were concerned about their working conditions, The Wall Street Journal previously reported.

1/7 How Might the U.S. Capitol Rioters Face Justice? Bloomberg

Erik Larson and Joel Rosenblatt

A violent mob of Donald Trump supporters stormed the U.S. Capitol on Jan. 6 amid the president's final push for a second term in office despite his election loss by more than 7 million votes. Intruders, some of them wearing tactical gear and waving Trump flags, broke windows and trashed offices in a chaotic scene that forced Congress to halt its proceeding to formally certify President-elect Joe Biden's win. Vice President Mike Pence vowed that "those involved will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law," and Biden said the incident wasn't a protest, it was "insurrection." The slow response by police and the relatively few arrests have left observers wondering if the mob would face justice.

1. What crimes did the attackers potentially commit?

Legal experts say a wide variety of crimes -- everything from vandalism to sedition -- occurred and prosecutors could charge individuals even if they walked away from the incident without being detained. Several police officers were injured in the day's events and two explosive devices were recovered. Alongside misdemeanors and felonies related to assault of law enforcement officers, firearms offenses, breaking and entering and trespassing, members of the mob could be charged with the "willful injury of federal property." Individuals may also face more serious charges include sedition and insurrection, which would require proving intent to disrupt or even overthrow the government. A sedition conviction carries a maximum prison term of 20 years.

President Trump issued an executive order during the Black Lives Matter protests in June saying that his administration would prosecute to the fullest anyone who did harm to federal property, which carries a sentence of up to 10 years in prison. There also may be prosecutions under the Anti-Riot Act, which makes it a crime to cross state lines with the intent to incite a riot -- or even just encourage another person to riot. The government can also choose to seek prison sentences of up to 5 years for those found guilty of engaging in "civil disorder," by impeding or attempting to impede the actions of law enforcement officers carrying out their official duties.

The grounds of the U.S. Capitol have their own specific statute governing unlawful activities, making it illegal for a person to "step or climb on, remove, or in any way injure any statue, seat, wall, fountain, or other erection or architectural feature, or any tree, shrub, plant, or turf, in the Grounds." There are also restrictions on blocking streets, carrying a firearm or using "loud, threatening, or abusive language" on the grounds with the aim of disrupting the work of Congress. The law also prohibits anyone who is not a member of Congress from appearing on the House or Senate floor without express permission.

2. Could Trump face charges?

Possibly. There have been calls to hold him accountable for the crowd's actions, after he told supporters earlier in the day that he would never concede the election. "He was basically encouraging people to do it," said former federal prosecutor Jennifer Rodgers. "He's saying they have to fight and be strong and march to the Capitol -- every step of the way he was encouraging them." It's not clear that a sitting president can be charged with a crime, but Trump could be charged after he leaves office. Some members of Congress, including Representative Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, have called for his impeachment, again.

3. What evidence could be used in prosecutions?

There's a ton of evidence available to prosecutors, including forensic proof such as fingerprints. Much of the criminal activity took place on live television, providing ample footage that can be combined with facial-recognition technology to identify suspects. Cameras inside the Capitol captured the action as did the social-media feeds of rioters themselves. Plus, suspects may have social-media postings that provide evidence of their intent. The Federal Bureau of Investigations has posted an online form seeking "tips and digital media depicting rioting and violence in the U.S. Capitol Building and surrounding area." Legal experts say it's likely that even before the mayhem unfolded, undercover investigators were prowling social media to monitor whoever was organizing it.

4. Will Trump's Justice Department charge the rioters?

There isn't much time before Trump leaves office. Acting Attorney General Jeff Rosen said Wednesday that the agency intends "to enforce the laws of our land." The department can start gathering evidence now, but decisions about how vigorous the prosecution should be are more likely to be made by the next attorney general since it takes time to build cases from such a chaotic event. "The Department of Justice should be looking at it right now," Maryland Attorney General Brian Frosh said. "These are potentially really serious crimes. They were trying to stop the election of Joe Biden and they shut down Congress to try to do it. These are not petty crimes." The long arm of the law may also follow troublemakers to wherever they came from. U.S. Attorney Peter McCoy in South Carolina said "anyone who traveled from the District of South Carolina with intent to aid this travesty or commit acts of destruction will be prosecuted" by his office.

5. Can Trump pardon the mob?

He can pardon them for any federal crimes. Trump has issued several pardons to supporters and controversial criminals. In this case, the president could even theoretically issue a blanket pardon that would apply to anyone involved in the assault on the Capitol, even if he didn't know their names and they haven't all been formally charged. Criminal defense lawyer Jon Sheldon said that while there is little guidance in the law, there have been other instances of presidents granting "group" pardons, including a case where the Supreme Court interpreted an 1865 pardon by President Andrew Johnson as allowing attorneys from the Confederacy to practice despite a law requiring them to swear that they never engaged in hostilities toward the U.S. If Trump were to issue a pardon, it's likely prosecutors would file charges in some cases anyway to test the president's authority.

6. Why weren't more people arrested?

Despite the fact that there were thousands of people on the Capitol grounds, there were no mass arrests. As of 9:30 pm Wednesday, 52 people had been arrested by the D.C. police department for alleged activities related to the riot. Four arrests were for carrying pistols without licenses, one was for possession of a prohibited weapon and 47 others were arrests related to curfew violations and unlawful entry. Twenty-six of these 52 arrests were made on U.S. Capitol grounds. A two-minute video posted to Twitter by a reporter for a Canadian news outlet appeared to show dozens of people freely walking out of the Capitol through a door being held open by a uniformed police officer. In contrast, Black Lives Matter protesters were violently attacked by police during peaceful protests near the White House in June, with law enforcement officers using batons and deploying tear gas against people holding signs in parks. According to a tally by the Associated Press, more than 10,000 people had been arrested as of early June in the wake of national protests about police brutality. "We shudder to think how police departments would have responded had Black and Brown individuals stormed a government building to protest police brutality," said Anthony Romero, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union.

1/6 Authorities Send Reinforcements To Help Secure The Capitol NPR

Federal and state authorities scrambled to send forces to help secure the U.S. Capitol after it was overrun by pro-Trump extremists who stormed the building on Wednesday.

The FBI deployed agents from its Washington Field Office in response to a request for assistance from the U.S. Capitol Police, which is responsible for securing the Capitol complex. The FBI also said it responded to reports of "suspicious devices" and that it continues to investigate.

Investigators from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives also took part in the response. The agency said it deployed a Special Response Team, its version of a SWAT unit, as well as agents from its Washington and Baltimore field divisions to help out at the Capitol.

The Justice Department said acting Attorney General Jeffrey Rosen is coordinating with the department's law enforcement partners to provide support for the Capitol Police.

The Defense Department, meanwhile, said the D.C. National Guard has been mobilized to support the security response.

Pentagon spokesman Jonathan Hoffman said on Twitter that the acting defense secretary, Christopher Miller, has been in touch with congressional leadership, while Army Secretary Ryan McCarthy has been working with the local Washington, D.C., government.

Hoffman said the law enforcement response will be led by the Justice Department.

Reinforcements were also being deployed from the neighboring states of Virginia and Maryland.

Virginia Gov. Ralph Northam said on Twitter that he is sending 200 state troopers and a contingent from the state National Guard. Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan said that he's sending state troopers to help out as well and that he's also instructed his state's National Guard to call up a "rapid response force to support law enforcement and restore order."

New Jersey Gov. Phil Murphy later joined the governors in announcing a contingent headed for the District.

It was not immediately clear when those reinforcements would arrive. D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser ordered a curfew for 6 p.m. in the District as authorities sought to restore order on Capitol Hill and its environs.

1/7 FBI seeking help from public to identify those in Capitol breach Fox

David Aaro

The FBI is seeking help from the public to identify individuals involved in a security breach at the U.S. Capitol on Wednesday.

The agency tweeted a statement early Thursday saying it was seeking information that will assist in "identifying individuals who are actively instigating violence."

"If you have witnessed unlawful violent actions, we urge you to submit any information, photos, or videos that could be relevant at fbi.gov/USCapitol," the FBI wrote.

During the chaos, these individuals broke windows, entered both the Senate and House chambers and entered into the offices of lawmakers, including House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif.

Robert J. Contee III, the city's top cop, said during a press conference late Wednesday there have been at least 52 arrests 47 because of curfew violations.

Contee added that four people died, including a woman who was shot inside the Capitol.

"One adult female and two adult males appear to have suffered from separate medical emergencies, which resulted in their deaths," he said of the other three people who died.

At least 14 police officers were injured, according to authorities. Lawmakers also vowed to investigate how law enforcement handled Wednesday's violent breach at the Capitol.

The FBI is seeking tips to assist in identifying those "actively instigating violence" in Washington, D.C. after the Capitol was stormed by supporters of President Donald Trump in an unprecedented display of chaos.

National Guard troops were mobilized to deal with the insurrection, after crowds descended on the building as Congress convened to certify the Electoral College results.

Four people died amid the violence, according to Washington D.C.'s Metropolitan Police Department. One woman was shot and later died in hospital, while woman and two men suffered medical emergencies which resulted in their deaths. Officers arrested more than 52 people.

An FBI webpage has been set up for people to submit details which could assist its investigations into possible violations of federal law.

