v.

STATE OF NEW MEXICO

AND

STATE OF COLORADO

ON BILL OF COMPLAINT

BRIEF FOR THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION TO EL PASO COUNTY WATER IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT
NO. 1'S MOTION FOR LEAVE TO INTERVENE

This action concerns the interpretation of the Rio Grande Compact (Compact), Act of May 31, 1939, ch. 155, 53 Stat. 785, which apportions the water of the Rio Grande Basin among the States of Colorado, New Mexico, and Texas. Preamble, 53 Stat. 785. On January 27, 2014, the Court granted Texas's motion for leave to file a bill of complaint against the States of New Mexico and Colorado. 134 S. Ct. 1050. On March 31, 2014, the Court granted the United States' motion for leave to intervene as a plaintiff. 134 S. Ct. 1783. On April 30, 2014, New Mexico filed a motion to dismiss Texas's complaint and the United States' complaint in intervention. On November 3, 2014, this Court appointed A. Gregory Grimsal as Special Master, with authority to fix the time and conditions for the filing of additional pleadings, to direct subsequent proceedings, and to submit reports as he deems appropriate. 135 S. Ct. 474.

Two irrigation districts, one in New Mexico and one in Texas, have moved for leave to intervene. On December 3, 2014, Elephant Butte Irrigation District (EBID), an irrigation district in New Mexico, filed a motion for leave to intervene. New Mexico, Texas, and the United States filed briefs opposing EBID's motion. On April 27, 2015, the Court referred EBID's motion to the Special Master. 135 S. Ct. 1914.

On April 22, 2015, El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1 (EPCWID), an irrigation district in Texas, filed a motion for leave to intervene as a plaintiff, a complaint in intervention, and a memorandum in support of the motion. EPCWID's motion is the subject of this brief. EPCWID is a political subdivision of the State of Texas. Through a contract with the United States, EPCWID delivers water from the United States Bureau of Reclamation's (Reclamation) Rio Grande Project (the Project) to EPCWID members, who are agricultural water users within its service area. In the view of the United States, EPCWID does not satisfy this Court's standard for intervention by a non-State entity and its motion for leave to intervene should therefore be denied.

STATEMENT

1. The Reclamation Act of 1902 provided authorization and funding for irrigation works in various States, including New Mexico. See Act of June 17, 1902 (1902 Act), ch. 1093, 32 Stat. 388. In 1905, Congress extended the 1902 Act to "the portion of the State of Texas bordering upon the Rio Grande" that could be irrigated by water from the proposed reservoir at Elephant Butte. See Act of Feb. 25, 1905, ch. 798, 33 Stat. 814. Construction of the Project began in 1910. Elephant Butte Reservoir, the largest storage facility in the Project, was completed in 1916. Nat'l Res. Comm., Regional Planning, Part VI—The Rio Grande Joint Investigation in the Upper Rio Grande Basin in Colorado, New Mexico, and Texas, 1936-1937, at 73, 83 (Feb. 1938) (Joint Investigation). Elephant Butte Reservoir is in New Mexico, approximately 105 miles north of the Texas border.

In 1906, Reclamation entered into contracts with two irrigation districts: the entities now known as EBID in New Mexico, and EPCWID in Texas. Those contracts provide for the irrigation of approximately 155,000 acres of land—67,000 acres in Texas, and 88,000 acres in New Mexico. Joint Investigation 73, 83. Those acreages were confirmed in a contract between EBID and EPCWID that was signed on February 16, 1938. See U.S. Br. in Opp. to N.M. Mot. to Dismiss App. 1a-4a. Those proportions are roughly equivalent to 43% for EPCWID in Texas and 57% for EBID in New Mexico.

The Project also delivers water to Mexico pursuant to the Convention Between the United States and Mexico Providing for the Equitable Distribution of the Waters of the Rio Grande for Irrigation Purposes, May 21, 1906, U.S.-Mex., 34 Stat. 2953. Except during extraordinary drought, the treaty guarantees to Mexico 60,000 acre-feet of water per year delivered from the Project. Id. arts. I & II, 34 Stat. 2953-2954.