"The FBI is seeking information that will assist in identifying individuals who are actively instigating violence in Washington, DC. The FBI is accepting tips and digital media depicting rioting and violence in the U.S. Capitol Building and surrounding area in Washington, DC, on January 6, 2021," a form on the agency's site reads.

"If you have witnessed unlawful violent actions, we urge you to submit any information, photos, or videos that could be relevant at fbi.gov/USCapitol."

It urged people to use its form to submit media which was "related to possible violations of federal law committed."

"Our goal is to preserve the public's constitutional right to protest by protecting everyone from violence and other criminal activity," the form concluded.

Newsweek has contacted the Justice Department for further comment.

On Wednesday, Acting Attorney General Jeffrey A. Rosen said agents from the FBI had been sent to assist Capitol Police in addressing the situation.

"The violence at our Nation's Capitol Building is an intolerable attack on a fundamental institution of our democracy," Rosen said.

The violence at the Capitol has been widely condemned, with President-elect Joe Biden labeling the events an "assault on the most sacred of American undertakings, the doing of the people's business."

"To storm the Capitol, to smash windows, to occupy offices, and to threaten the safety of duly elected officials is not protest. It's insurrection" he said in a public address.

The storming of the Capitol came as thousands of Trump supporters gathered for a rally, which the president attended. He continued to make allegations of the election having been rigged, despite having failed to substantiate claims of irregularities which would be substantial enough to alter the outcome.

"We will never give up, we will never concede. You don't concede when there's theft involved," Trump told the crowd on Wednesday.

William M. Arkin

They knew it could happen. They feared that Donald Trump would pull a "Samson," bringing down the whole house on top of him in the two weeks before he left the White House. Officials from the FBI, the Secret Service, Homeland Security, the District of Columbia government, the Pentagon, the National Guard, and the Joint Task Force National Capital Region who spoke to Newsweek last weekend on condition of anonymity, all talked about the potential for protesters and militias and paramilitary goons egged on by the president to storm Capitol Hill and even the Capitol building itself.

A half-dozen sources spoke openly about this very scenario: that the mob would take over the "People's House" and that somehow the system would break down. They speculated that this could occur because of the president's treasonous behavior, because of leadership deficiencies in the federal government and Congress, because of the extreme partisanship of the moment, and because everyone was looking the wrong way.

The blame was spread around, with the FBI dismissing the Department of Homeland Security as a bunch of amateurs and thugs; the military shaking their heads about President Trump and an absent White House leadership; Homeland Security department members mocking the District of Columbia's mayor, Attorney General, and police; and everyone making clear that "the problem" was someone else's.

It was clear that the very law enforcement and security people who in theory were responsible for maintaining order in our capital city weren't ready, weren't well led, weren't organized properly, and weren't impartial.

The patchwork quilt of roles and responsibilities created post-9/11, and the immense public illiteracy regarding all things national security, have weakened America.

Many people in official Washington had tolerated and even humored President Trump's sedition and incitement to riot. FBI sources said the White House wasn't ordering any new security measures, wasn't ordering any additional resources, and wasn't coordinating any extension of the so-called inaugural "National Security Special Event" timeline to include this week (it officially covers January 15-21). It wasn't doing those things, the sources said, because presidential aides were afraid that any movement might provoke Donald Trump to do something even worse than whatever he was already planning.

Several of the sources said the U.S. Capitol Police with a strength of more than 2,000 law enforcement officers might not act, or might be intentionally stood down, because many Congressional Republican leaders wanted the mob to amplify their shrinking voices that the election was illegitimate. There has been no confirmation of this claim. But it's notable that it took less than 15 minutes for the mob to gain entrance to the Capitol Building--and then virtually nothing was done to eject them.

Sources from other departments said the Department of Homeland Security which had declined to use its mammoth army of law enforcement officers to suppress protests in Portland and other cities, ostensibly because they were needed in DC to protect government buildings was making itself virtually absent from the scene for the transition. The Acting Secretary of Homeland Security Chad Wolf is actually in the Middle East, evidently not thinking that the threat was severe enough for him to be in Washington.

The DHS has been indiscriminate in using its law enforcement arms, now the largest in the federal government Secret Service agents, ICE, Customs and Border Protection, Homeland Security Investigations, Federal Air Marshals and even the Federal Protective Service to intervene over the past year when protests didn't involve pro-Trump, right wing mobs. The Capitol Police did come out in force when Black Lives Matter and Antifa approached Capitol Hill last summer.

FBI sources told Newsweek that the Bureau was closely watching the various protestors converging on the city, that the Department of Justice was taking the law enforcement lead no matter what other agencies of the government were doing, and that the Bureau had a good sense of the protestors, the size of the crowd, the leaders, and the dangers. The intelligence apparently did not anticipate what the news media was openly speculating about and what the president and his supporters were publicly tweeting.

The District of Columbia government was the only prepared and ready force on Wednesday. Mayor Muriel Bowser activated 340 District National Guardsmen and women before Wednesday. In keeping with a desire not to use soldiers to enforce the law, she kept them unarmed and assigned them to traffic control and other duties to relieve more police officers of the Metropolitan Police Department 3,800 strong, the sixth largest municipal police department in the nation to enforce the laws.

The riots and the District's response underscored the argument for making D.C. a state, so that the mayor wouldn't have to ask permission of the Secretary of the Army to activate the DC Guard.

And finally there's the Pentagon. Donald Trump's walk into Lafayette Park last June, accompanied by a gaggle of federal, National Guard and local police forces, jolted the U.S. military. Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Mark Milley, in uniform, joined the president's entourage, giving the impression that the uniformed military supported Trump and the forces surrounding him. Gen. Milley was pummeled for his "loss of situational awareness," for being there. He publicly apologized.

The Lafayette Park incident and Milley's apology shifted Pentagon culture; ranking officers firmly rejected talk of martial law and openly declared that the U.S. armed forces had no role to play in the election or the transition. Now the Pentagon is being dragged in anyhow, in the form of the National Guard: the last non-partisan, honorable and duty-bound institution in Washington.

But the political structure has failed spectacularly, creating and living with a federal government so faulty that it gives the impression "the military" is the only institution that can be trusted, that it is the only one that can and will always save the day. The Congressional leadership cheered when they heard that the National Guard was on the way to the Capitol today.

To restore the rule of law and ensure accountability for protecting America's democracy, the post-Trump reforms must be as dramatic as the ones that followed 9/11. "The military is the only answer" is not just a false belief: it also weakens the civil institutions on which our nation depends.

1/6 Riot Response Hampered by No Clear Federal Chain of Command Newsweek

Naveed Jamali and Tom O'Connor

Even after the federal authorities declared the U.S. Capitol Building cleared of riotous protesters supportive of President Donald Trump, remaining mobs of protesters streaming across district and state lines pose a lingering threat that the officials say the federal government is failing to sufficiently address.

Washington, D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser has mobilized the entirety of the District's National Guard force to quell violent demonstrations that disrupted congressional proceedings to certify President-elect Joe Biden. She has requested backup from neighboring Virginia, where Governor Ralph Northam has also declared a state of emergency as a result of ongoing unrest in the area.

But with no federal agency taking charge outside of federal property, one member of the D.C. National Guard currently on orders in the District, who spoke to Newsweek on the condition of anonymity, described a chaotic atmosphere that left the chain of command unprepared and unclear.

"What's most concerning is the lack of preparation here," the DC National Guard member said. "I don't know who in the chain of command dropped the ball. There was no plan and we were not in position when we needed to be."

With one woman shot dead during the siege, armed standoffs within the congressional chambers and multiple potential explosive devices discovered, the level of danger was clear, and the DC National Guard member felt irresponsibly placed in harm's way.

"We are also put at a needless risk," the DC National Guard member said, "going out to face a mass act of terrorism with no body armor or weapons."

The storming of the Capitol following repeated calls by Trump to challenge Biden's electoral certification is the first attack on the building since British forces burned the iconic structure more than two centuries ago during the War of 1812.

"The rest of the world is waking up to images of the U.S. Capitol being seized," a senior U.S. intelligence official told Newsweek. "This has not happened since 1814."

While federal agencies have offered assistance, no agency has been designated to be the lead agency to an expanding threat.

Now scenes of related disorder are reportedly appearing in other cities including Los Angeles, where bloody brawls broke out between Trump supporters and members of the Black Lives Matter movement, and in Olympia, Washington, where armed protesters have attempted to break into Governor Jay Inslee's residence. Gunmen also gathered at the Oregon capital of Salem to support Trump's efforts to overturn his electoral loss to Biden.

The FBI is among the federal agencies responding to the riot, though their role like other agencies is limited to providing assistance to the U.S. Capitol Police tasked with protecting the legislative building.

"The FBI has been deployed to assist our U.S. Capitol Police partners as requested in protection of federal property and public safety," an FBI spokesperson said in a statement sent to Newsweek.

The Pentagon is also on standby. Acting Defense Secretary Chris Miller issued a statement activating the D.C. National Guard to assist Capitol Police and offer additional services.

"We are prepared to provide additional support as necessary and appropriate as requested by local authorities," Miller said. "Our people are sworn to defend the Constitution and our democratic form of government and they will act accordingly."

The Department of Homeland Security reported that its personnel were also assisting Capitol Police.

"Federal Protective Service and Secret Service have been requested to provide assistance to Capitol Hill Police. They are fulfilling that request," a DHS spokesperson told Newsweek. "The Department of Homeland Security has stood up the DHS Virtual Situation Room to facilitate department and interagency communication and coordination, as we do for many large events in D.C."