Today, Reclamation continues to calculate diversion allocations under the Project pursuant to the treaty and the 1938 contract between EBID and EPCWID, and also pursuant to a settlement agreement entered into by Reclamation, EBID, and EPCWID. See Bureau of Reclamation, U.S. Dep't of the Interior, Operating Agreement for the Rio Grande Project (Mar. 10, 2008) (2008 Operating Agreement), <http://www.usbr.gov/uc/albuq/rm/RGP/pdfs/OperatingAgreement2008.pdf>. Under the 2008 Operating Agreement, Reclamation uses a regression analysis showing how much water should be available for delivery, accounting for “return flows,” from a given volume of water released from Project storage based on 1951-1978 hydrological conditions. See Bureau of Reclamation, U.S. Dep't of the Interior, Supplemental Environmental Assessment: Implementation of the Rio Grande Project Operating Procedures, New Mexico and Texas 3-7, 12 (June 21, 2013), <http://www.usbr.gov/uc/albuq/envdocs/ea/riogrande/op-Proc/Supplemental/Final-SuppEA.pdf>. After subtracting Mexico's share of the water, Reclamation assigns 43% of the available water to EPCWID and 57% of the water to EBID. Id. at 13-14, 18.

On March 18, 1938, the parties signed the Compact, and Congress approved the Compact the following year. 53 Stat. 785. Article IV of the Compact required New Mexico to deliver water at San Marcial, New Mexico—a gauging station upstream of Elephant Butte Reservoir—in an amount that is determined by a schedule. 53 Stat. 788. In 1948, the Rio Grande Compact Commission changed the gauge for measuring New Mexico's delivery obligation from San Marcial to Elephant Butte Reservoir. Tex. Compl. para. 13; N.M. Br. in Opp. 1 n.1. Once the water is delivered by New Mexico to Elephant Butte Reservoir (i.e., into “[p]roject [s]torage” for purposes of the Compact, Art. I(k), 53 Stat. 786), it becomes “[u]nsable [w]ater” under the Compact, to be released by the Project “in accordance with irrigation demands, including deliveries to Mexico.” Art. I(l), 53 Stat. 786.

2. In its complaint, Texas contends that once New Mexico delivers water to Elephant Butte Reservoir as required by Article IV of the Compact, the water “is allocated and belongs to Rio Grande Project beneficiaries in southern New Mexico and in Texas” and is to be distributed by the Project according to federal contracts. Tex. Compl. para. 4. Texas alleges that, contrary to that allocation, New Mexico has “increasingly allowed the diversion of surface water, and has allowed and authorized the extraction of water from beneath the ground,” downstream of Elephant Butte Reservoir in New Mexico. Id. para. 18.

After the Court granted Texas leave to file its complaint, the United States filed a motion for leave to intervene as a plaintiff, a proposed complaint in intervention, and a memorandum in support of the motion. In those documents, the United States described several distinct federal interests that are at stake in this dispute over the interpretation of the Compact: (1) the parties’ dispute concerns water released from a federal project for which Reclamation sets the diversion allocations for the irrigation districts downstream of Elephant Butte Reservoir; (2) the United States has an interest in ensuring that New Mexico water users who do not have contracts with the Secretary of the Interior (Secretary) for delivery of Project water, or who use Project water in excess of contractual amounts, do not intercept Project water or interfere with delivery of that water to other Project beneficiaries; and (3) the United States has an interest in ensuring that New Mexico water users downstream of Elephant Butte Reservoir do not intercept or interfere with the delivery of Project water to Mexico pursuant to the international treaty obligation of the United States. See U.S. Mem. in Supp. 5-8.

New Mexico filed a motion to dismiss the complaints filed by Texas and the United States, in the nature of a motion under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). New Mexico contends (Mot. to Dismiss 27-39) that the complaints fail to state a claim upon which relief can be granted because no Compact provision prohibits New Mexico from interfering with Project deliveries to Texas water users after New Mexico delivers water to Elephant Butte Reservoir. New Mexico further contends that the Project's water rights below Elephant Butte Reservoir are controlled by state law (id. at 48-58), and that any remedy for interference with Project deliveries on the part of New Mexico water users therefore must be left to a state-law suit brought by the United States against any offending water users (id. at 37-39, 59-61).

3. On April 22, 2015, EPCWID filed, in this Court, a motion for leave to intervene as a plaintiff. EPCWID is a political subdivision of the State of Texas. It is a general law water improvement district, created under Texas law, with authority to provide for irrigation of the land within its boundaries and to cooperate with Reclamation for purposes of operating and maintaining federal Reclamation facilities within its boundaries. Tex. Water Code Ann. § 55.161(a) and (c) (West 2002); see Tex. Const. art. XVI, § 59(b).