Trump offered conflicting messages to the crowd, first telling them to remain peaceful before asking them to return home and then praising their efforts via Twitter, which then locked his account. His actions have caused many in the Republican Party to turn on him and condemn his inflammatory rhetoric.

One of the president's former political appointees to DHS described the situation to Newsweek as "an embarrassment to conservatives everywhere."

ABC News has obtained a photo of one of two suspected explosive devices discovered in Washington, D.C., Wednesday.

The suspected device in the photo appears to be wired with a timer and was found adjacent to the Republican National Committee headquarters on First Street, S.E.

After the initial device was discovered near the RNC, police searched the area near the Democratic National Committee headquarters building, a couple blocks away, and found a second device there under a bush.

Both buildings are a short distance from the U.S. Capitol, where violent protesters broke through police lines and stormed into the complex just over an hour after the devices were discovered.

"Two suspected explosive devices were rendered safe by the FBI and our law enforcement partners," the FBI said in a statement Wednesday evening.

Authorities are still working to determine whether the suspected devices were functional bombs, or only designed to appear like explosive devices, according to law enforcement sources.

Bomb technicians used water cannons to blast the devices to essentially break them apart and render them harmless.

Investigators are examining the recovered pieces to look for clues about how the devices was constructed and about the sources of the components, sources said.

Forensic experts are also conducting chemical analyses on any substances found in the devices to determine if they were filled with explosive materials.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, U.S. Capitol Police and the Metropolitan Police Department are assisting with the investigation.

"The investigation is ongoing," the FBI said.

1/6 US attorneys around the country condemn Capitol protest while FBI director remains silent ABC

Luke Barr and Alexander Mallin

Outgoing U.S. attorneys from around the country decried Wednesday's storming of the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C., with some pledging to charge any from their state who may be found to have violated federal laws.

At least 12 have thus far come out publicly to say they would charge those involved if they came from their jurisdictions.

Former U.S. attorney Zachary Terwilliger, a President Donald Trump appointee set to soon depart from his position leading the office the Eastern District of Virginia, called what happened at the Capitol a "tragedy."

"I was traveling the district saying goodbye to Team EDVA, hence my delay, as I just told them," he tweeted. "We have reached out to our colleagues at DOJ and DC USAO to offer any support in terms of search and arrest warrants. This is despicable, a travesty, and the darkest day since 9/11."

David DeVillers, the U.S. attorney from the Southern District of Ohio, tweeted outright that federal crimes were committed at the Capitol Wednesday.

"Make no mistake... Federal crimes were committed today at our nation's Capital building. Anyone who traveled from the Southern District of Ohio with the intent to commit such crimes will be prosecuted in the Southern District of Ohio," he said.

The FBI in a statement said they are helping their law enforcement partners, but thus far there has been no statement from FBI Director Christopher Wray himself.

In June, Wray commented on the civil unrest in the wake of George Floyd's death.

"In recent days, the violence, threat to life, and destruction of property that we've seen in some parts of the country jeopardizes the rights and safety of all citizens, including peaceful demonstrators. It has to stop. We're seeing people who are exploiting this situation to pursue violent, extremist agendas — anarchists like Antifa and other agitators," he said at the time.

"These individuals have set out to sow discord and upheaval, rather than join in the righteous pursuit of equality and justice. And by driving us apart, they are undermining the urgent work and constructive engagement of all those who are trying to bring us together — our community and religious leaders, our elected officials, law enforcement, and citizens alike. Many have suffered from the violence instigated through these radicals and extremists, including members of our own law enforcement family — officers killed or gravely injured while just doing their jobs, fulfilling their duty to the public by trying to keep everyone safe," Wray added.

Acting Attorney General Jeff Rosen, hours after recently-departed Attorney General William Barr had already released his own statement Wednesday condemning the violence at the Capitol, condemned what he described as an "intolerable attack on a fundamental institution of our democracy."

Earlier, when asked about Wednesday's events, the U.S. attorney's office in D.C. -- which would typically take jurisdiction in prosecuting those who have violated federal laws throughout the day and which aggressively prosecuted protesters involved in the unrest over the summer -- a spokesperson declined to comment to ABC News.

Acting Department of Homeland Security Deputy Secretary Ken Cuccinelli said that what he saw at the Capitol marked a "sad day for America" and he condemned the actions of those involved.

Erin Nealey Cox, the U.S. attorney from the Northern District of Texas, who is a member of the Department of Justice Task Force on Violent Anti-Government Extremists, called those who committed the attack on the Capitol "anarchists, not patriots."

Acting Attorney General Jeffrey Rosen says the violent pro-Trump mobs that stormed the U.S. Capitol was an "intolerable attack on a fundamental institution" of democracy.

Rosen said Wednesday that the Justice Department has been working with U.S. Capitol Police and other federal law enforcement agencies to secure the Capitol. He says hundreds of federal agents from Justice Department agencies were sent to assist.

He called it an "unacceptable situation" and said federal prosecutors "intend to enforce the laws of our land."

Dozens of President Donald Trump's supporters breached the security perimeter and entered the Capitol as Congress was meeting, expected to vote and affirm Joe Biden's presidential win. They were seen clashing with officers both inside the building and outside.

Police declared the Capitol to be secure about four hours later.

The FBI said it had dispatched with two suspicious devices that were uncovered in Washington after reports of improvised explosives on the grounds of the U.S. Capitol during Wednesday's rioting.

"Two suspected explosive devices were rendered safe by the FBI and our law enforcement partners," a spokesperson for the bureau said in a statement. "The investigation is ongoing."

The investigation came as rioters flooded the streets of Washington and invaded the Capitol to protest the defeat of President Donald Trump by President-elect Joe Biden in November's election.

The FBI said it had dispatched with two suspicious devices that were uncovered in Washington after reports of improvised explosives on the grounds of the U.S. Capitol during Wednesday's rioting.

"Two suspected explosive devices were rendered safe by the FBI and our law enforcement partners," a spokesperson for the bureau said in a statement. "The investigation is ongoing."

Rioters flooded the streets of Washington and invaded the Capitol to protest the defeat of President Donald Trump by President-elect Joe Biden in November's election.

The New York Times, citing three unnamed people who were briefed, reported earlier that an explosive device was found at the Republican National Committee headquarters and that the nearby Democratic National Committee headquarters was evacuated.

A spokesperson for the GOP said that RNC staff members were safely evacuated and that the device was detonated by a bomb squad.

Law enforcement was in the process of destroying improvised explosives on Wednesday afternoon, NBC News reported, but authorities were unsure if the devices were functional. One device resembled a pipe bomb.

Vice President Mike Pence and other senior elected leaders were rushed to safety and the Capitol complex was locked down after protesters broke past police and stormed the building.

Several law enforcement officials told NBC News on Wednesday evening that a woman who was shot in the building had died. At least five people were transported to a hospital, according to District of Columbia Fire and EMS.

Biden said in an address later in the day that democracy was under "unprecedented assault."

"It must end now. I call this mob to pull back and allow this work of democracy to go forward," Biden said.

Lawmakers were meeting to formally announce Biden's victory over Trump in the Electoral College, which has already certified Biden's win.

Trump has stoked false rumors of widespread voter fraud and encouraged his supporters to protest the result. After rioting broke out, the president urged his supporters to be peaceful even as he continued to baselessly claim that the election was stolen.

The FBI has reportedly sent a SWAT team into the Capitol Building as law enforcement struggles to quell a riot that forced Congress to evacuate.

Heavily armed SWAT members can be seen being led through the halls of an undisclosed building in the Capitol complex by police officers.

Joyce Karam of The National reported that the team is clearing the building while there are still rioters inside.

Rioters mobbed the Capitol as members of Congress met to certify electoral votes that will cement President-elect Joe Biden's win. The mob smashed through glass doors before bursting into the building, where some rioters brawled with police officers while others dispersed a fire extinguisher.

An unidentified female was killed after she had been shot in the neck amid the chaos, NBC News confirmed.

Acting Attorney General Jeff Rosen condemned the violent rioters who stormed the Capitol on Wednesday and said federal agents were being deployed to quell the conflict.

In a statement Wednesday afternoon, hours after supporters of President Donald Trump attacked Capitol police and entered the building, Rosen said the Justice Department had sent federal agents to restore order on the Hill. The department was coordinating with the National Guard, Capitol and D.C. police, as well as the Departments of the Interior and Homeland Security, acting attorney general said.

"The violence at our Nation's Capitol Building is an intolerable attack on a fundamental institution of our democracy," Rosen said in his statement.

Rosen had previously posited sedition charges against anti-racism protesters who took to the streets amid a reckoning on police violence this summer. Those protesters had been a common target among the Trump administration, which branded itself as an advocate of "law and order." The Trump administration deployed federal agents to city streets across the country at the time, at times charging at and detaining protesters.

WASHINGTON (AP) Lawmakers are vowing an investigation into how law enforcement handled Wednesday's violent breach at the Capitol, questioning whether a lack of preparedness allowed a mob to occupy and vandalize the building.

U.S. Capitol Police, who are charged with protecting Congress, turned to other law enforcement for help with the mob that overwhelmed the complex and sent lawmakers into hiding. Both law enforcement and Trump supporters deployed chemical irritants during the hourslong occupation of the complex before it was cleared Wednesday evening.

Four people died, one of them a woman who was shot and killed by police inside the Capitol. Three other people died after suffering “medical emergencies” related to the breach, said Robert Contee, chief of the city’s Metropolitan Police Department.

Police said 52 people were arrested as of Wednesday night, including 26 on the Capitol grounds. Fourteen police officers were injured, Contee said.

Rep. Zoe Lofgren, D-Calif., chairwoman of the House Administration Committee, said the breach “raises grave security concerns,” adding that her committee will work with House and Senate leaders to review the police response and its preparedness.

Lawmakers crouched under desks and donned gas masks while police futilely tried to barricade the building when people marched to the Capitol from a rally near the White House in support of President Donald Trump. Washington’s mayor instituted an evening curfew in an attempt to contain the violence.

Rep. Val Demings, D-Fla., a former police chief, said it was “painfully obvious” that Capitol police “were not prepared for today. I certainly thought that we would have had a stronger show of force, that there would have been steps taken in the very beginning to make sure that there was a designated area for the protesters in a safe distance from the Capitol.”

In an interview with MSNBC Wednesday night, Demings said it appeared police were woefully understaffed, adding that “it did not seem that they had a clear operational plan to really deal with” thousands of protesters who descended on the Capitol following Trump’s complaints of a “rigged election.”

The rioters were egged on by Trump, who has spent weeks falsely attacking the integrity of the election and had urged his supporters to come to Washington to protest Congress’ formal approval of President-elect Joe Biden’s victory. The protests interrupted those proceedings for nearly seven hours.

The mob broke windows, entered both the Senate and House chambers and went into the offices of lawmakers, including House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif.

Demings said there were “a lot of unanswered questions and I’m damn determined to get answers to those questions about what went wrong today.”

A police spokeswoman could not immediately be reached for comment late Wednesday.

Rep. Karen Bass, D-Calif., said she was outraged to see accounts on social media of a Capitol Police officer posing for a photo with a protester. “Would you take a selfie with someone who was robbing a bank?” she asked. “I can’t imagine if a couple of thousand of (Black Lives Matters) protesters had descended on the Capitol ... that there would be 13 people arrested.”

Rep. Tim Ryan, D-Ohio, suggested there could be leadership changes at the Capitol police.

“I think it’s pretty clear that there’s going to be a number of people who are going to be without employment very, very soon because this is an embarrassment both on behalf of the mob, and the president, and the insurrection, and the attempted coup, but also the lack of professional planning and dealing with what we knew was going to occur,” Ryan said.

Acting Attorney General Jeffrey Rosen condemned the rioters who forced their way into the Capitol Wednesday, saying the Department of Justice (DOJ) would “enforce the laws of our land.”

“The violence at our Nation’s Capitol Building is an intolerable attack on a fundamental institution of our democracy,” Rosen wrote in a statement, pledging to work with various federal and municipal law enforcement agencies. “We intend to enforce the laws of our land.”

The statement came hours after rioters interrupted debate in both chambers as lawmakers were gearing up to formally certify President-elect Joe Biden’s victory.

Rosen said DOJ responded by directing officers from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives and U.S. Marshals to assist “to assist the Capitol Police in addressing this unacceptable situation.”

Rosen, previously the deputy attorney general, has been in the role since Dec. 23, after then-Attorney General William Barr resigned as President Trump pressured him to appoint a special council to investigate Biden's son, Hunter, over tax allegations.

The tone of Rosen's statement differs significantly from those previously issued by Barr, who, like Trump, frequently criticized left-leaning protestors.

He was particularly vocal as Black Lives Matter protests spread across the country in May and June, adopting Trump's concern for respect for law enforcement and damage at various monuments.

"Federal law enforcement actions will be directed at apprehending and charging the violent radical agitators who have hijacked peaceful protest and are engaged in violations of federal law," Barr wrote in May. "The violence instigated and carried out by Antifa and other similar groups in connection with the rioting is domestic terrorism and will be treated accordingly."

Just days later, Barr personally ordered law enforcement to push back protestors from Lafayette Square outside of the White House as officers cleared the area with chemical irritants.

After supporters of President Trump descended on the U.S. Capitol building, hoping to stop the counting of electoral college votes, lawmakers and experts alike repeated a phrase to describe the violent mob: "domestic terrorists."

"Those who performed these reprehensible acts cannot be called protestors; no, these were rioters and insurrectionists, goons and thugs, domestic terrorists," Senate Minority Leader Charles E. Schumer (D-N.Y.) said in a speech after lawmakers reconvened. "They do not represent America."

"What happened today was domestic terrorism," GOP spokesman Michael Ahrens tweeted. "Our soldiers have died carrying the American flag into battle for our freedom. To see that flag used in the name of unfounded conspiracy theories is a disgrace to the nation, and every decent American should be disgusted by it."

Members of both political parties pointed to the destruction of government property, threats to law enforcement and two explosive devices found near the Capitol as acts of terrorism as far-right extremist groups rallied in the nation's capital to contest the results of the presidential election. In the media, CNN executives told the organization's journalists that they could refer to the siege as "domestic terrorism."

National security experts agreed with that assessment, comparing the aggressive takeover of the federal landmark to the FBI's definition of domestic terrorism: "Violent, criminal acts committed by individuals and/or groups to further ideological goals stemming from domestic influences, such as those of a political, religious, social, racial, or environmental nature."

The FBI, which is investigating the violence, declined to comment when asked if the raid was considered domestic terrorism.

But the agency has acknowledged that homegrown violent extremism has become an increasingly prevalent threat, especially in the past four years.

"A majority of the domestic terrorism cases that we've investigated are motivated by some version of what you might call white supremacy, but it includes other things as well," FBI Director Christopher A. Wray told Congress in 2019.

In April, the State Department designated the Russian Imperial Movement as "Specially Designated Global Terrorists," the first time in history the government classified a white supremacist group as a terrorist threat.

Kid glove treatment of pro-Trump mob contrasts with strong-arm police tactics against Black Lives Matter, activists say

Even members of groups that have publicly supported Trump, such as the Proud Boys and the "boogaloo" movement, have faced prosecution after last summer's unrest.

But the violence Wednesday indicates how anti-government, white supremacy and other far-right groups are still able to subvert law enforcement, even as their plans were widely shared on social media. Despite the masses that breached the Capitol, only 52 arrests were made, according to D.C. police.

“The fact that the planning to assault the Capitol happened in public shows the bankruptcy of the intelligence apparatus that has been built since 9/11,” Michael German, a former FBI special agent and Brennan Center for Justice’s Liberty and National Security Program fellow, told The Post.

The United States has no domestic terrorism statute, and concerns that the government could infringe on citizens’ constitutional protections of speech and assembly have hampered the ability to respond to threats, experts say.

Recent intelligence assessments focusing on Black and environmental rights extremists have allowed some white supremacy and anti-government groups to act with impunity, German said.

“That has conditioned them to believe they are authorized to act this way,” he said. “So it’s not surprising at all that you would see people who aren’t covering their faces, aren’t trying to hide their identity, attacking police officers and invading and vandalizing the Capitol and disrupting our democracy in the process.”

After the largely White mob was allowed to leave the Capitol mostly unscathed, Black Lives Matter protesters compared the police treatment with their own confrontations with law enforcement.

The unrest could also encourage further violence, experts warned.

On their social media channels, white supremacists and neo-Nazi groups have celebrated the disruption of the election process, said Colin Clarke, a senior research fellow at the Soufan Center, a nonprofit think tank focused on global security issues. In one meme posted on Telegram, an app used by these fringe groups, the woman who died after she was shot in the Capitol building is lauded and compared to a photo of a Black person instigating violence.

“I truly think that the imagery that we’re seeing already today from the Capitol is going to serve as critical propaganda for militia groups, for neo-Nazis and for far-right extremist groups,” Clarke said. “I think what they gained today was so valuable for this movement.”

Clarke said the groups have grown online in recent years with the spread of conspiracy theories, and Trump’s recent baseless claims that the election was stolen has further enraged them.

After the election, Clarke warned in an op-ed in the Los Angeles Times that Trump's rhetoric could encourage a "sizable minority" that the government is illegitimate a catalyst for past uprisings internationally.

"I've seen this play out in other countries," he told The Post. "I'm just shocked to see now playing out in my country."

Aruna Viswantha and Sadie Gurman

WASHINGTON Federal authorities had planned to deal with protests this week with a relatively small, minimally visible presence, according to law-enforcement officials, hoping to avoid inflaming tensions as a show of force had done during unrest last year in Portland, Ore., and other cities.

That approach seemed to have backfired on Wednesday, when thousands of pro-Trump rioters surrounded the U.S. Capitol and some easily breached the barricades and stormed the building, with one woman fatally shot by Capitol Police, according to law-enforcement officials, and three others dead in what the city's police chief described as "medical emergencies."

Some rioters fired what he called "chemical irritants" at officers who were guarding the complex to gain access to the building.

The small group of Capitol Police officers guarding the building as lawmakers began a joint session of Congress to count the 2020 electoral votes was quickly outnumbered as rioters approached the building. Once inside, they broke into lawmakers' offices and roamed freely.

Lawmakers were forced to shelter in place and halt debate over the ratification of President-elect Joe Biden's Electoral College win following rioters breaching the Capitol building.