EPCWID contends (Mem. in Supp. 14-23) that it has a compelling interest in its own right, distinct from its interest in a "class" with other Texas entities, to warrant intervention as an independent party in this original action. EPCWID maintains that it has a “direct stake” in ensuring that the Compact is enforced because it has a contract with the United States to receive Project water, and it has contractual obligations to deliver water to end users in Texas. Id. at 14-17, 19-23. EPCWID contends that its interests are “bi-state” in nature because it has rights to store and release water in New Mexico, and the Project’s irrigation infrastructure “crisscrosses” the state line to provide Project water to irrigators in both New Mexico and Texas. Id. at 17-18.

EPCWID further contends (Mem. in Supp. 23-27) that its interests are not adequately represented by the existing parties. EPCWID explains that, although it has a shared interest with Texas “in ensuring New Mexico complies with its Compact obligations,” the rights and interests of EPCWID and Texas are “not identical.” Id. at 24. In particular, EPCWID contends that, because Texas is not a “specific beneficiary” of the Project or a party to the 1938 contract dividing the Project’s water supply between EPCWID and EBID, and because Texas has not expressed an intention to defend the 1938 contract or the 2008 Operating Agreement, Texas cannot fully represent EPCWID’s contractual rights to receive Project water. Id. at 24-25.

EPCWID likewise contends (Mem. in Supp. 26-27) that its interests are not adequately represented by the United States. As EPCWID sees it, the United States’ interests are “in the Project as a whole,” whereas EPCWID “has direct interests with respect to ensuring receipt and delivery of Project water.” Id. at 26. EPCWID points out that it has disagreed with the United States in the past on the proper allocation of water from the Project, which prompted its 2007 complaint against Reclamation that resulted in the 2008 Operating Agreement. Id. at 27. EPCWID states that it “must independently protect its interests” under that agreement. Ibid.

ARGUMENT

This Court has held that “[a]n intervenor whose state is already a party * * * ha[s] the burden of showing some compelling interest in [its] own right, apart from [its] interest in a class with all other citizens and creatures of the state, which interest is not properly represented by the state.” New Jersey v. New York, 345 U.S. 369, 373 (1953) (per curiam). The standard for intervention in original cases by non-State entities “is high—and appropriately so,” because original actions “tax the limited resources of this Court by requiring [it] ‘awkwardly to play the role of factfinder,’” and because “respect for sovereign dignity” of the States, which “represent[] the interests of [their] citizens in an original action,” “counsels in favor of restraint” in allowing non-State entities to intervene. South Carolina v. North Carolina, 558 U.S. 256, 267 (2010) (citation omitted). EPCWID has identified no compelling interest to justify its participation as an independent party in this dispute that is not adequately represented by the existing sovereign parties.

1. a. EPCWID contends (Mem. in Supp. 13-17) that it has a “direct stake” in ensuring that the Compact is enforced because it has a contract with the United States to receive Project water, and it has contractual obligations to deliver water to end users in Texas. The Court has previously allowed non-State entities to intervene in original actions based on a “direct stake” in the outcome of the case. See, e.g., Maryland v. Louisiana, 451 U.S. 725, 745 n.21 (1981) (permitting private corporations to intervene in an original action challenging a State’s imposition of a tax); Texas v. Louisiana, 426 U.S. 465, 466 (1976) (per curiam) (permitting a municipality to intervene in a sovereign boundary dispute). The Court recently has stated, however, that “a compelling reason for allowing citizens to participate in one original action is not necessarily a compelling reason for allowing citizens to intervene in all original actions,” and the Court reaffirmed in a case involving a dispute over an interstate water resource that the standard set forth in New Jersey v. New York applies. See South Carolina v. North Carolina, 558 U.S. at 265. A proposed intervenor whose State is already a party must show a compelling interest, distinct from other “citizens and creatures of” the State, that is not properly represented by the State. Id. at 266 (citation omitted); see Nebraska v. Wyoming, 515 U.S. 1, 21-22 (1995); United States v. Nevada, 412 U.S. 534, 538 (1973) (per curiam); Illinois v. City of Milwaukee, 406 U.S. 91, 96-97 (1972). Accordingly, EPCWID’s “direct stake” in the outcome of this dispute does not, without more, warrant intervention.

b. EPCWID contends (Mem. in Supp. 17-23, 28) that its contracts with the United States to receive Project water and its obligation to deliver Project water to Texas users amount to a unique interest in the case that is distinct from that of other Texas citizens. But EPCWID’s contractual rights and obligations are not directly relevant to this dispute over the States’ respective rights and obligations under the Compact.