Trump gives speech near the White House at 'Save America Rally', afterwards instructing attendees to march down Pennsylvania Ave.

Rioters gathered on the Capitol lawn as the Senate began to vote on certifying the election results.

Officials said they had expected a repeat of relatively minor scuffles between far-right and far-left factions that broke out after dark at similar protests in November.

“The Capitol Police were unprepared for the sheer size of the protest,” said David Gomez, a retired FBI executive. Once the rioters barged into the Capitol, other federal law enforcement agencies were slow to respond, either out of deference to President Trump or because of a lack of experience with dealing with riots, which isn’t their primary mission, Mr. Gomez said. “Up until they breached the Capitol, the possibility existed that it was going to be a large protest that didn’t cross those barricades. Once they did that [law enforcement personnel] were overwhelmed and couldn’t respond quickly enough,” he said.

Defense Department officials had previously said they anticipated around 350 members of the D.C. national guard would be enough to support Washington, D.C., police during the protests this week, mainly to assist with traffic control. They wanted to avoid the optics of having any U.S. military personnel on the steps of the U.S. Capitol, and ordered the officers to avoid straying east of 9th Street in downtown Washington, blocks from the Capitol grounds, officials said.

After the building was breached, the Defense Department announced it would activate another 1,100 D.C. National Guard troops, but it was unclear if they would be deployed to the Capitol or elsewhere in the district.

The response was a marked difference from the way in which the Trump administration responded to protests over racial injustice last year, in which federal agents in riot gear sometimes showed up in force. In June, for example, federal law-enforcement officers were widely criticized for using tear gas to clear a largely peaceful crowd from Lafayette Square near the White House shortly before Mr. Trump made a visit to St. John’s Episcopal Church, which is adjacent to the park, to stand outside with a Bible.

“We have fully activated the D.C. National Guard to assist federal and local law enforcement as they work to peacefully address the situation,” said Acting Defense Secretary Christopher Miller. “We are prepared to provide additional support as necessary and appropriate as requested by local authorities.”

Late Wednesday, New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, a Democrat, said his state would send 1,000 National Guard troops to D.C. “NY stands ready to help ensure the will of the American people is safely carried out,” he tweeted.

Acting Attorney General Jeffrey Rosen condemned the events at the Capitol as “an intolerable attack on a fundamental institution of our democracy.” Mr. Rosen said the Justice Department sent agents from the FBI, U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, and the U.S. Marshals Service to help Capitol Police.

Also, officers from Washington’s Metropolitan Police Department were sent to the Capitol to assist in restoring order, clearing the building and establishing a perimeter, Mayor Muriel Bowser said. At her request, the Maryland, New Jersey and Virginia state police had deployed to help and she invoked a mutual-aid agreement with police departments in several surrounding jurisdictions. As of Wednesday night, there were at least 52 arrests, including four for carrying pistols without licenses, one for possession of a prohibited weapon and 47 for curfew violations and unlawful entry. Twenty six of the arrests were on U.S. Capitol grounds, police said.

The U.S. Capitol Police is the federal law enforcement agency that protects members of Congress and Congressional buildings, with around 1,900 officers, according to its website.

The incidents they encounter are normally more minor than those of other police departments that patrol the streets and investigate cases, but the force expanded its ranks after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, and again when it merged with the Library of Congress police in 2009.

They were on the scene and suffered injuries themselves when Rep. Steve Scalise (R, La.) was shot in 2017 at an outdoor practice for the annual charity congressional baseball game. Lawmakers also present at the practice have attributed their survival to the actions of the Capitol police.

Sen. Rand Paul (R., Ky.), who was in the batting cage at the time of the shootings, said at the time on MSNBC: “I probably heard 50, 60 shots,” adding: “Everybody probably would have died except for the fact that the Capitol Police was there.”

Still, Wednesday’s breach by the pro-Trump rioters raises questions about whether Capitol Police are equipped to handle more widespread threats and violence.

Former Senate historian Donald Ritchie said the Capitol Police might be excused for misreading the pro-Trump crowd. “This is just so totally out of character for the way in which Americans protest or Americans congregate or show their political feelings,” Mr. Ritchie said, noting that the Capitol has seen massive protests over myriad issues over its history. “I’m astonished that it happened,” he said, “for the same reasons the police were astonished that it happened.”

The coronavirus pandemic also posed new challenges for the police department.

As Congress has remained open for business during the pandemic, at least a dozen officers had tested positive for the coronavirus by May 2020, and were concerned about their working conditions, The Wall Street Journal previously reported.

1/7 How Might the U.S. Capitol Rioters Face Justice? Bloomberg

Erik Larson and Joel Rosenblatt

A violent mob of Donald Trump supporters stormed the U.S. Capitol on Jan. 6 amid the president's final push for a second term in office despite his election loss by more than 7 million votes. Intruders, some of them wearing tactical gear and waving Trump flags, broke windows and trashed offices in a chaotic scene that forced Congress to halt its proceeding to formally certify President-elect Joe Biden's win. Vice President Mike Pence vowed that "those involved will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law," and Biden said the incident wasn't a protest, it was "insurrection." The slow response by police and the relatively few arrests have left observers wondering if the mob would face justice.

1. What crimes did the attackers potentially commit?

Legal experts say a wide variety of crimes -- everything from vandalism to sedition -- occurred and prosecutors could charge individuals even if they walked away from the incident without being detained. Several police officers were injured in the day's events and two explosive devices were recovered. Alongside misdemeanors and felonies related to assault of law enforcement officers, firearms offenses, breaking and entering and trespassing, members of the mob could be charged with the "willful injury of federal property." Individuals may also face more serious charges include sedition and insurrection, which would require proving intent to disrupt or even overthrow the government. A sedition conviction carries a maximum prison term of 20 years.

President Trump issued an executive order during the Black Lives Matter protests in June saying that his administration would prosecute to the fullest anyone who did harm to federal property, which carries a sentence of up to 10 years in prison. There also may be prosecutions under the Anti-Riot Act, which makes it a crime to cross state lines with the intent to incite a riot -- or even just encourage another person to riot. The government can also choose to seek prison sentences of up to 5 years for those found guilty of engaging in "civil disorder," by impeding or attempting to impede the actions of law enforcement officers carrying out their official duties.

The grounds of the U.S. Capitol have their own specific statute governing unlawful activities, making it illegal for a person to “step or climb on, remove, or in any way injure any statue, seat, wall, fountain, or other erection or architectural feature, or any tree, shrub, plant, or turf, in the Grounds.” There are also restrictions on blocking streets, carrying a firearm or using “loud, threatening, or abusive language” on the grounds with the aim of disrupting the work of Congress. The law also prohibits anyone who is not a member of Congress from appearing on the House or Senate floor without express permission.

2. Could Trump face charges?

Possibly. There have been calls to hold him accountable for the crowd’s actions, after he told supporters earlier in the day that he would never concede the election. “He was basically encouraging people to do it,” said former federal prosecutor Jennifer Rodgers. “He’s saying they have to fight and be strong and march to the Capitol -- every step of the way he was encouraging them.” It’s not clear that a sitting president can be charged with a crime, but Trump could be charged after he leaves office. Some members of Congress, including Representative Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, have called for his impeachment, again.

3. What evidence could be used in prosecutions?

There’s a ton of evidence available to prosecutors, including forensic proof such as fingerprints. Much of the criminal activity took place on live television, providing ample footage that can be combined with facial-recognition technology to identify suspects. Cameras inside the Capitol captured the action as did the social-media feeds of rioters themselves. Plus, suspects may have social-media postings that provide evidence of their intent. The Federal Bureau of Investigations has posted an online form seeking “tips and digital media depicting rioting and violence in the U.S. Capitol Building and surrounding area.” Legal experts say it’s likely that even before the mayhem unfolded, undercover investigators were prowling social media to monitor whoever was organizing it.

4. Will Trump’s Justice Department charge the rioters?

There isn’t much time before Trump leaves office. Acting Attorney General Jeff Rosen said Wednesday that the agency intends “to enforce the laws of our land.” The department can start gathering evidence now, but decisions about how vigorous the prosecution should be are more likely to be made by the next attorney general since it takes time to build cases from such a chaotic event. “The Department of Justice should be looking at it right now,” Maryland Attorney General Brian Frosh said. “These are potentially really serious crimes. They were trying to stop the election of Joe Biden and they shut down Congress to try to do it. These are not petty crimes.” The long arm of the law may also follow troublemakers to wherever they came from. U.S. Attorney Peter McCoy in South Carolina said “anyone who traveled from the District of South Carolina with intent to aid this travesty or commit acts of destruction will be prosecuted” by his office.

5. Can Trump pardon the mob?

He can pardon them for any federal crimes. Trump has issued several pardons to supporters and controversial criminals. In this case, the president could even theoretically issue a blanket pardon that would apply to anyone involved in the assault on the Capitol, even if he didn't know their names and they haven't all been formally charged. Criminal defense lawyer Jon Sheldon said that while there is little guidance in the law, there have been other instances of presidents granting “group” pardons, including a case where the Supreme Court interpreted an 1865 pardon by President Andrew Johnson as allowing attorneys from the Confederacy to practice despite a law requiring them to swear that they never engaged in hostilities toward the U.S. If Trump were to issue a pardon, it's likely prosecutors would file charges in some cases anyway to test the president's authority.

6. Why weren't more people arrested?

Despite the fact that there were thousands of people on the Capitol grounds, there were no mass arrests. As of 9:30 pm Wednesday, 52 people had been arrested by the D.C. police department for alleged activities related to the riot. Four arrests were for carrying pistols without licenses, one was for possession of a prohibited weapon and 47 others were arrests related to curfew violations and unlawful entry. Twenty-six of these 52 arrests were made on U.S. Capitol grounds. A two-minute video posted to Twitter by a reporter for a Canadian news outlet appeared to show dozens of people freely walking out of the Capitol through a door being held open by a uniformed police officer. In contrast, Black Lives Matter protesters were violently attacked by police during peaceful protests near the White House in June, with law enforcement officers using batons and deploying tear gas against people holding signs in parks. According to a tally by the Associated Press, more than 10,000 people had been arrested as of early June in the wake of national protests about police brutality. “We shudder to think how police departments would have responded had Black and Brown individuals stormed a government building to protest police brutality,” said Anthony Romero, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Federal and state authorities scrambled to send forces to help secure the U.S. Capitol after it was overrun by pro-Trump extremists who stormed the building on Wednesday.

The FBI deployed agents from its Washington Field Office in response to a request for assistance from the U.S. Capitol Police, which is responsible for securing the Capitol complex. The FBI also said it responded to reports of "suspicious devices" and that it continues to investigate.

Investigators from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives also took part in the response. The agency said it deployed a Special Response Team, its version of a SWAT unit, as well as agents from its Washington and Baltimore field divisions to help out at the Capitol.

The Justice Department said acting Attorney General Jeffrey Rosen is coordinating with the department's law enforcement partners to provide support for the Capitol Police.

The Defense Department, meanwhile, said the D.C. National Guard has been mobilized to support the security response.

Pentagon spokesman Jonathan Hoffman said on Twitter that the acting defense secretary, Christopher Miller, has been in touch with congressional leadership, while Army Secretary Ryan McCarthy has been working with the local Washington, D.C., government.

Hoffman said the law enforcement response will be led by the Justice Department.

Reinforcements were also being deployed from the neighboring states of Virginia and Maryland.

Virginia Gov. Ralph Northam said on Twitter that he is sending 200 state troopers and a contingent from the state National Guard. Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan said that he's sending state troopers to help out as well and that he's also instructed his state's National Guard to call up a "rapid response force to support law enforcement and restore order."

New Jersey Gov. Phil Murphy later joined the governors in announcing a contingent headed for the District.

It was not immediately clear when those reinforcements would arrive. D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser ordered a curfew for 6 p.m. in the District as authorities sought to restore order on Capitol Hill and its environs.

1/7 FBI seeking help from public to identify those in Capitol breach Fox

David Aaro

The FBI is seeking help from the public to identify individuals involved in a security breach at the U.S. Capitol on Wednesday.

The agency tweeted a statement early Thursday saying it was seeking information that will assist in "identifying individuals who are actively instigating violence."

"If you have witnessed unlawful violent actions, we urge you to submit any information, photos, or videos that could be relevant at fbi.gov/USCapitol," the FBI wrote.

During the chaos, these individuals broke windows, entered both the Senate and House chambers and entered into the offices of lawmakers, including House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif.

Robert J. Contee III, the city's top cop, said during a press conference late Wednesday there have been at least 52 arrests 47 because of curfew violations.

Contee added that four people died, including a woman who was shot inside the Capitol.

"One adult female and two adult males appear to have suffered from separate medical emergencies, which resulted in their deaths," he said of the other three people who died.

At least 14 police officers were injured, according to authorities. Lawmakers also vowed to investigate how law enforcement handled Wednesday's violent breach at the Capitol.

1/7 FBI Seeking Tips Over Capitol Violence, Aim to Identify Instigators Newsweek

Jacob Jarvis

The FBI is seeking tips to assist in identifying those "actively instigating violence" in Washington, D.C. after the Capitol was stormed by supporters of President Donald Trump in an unprecedented display of chaos.

National Guard troops were mobilized to deal with the insurrection, after crowds descended on the building as Congress convened to certify the Electoral College results.

Four people died amid the violence, according to Washington D.C.'s Metropolitan Police Department. One woman was shot and later died in hospital, while woman and two men suffered medical emergencies which resulted in their deaths. Officers arrested more than 52 people.

An FBI webpage has been set up for people to submit details which could assist its investigations into possible violations of federal law.

"The FBI is seeking information that will assist in identifying individuals who are actively instigating violence in Washington, DC. The FBI is accepting tips and digital media depicting rioting and violence in the U.S. Capitol Building and surrounding area in Washington, DC, on January 6, 2021," a form on the agency's site reads.

"If you have witnessed unlawful violent actions, we urge you to submit any information, photos, or videos that could be relevant at fbi.gov/USCapitol."

It urged people to use its form to submit media which was "related to possible violations of federal law committed."

"Our goal is to preserve the public's constitutional right to protest by protecting everyone from violence and other criminal activity," the form concluded.

Newsweek has contacted the Justice Department for further comment.

On Wednesday, Acting Attorney General Jeffrey A. Rosen said agents from the FBI had been sent to assist Capitol Police in addressing the situation.

"The violence at our Nation's Capitol Building is an intolerable attack on a fundamental institution of our democracy," Rosen said.

The violence at the Capitol has been widely condemned, with President-elect Joe Biden labeling the events an "assault on the most sacred of American undertakings, the doing of the people's business."

"To storm the Capitol, to smash windows, to occupy offices, and to threaten the safety of duly elected officials is not protest. It's insurrection" he said in a public address.

The storming of the Capitol came as thousands of Trump supporters gathered for a rally, which the president attended. He continued to make allegations of the election having been rigged, despite having failed to substantiate claims of irregularities which would be substantial enough to alter the outcome.

"We will never give up, we will never concede. You don't concede when there's theft involved," Trump told the crowd on Wednesday.

1/6 FBI, Homeland Security, White House Advisers Foresaw Possible Riots, Looked the Other Way
Newsweek

William M. Arkin

They knew it could happen. They feared that Donald Trump would pull a "Samson," bringing down the whole house on top of him in the two weeks before he left the White House. Officials from the FBI, the Secret Service, Homeland Security, the District of Columbia government, the Pentagon, the National Guard, and the Joint Task Force National Capital Region who spoke to Newsweek last weekend on condition of anonymity, all talked about the potential for protesters and militias and paramilitary goons egged on by the president to storm Capitol Hill and even the Capitol building itself.

A half-dozen sources spoke openly about this very scenario: that the mob would take over the "People's House" and that somehow the system would break down. They speculated that this could occur because of the president's treasonous behavior, because of leadership deficiencies in the federal government and Congress, because of the extreme partisanship of the moment, and because everyone was looking the wrong way.

The blame was spread around, with the FBI dismissing the Department of Homeland Security as a bunch of amateurs and thugs; the military shaking their heads about President Trump and an absent White House leadership; Homeland Security department members mocking the District of Columbia's mayor, Attorney General, and police; and everyone making clear that "the problem" was someone else's.

It was clear that the very law enforcement and security people who in theory were responsible for maintaining order in our capital city weren't ready, weren't well led, weren't organized properly, and weren't impartial.

The patchwork quilt of roles and responsibilities created post-9/11, and the immense public illiteracy regarding all things national security, have weakened America.

Many people in official Washington had tolerated and even humored President Trump's sedition and incitement to riot. FBI sources said the White House wasn't ordering any new security measures, wasn't ordering any additional resources, and wasn't coordinating any extension of the so-called inaugural "National Security Special Event" timeline to include this week (it officially covers January 15-21). It wasn't doing those things, the sources said, because presidential aides were afraid that any movement might provoke Donald Trump to do something even worse than whatever he was already planning.

Several of the sources said the U.S. Capitol Police with a strength of more than 2,000 law enforcement officers might not act, or might be intentionally stood down, because many Congressional Republican leaders wanted the mob to amplify their shrinking voices that the election was illegitimate. There has been no confirmation of this claim. But it's notable that it took less than 15 minutes for the mob to gain entrance to the Capitol Building--and then virtually nothing was done to eject them.

Sources from other departments said the Department of Homeland Security which had declined to use its mammoth army of law enforcement officers to suppress protests in Portland and other cities, ostensibly because they were needed in DC to protect government buildings was making itself virtually absent from the scene for the transition. The Acting Secretary of Homeland Security Chad Wolf is actually in the Middle East, evidently not thinking that the threat was severe enough for him to be in Washington.

The DHS has been indiscriminate in using its law enforcement arms, now the largest in the federal government Secret Service agents, ICE, Customs and Border Protection, Homeland Security Investigations, Federal Air Marshals and even the Federal Protective Service to intervene over the past year when protests didn't involve pro-Trump, right wing mobs. The Capitol Police did come out in force when Black Lives Matter and Antifa approached Capitol Hill last summer.

FBI sources told Newsweek that the Bureau was closely watching the various protestors converging on the city, that the Department of Justice was taking the law enforcement lead no matter what other agencies of the government were doing, and that the Bureau had a good sense of the protestors, the size of the crowd, the leaders, and the dangers. The intelligence apparently did not anticipate what the news media was openly speculating about and what the president and his supporters were publicly tweeting.

The District of Columbia government was the only prepared and ready force on Wednesday. Mayor Muriel Bowser activated 340 District National Guardsmen and women before Wednesday. In keeping with a desire not to use soldiers to enforce the law, she kept them unarmed and assigned them to traffic control and other duties to relieve more police officers of the Metropolitan Police Department 3,800 strong, the sixth largest municipal police department in the nation to enforce the laws.

The riots and the District's response underscored the argument for making D.C. a state, so that the mayor wouldn't have to ask permission of the Secretary of the Army to activate the DC Guard.

And finally there's the Pentagon. Donald Trump's walk into Lafayette Park last June, accompanied by a gaggle of federal, National Guard and local police forces, jolted the U.S. military. Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Mark Milley, in uniform, joined the president's entourage, giving the impression that the uniformed military supported Trump and the forces surrounding him. Gen. Milley was pummeled for his "loss of situational awareness," for being there. He publicly apologized.

The Lafayette Park incident and Milley's apology shifted Pentagon culture; ranking officers firmly rejected talk of martial law and openly declared that the U.S. armed forces had no role to play in the election or the transition. Now the Pentagon is being dragged in anyhow, in the form of the National Guard: the last non-partisan, honorable and duty-bound institution in Washington.

But the political structure has failed spectacularly, creating and living with a federal government so faulty that it gives the impression "the military" is the only institution that can be trusted, that it is the only one that can and will always save the day. The Congressional leadership cheered when they heard that the National Guard was on the way to the Capitol today.

To restore the rule of law and ensure accountability for protecting America's democracy, the post-Trump reforms must be as dramatic as the ones that followed 9/11. "The military is the only answer" is not just a false belief: it also weakens the civil institutions on which our nation depends.

1/6 Riot Response Hampered by No Clear Federal Chain of Command Newsweek

Naveed Jamali and Tom O'Connor

Even after the federal authorities declared the U.S. Capitol Building cleared of riotous protesters supportive of President Donald Trump, remaining mobs of protesters streaming across district and state lines pose a lingering threat that the officials say the federal government is failing to sufficiently address.

Washington, D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser has mobilized the entirety of the District's National Guard force to quell violent demonstrations that disrupted congressional proceedings to certify President-elect Joe Biden. She has requested backup from neighboring Virginia, where Governor Ralph Northam has also declared a state of emergency as a result of ongoing unrest in the area.

But with no federal agency taking charge outside of federal property, one member of the D.C. National Guard currently on orders in the District, who spoke to Newsweek on the condition of anonymity, described a chaotic atmosphere that left the chain of command unprepared and unclear.

"What's most concerning is the lack of preparation here," the DC National Guard member said. "I don't know who in the chain of command dropped the ball. There was no plan and we were not in position when we needed to be."

With one woman shot dead during the siege, armed standoffs within the congressional chambers and multiple potential explosive devices discovered, the level of danger was clear, and the DC National Guard member felt irresponsibly placed in harm's way.

"We are also put at a needless risk," the DC National Guard member said, "going out to face a mass act of terrorism with no body armor or weapons."

The storming of the Capitol following repeated calls by Trump to challenge Biden's electoral certification is the first attack on the building since British forces burned the iconic structure more than two centuries ago during the War of 1812.

"The rest of the world is waking up to images of the U.S. Capitol being seized," a senior U.S. intelligence official told Newsweek. "This has not happened since 1814."

While federal agencies have offered assistance, no agency has been designated to be the lead agency to an expanding threat.

Now scenes of related disorder are reportedly appearing in other cities including Los Angeles, where bloody brawls broke out between Trump supporters and members of the Black Lives Matter movement, and in Olympia, Washington, where armed protesters have attempted to break into Governor Jay Inslee's residence. Gunmen also gathered at the Oregon capital of Salem to support Trump's efforts to overturn his electoral loss to Biden.

The FBI is among the federal agencies responding to the riot, though their role like other agencies is limited to providing assistance to the U.S. Capitol Police tasked with protecting the legislative building.

"The FBI has been deployed to assist our U.S. Capitol Police partners as requested in protection of federal property and public safety," an FBI spokesperson said in a statement sent to Newsweek.

The Pentagon is also on standby. Acting Defense Secretary Chris Miller issued a statement activating the D.C. National Guard to assist Capitol Police and offer additional services.

"We are prepared to provide additional support as necessary and appropriate as requested by local authorities," Miller said. "Our people are sworn to defend the Constitution and our democratic form of government and they will act accordingly."

The Department of Homeland Security reported that its personnel were also assisting Capitol Police.

"Federal Protective Service and Secret Service have been requested to provide assistance to Capitol Hill Police. They are fulfilling that request," a DHS spokesperson told Newsweek. "The Department of Homeland Security has stood up the DHS Virtual Situation Room to facilitate department and interagency communication and coordination, as we do for many large events in D.C."

Trump offered conflicting messages to the crowd, first telling them to remain peaceful before asking them to return home and then praising their efforts via Twitter, which then locked his account. His actions have caused many in the Republican Party to turn on him and condemn his inflammatory rhetoric.

One of the president's former political appointees to DHS described the situation to Newsweek as "an embarrassment to conservatives everywhere."

ABC News has obtained a photo of one of two suspected explosive devices discovered in Washington, D.C., Wednesday.

The suspected device in the photo appears to be wired with a timer and was found adjacent to the Republican National Committee headquarters on First Street, S.E.

After the initial device was discovered near the RNC, police searched the area near the Democratic National Committee headquarters building, a couple blocks away, and found a second device there under a bush.

Both buildings are a short distance from the U.S. Capitol, where violent protesters broke through police lines and stormed into the complex just over an hour after the devices were discovered.

"Two suspected explosive devices were rendered safe by the FBI and our law enforcement partners," the FBI said in a statement Wednesday evening.

Authorities are still working to determine whether the suspected devices were functional bombs, or only designed to appear like explosive devices, according to law enforcement sources.

Bomb technicians used water cannons to blast the devices to essentially break them apart and render them harmless.

Investigators are examining the recovered pieces to look for clues about how the devices was constructed and about the sources of the components, sources said.

Forensic experts are also conducting chemical analyses on any substances found in the devices to determine if they were filled with explosive materials.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, U.S. Capitol Police and the Metropolitan Police Department are assisting with the investigation.

"The investigation is ongoing," the FBI said.

Outgoing U.S. attorneys from around the country decried Wednesday's storming of the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C., with some pledging to charge any from their state who may be found to have violated federal laws.

At least 12 have thus far come out publicly to say they would charge those involved if they came from their jurisdictions.

Former U.S. attorney Zachary Terwilliger, a President Donald Trump appointee set to soon depart from his position leading the office the Eastern District of Virginia, called what happened at the Capitol a "tragedy."

"I was traveling the district saying goodbye to Team EDVA, hence my delay, as I just told them," he tweeted. "We have reached out to our colleagues at DOJ and DC USAO to offer any support in terms of search and arrest warrants. This is despicable, a travesty, and the darkest day since 9/11."

David DeVillers, the U.S. attorney from the Southern District of Ohio, tweeted outright that federal crimes were committed at the Capitol Wednesday.

"Make no mistake... Federal crimes were committed today at our nation's Capital building. Anyone who traveled from the Southern District of Ohio with the intent to commit such crimes will be prosecuted in the Southern District of Ohio," he said.

The FBI in a statement said they are helping their law enforcement partners, but thus far there has been no statement from FBI Director Christopher Wray himself.

In June, Wray commented on the civil unrest in the wake of George Floyd's death.

"In recent days, the violence, threat to life, and destruction of property that we've seen in some parts of the country jeopardizes the rights and safety of all citizens, including peaceful demonstrators. It has to stop. We're seeing people who are exploiting this situation to pursue violent, extremist agendas anarchists like Antifa and other agitators," he said at the time.

"These individuals have set out to sow discord and upheaval, rather than join in the righteous pursuit of equality and justice. And by driving us apart, they are undermining the urgent work and constructive engagement of all those who are trying to bring us together — our community and religious leaders, our elected officials, law enforcement, and citizens alike. Many have suffered from the violence instigated through these radicals and extremists, including members of our own law enforcement family — officers killed or gravely injured while just doing their jobs, fulfilling their duty to the public by trying to keep everyone safe," Wray added.

Acting Attorney General Jeff Rosen, hours after recently-departed Attorney General William Barr had already released his own statement Wednesday condemning the violence at the Capitol, condemned what he described as an "intolerable attack on a fundamental institution of our democracy."

Earlier, when asked about Wednesday's events, the U.S. attorney's office in D.C. -- which would typically take jurisdiction in prosecuting those who have violated federal laws throughout the day and which aggressively prosecuted protesters involved in the unrest over the summer -- a spokesperson declined to comment to ABC News.

Acting Department of Homeland Security Deputy Secretary Ken Cuccinelli said that what he saw at the Capitol marked a "sad day for America" and he condemned the actions of those involved.

Erin Nealey Cox, the U.S. attorney from the Northern District of Texas, who is a member of the Department of Justice Task Force on Violent Anti-Government Extremists, called those who committed the attack on the Capitol "anarchists, not patriots."

Acting Attorney General Jeffrey Rosen says the violent pro-Trump mobs that stormed the U.S. Capitol was an "intolerable attack on a fundamental institution" of democracy.

Rosen said Wednesday that the Justice Department has been working with U.S. Capitol Police and other federal law enforcement agencies to secure the Capitol. He says hundreds of federal agents from Justice Department agencies were sent to assist.

He called it an "unacceptable situation" and said federal prosecutors "intend to enforce the laws of our land."

Dozens of President Donald Trump's supporters breached the security perimeter and entered the Capitol as Congress was meeting, expected to vote and affirm Joe Biden's presidential win. They were seen clashing with officers both inside the building and outside.

Police declared the Capitol to be secure about four hours later.

The FBI said it had dispatched with two suspicious devices that were uncovered in Washington after reports of improvised explosives on the grounds of the U.S. Capitol during Wednesday's rioting.

"Two suspected explosive devices were rendered safe by the FBI and our law enforcement partners," a spokesperson for the bureau said in a statement. "The investigation is ongoing."

The investigation came as rioters flooded the streets of Washington and invaded the Capitol to protest the defeat of President Donald Trump by President-elect Joe Biden in November's election.

The FBI said it had dispatched with two suspicious devices that were uncovered in Washington after reports of improvised explosives on the grounds of the U.S. Capitol during Wednesday's rioting.

"Two suspected explosive devices were rendered safe by the FBI and our law enforcement partners," a spokesperson for the bureau said in a statement. "The investigation is ongoing."

Rioters flooded the streets of Washington and invaded the Capitol to protest the defeat of President Donald Trump by President-elect Joe Biden in November's election.

The New York Times, citing three unnamed people who were briefed, reported earlier that an explosive device was found at the Republican National Committee headquarters and that the nearby Democratic National Committee headquarters was evacuated.

A spokesperson for the GOP said that RNC staff members were safely evacuated and that the device was detonated by a bomb squad.

Law enforcement was in the process of destroying improvised explosives on Wednesday afternoon, NBC News reported, but authorities were unsure if the devices were functional. One device resembled a pipe bomb.

Vice President Mike Pence and other senior elected leaders were rushed to safety and the Capitol complex was locked down after protesters broke past police and stormed the building.

Several law enforcement officials told NBC News on Wednesday evening that a woman who was shot in the building had died. At least five people were transported to a hospital, according to District of Columbia Fire and EMS.

Biden said in an address later in the day that democracy was under "unprecedented assault."

"It must end now. I call this mob to pull back and allow this work of democracy to go forward," Biden said.

Lawmakers were meeting to formally announce Biden's victory over Trump in the Electoral College, which has already certified Biden's win.

Trump has stoked false rumors of widespread voter fraud and encouraged his supporters to protest the result. After rioting broke out, the president urged his supporters to be peaceful even as he continued to baselessly claim that the election was stolen.

The FBI has reportedly sent a SWAT team into the Capitol Building as law enforcement struggles to quell a riot that forced Congress to evacuate.

Heavily armed SWAT members can be seen being led through the halls of an undisclosed building in the Capitol complex by police officers.

Joyce Karam of The National reported that the team is clearing the building while there are still rioters inside.

Rioters mobbed the Capitol as members of Congress met to certify electoral votes that will cement President-elect Joe Biden's win. The mob smashed through glass doors before bursting into the building, where some rioters brawled with police officers while others dispersed a fire extinguisher.

An unidentified female was killed after she had been shot in the neck amid the chaos, NBC News confirmed.

I wanted to take this opportunity to say thank you for the opportunity to serve at the Department of Justice. If not for Covid I believe I would have been able to contribute in a more significant manner and I pray for your continued good health. As my final thought I want to say that I believe the United States Federal Law Enforcement officers performed beyond reproach yesterday and what many don't understand is that protection of life was the objective and the physical property was and should have been secondary. I hear members of both parties praising Law Enforcement and I hope that they will remember the January 6th riot as proof that when others run away, Law Enforcement, runs toward danger. Know this is a strange question but at the moment when it's being reported as a possible consideration across several outlets I just have to ask is there any consideration being given by AAG Rosen to support potentially invoking the 25th Amendment to remove President Trump from office? Any guidance of course is appreciated.

ACTING ATTORNEY GENERAL JEFFREY A. ROSEN REGARDING THE OVERRUNNING OF THE U.S. CAPITOL BUILDING

WASHINGTON - Acting Attorney General Jeffrey A. Rosen issued the following statement:

"The violence at our Nation's Capitol Building is an intolerable attack on a fundamental institution of our democracy. From the outset, the Department of Justice has been working in close coordination with the Capitol Police and federal partners from the Interior Department, the Department of Homeland Security, and the National Guard, as well as the Metropolitan Police and other local authorities. Earlier this afternoon, the Department of Justice sent hundreds of federal law enforcement officers and agents from the FBI, ATF, and the U.S. Marshals Service to assist the Capitol Police in addressing this unacceptable situation, and we intend to enforce the laws of our land."

Dear Ms. Li,

My name is Peter Loewi, I'm a reported with the Asahi Shimbun. Thank you for helping me get onto the mailing lists a couple weeks ago.

Pentagon Spokesman Jonathan Hoffman just sent out a statement saying that "The law enforcement response will be led by the Department of Justice."

Does the Department of Justice have a statement out at this time?

Thank you,

p

Marc, this is what DOD’s Jonathan Hoffmann says, that you’re in charge:

“The D.C. Guard has been mobilized to provide support to federal law enforcement in the District. Acting Secretary Miller has been in contact with Congressional leadership, and Secretary McCarthy has been working with the D.C. government. The law enforcement response will be led by the Department of Justice.”

Is DOJ in charge and if so what is it doing?

Washington, DC 20301

Dear Acting Attorney General Rosen, Secretary McCarthy, and Acting Secretary Miller:

In light of expected protests this week in Washington, D.C., and the announcement of the mobilization of the D.C. National Guard, I wish to draw your attention to Sec. 1064 of H.R. 6395, William M. Thornberry National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2021, which became law on January 1, 2021. Members of the armed forces and federal law enforcement personnel responding to civil disturbances are now required to visibly display both their name or an individual identifier, and the name of the armed force, or federal entity by which they are employed:

(a) In General.--Chapter 41 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

“Sec. 723. Support of Federal authorities in response to civil disturbances: requirement for se of members of the Armed Forces and Federal law enforcement personnel

(a) Requirement.--Whenever a member of the armed forces (including the National Guard) or Federal law enforcement personnel provide support to Federal authorities to respond to a civil disturbance, each individual employed in the capacity of providing such support shall visibly display--

(1) the individual's name or other individual identifier that is unique to that individual; and

(2) the name of the armed force, Federal entity, or other organization by which such individual is employed.

(b) Exception.--The requirement under subsection (a) shall not apply to individuals referred to in such subsection who--

(1) do not wear a uniform or other distinguishing clothing or equipment in the regular performance of their official duties; or

(2) are engaged in undercover operations in the regular performance of their official duties.”

Last June, Americans watched as President Trump and former Attorney General Bill Barr deployed unidentifiable federal officers in riot gear to crack down on peaceful demonstrators exercising their constitutional rights in cities across the country. This lack of identification made it impossible for citizens to distinguish between legitimate law enforcement and dangerous private vigilantes, or hold accountable enforcement personnel who engaged in abusive conduct. The legislation enacted into law last week ensures that no administration has the authority to deploy unidentifiable law enforcement or members of the armed forces in response to a civil disturbance.

We must all must ensure the safety of Americans who gather to peacefully exercise their constitutional rights and we thank you for your attention to this critical matter.

Sincerely,

United States Senator

The Honorable Chris Miller
Acting Secretary of Defense
1000 Defense Pentagon
Washington, DC 20301

Dear Acting Attorney General Rosen, Secretary McCarthy, and Acting Secretary Miller:

As the law enforcement agency charged with protecting residents and visitors throughout the District of Columbia, the Metropolitan Police Department (MPD) is prepared for this week's First Amendment activities. MPD has coordinated with its federal partners, namely the US Park Police, US Capitol Police and the US Secret Service—all of whom regularly have uniformed personnel protecting federal assets in the District of Columbia. This week, MPD has additional logistical support of unarmed members of the DC National Guard, who will work under the direction of, and in coordination with, MPD.

The District of Columbia Government has not requested personnel from any other federal law enforcement agencies. To avoid confusion, we ask that any request for additional assistance be coordinated using the same process and procedures.

We are mindful that in 2020, MPD was expected to perform the demanding tasks of policing large crowds while working around unidentifiable personnel deployed in the District of Columbia without proper coordination. Unidentifiable personnel—in many cases, armed—caused confusion among residents and visitors and could become a national security threat with no way for MPD and federal law enforcement to decipher armed groups.

To be clear, the District of Columbia is not requesting other federal law enforcement personnel and discourages any additional deployment without immediate notification to, and consultation with, MPD if such plans are underway. The protection of persons and property is our utmost concern and responsibility. MPD is well trained and prepared to lead the law enforcement, coordination and response to allow for the peaceful demonstration of First Amendment rights in the District of Columbia.

Sincerely,

Muriel Bowser
Mayor

Hey guys—

As we all know, there are extensive street closures scheduled through Wednesday due to the planned protests and I understand the Mayor has asked the National Guard for assistance in closing streets, providing crowd control and securing some locations. What assistance has been requested of DOJ (if any)?

What does DOJ plan to do independent of any request from the Mayor (has a command post been set up and if so who is participating; have there been deployments of LEOs and if so, from what agencies/approx what number; what is the plan for Superior Court—what are USMS and the USAO doing to prepare for the possibility of large scale arrests; etc)?

Thanks.