The complaints filed by Texas and the United States seek to establish the sovereign rights among the States, the nature of the apportionment of water agreed to by the States under the Compact, and the rights of the United States on behalf of the Project and under the treaty with Mexico. EPCWID is not a party to the Compact, and it acknowledges (Mem. in Supp. 4, 7-8, 26-27) that the United States operates the Project's dams and reservoirs and determines how much water is allocated to EBID and EPCWID, respectively, pursuant to the 1938 contract and the 2008 Operating Agreement. EPCWID's receipt and delivery of Project water within its service area has no effect on how the water is allocated among the States under the Compact. Those contractual rights and obligations are considered only after the respective rights of the States under the Compact—the subject of this original action—are defined.

2. a. Furthermore, EPCWID is a political subdivision of the State of Texas, created under Texas law, and the area that it serves lies wholly within Texas. Tex. Const. art. XVI, § 59(b); Tex. Water Code Ann. § 55.161 (West 2002). This Court's requirement that an intervenor whose State is already a party must show a compelling interest that "is not properly represented by the state" flows from "the principle that the state, when a party to a suit involving a matter of sovereign interest, must be deemed to represent all its citizens." New Jersey v. New York, 345 U.S. at 372-373 (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). Treating a State as the representative of its citizens "is a necessary recognition of sovereign dignity" because it prevents a State from being "judicially impeached on matters of policy by its own subjects." Id.

at 373. That concern is directly implicated by EPCWID's motion.

i. EPCWID contends (Mem. in Supp. 23-25) that its interests are not adequately represented by Texas because "EPCWID's and Texas' rights and interests are not identical." Specifically, EPCWID contends that: (1) Texas is not a "specific beneficiary" of the Project or a party to the contracts dividing the Project's water supply between EPCWID and EBID (id. at 24-25); and (2) Texas has not expressed an intention to defend the 1938 contract or the 2008 Operating Agreement that govern the division of Project water between EBID and EPCWID (id. at 25). Those contentions only serve to highlight that Texas is asserting claims in its sovereign capacity under the Compact, while the interests EPCWID attempts to advance in this original action are more akin to private interests in its contracts with the United States and EBID.

Furthermore, EPCWID's views on the 1938 contract and the 2008 Operating Agreement, to the extent they are different from those of Texas, represent the type of "impeach[ment] * * * by its own subjects" that the Court has concluded is undermining of State sovereignty and inadequate to warrant intervention by a wholly intrastate entity. New Jersey v. New York, 345 U.S. at 373; see South Carolina v. North Carolina, 558 U.S. at 280 (Roberts, C.J., concurring in the judgment in part and dissenting in part) ("The State must be deemed to represent all its citizens, not just those who subscribe to the State's position before this Court.") (citation and internal quotations marks omitted); cf. United States v. Nevada, 412 U.S. at 539 (in an equitable apportionment action, a State "has the right, parens patriae, to represent all the nonfederal users in its own State insofar as the share allocated to the other State is concerned”).

In South Carolina v. North Carolina, this Court allowed two non-State entities to intervene in an equitable apportionment action, but each of those entities had unique interstate characteristics that are not present here. The Catawba River Water Supply Project (CRWSP) was “an unusual municipal entity, established as a joint venture with the encouragement of regulatory authorities in both States.” 558 U.S. at 269. It was a “bistate entity” that was jointly owned and regulated by, and supplied water to, a county in each State, id. at 261, and it had “an advisory board consisting of representatives from both counties,” “revenue[] from its bistate sales,” and “infrastructure and assets that [we]re owned by both counties as tenants-in-common.” Id. at 269 (“It is difficult to conceive of a more purely bistate entity.”). The other entity that was permitted to intervene, Duke Energy, “operate[d] 11 dams and reservoirs in both States that generate[d] electricity for the region and control[led] the flow of the [interstate] river,” making it “likely that any equitable apportionment of the river w[ould] need to take into account the amount of water that Duke Energy needs to sustain its operations and provide electricity to the region.” Id. at 272. Duke Energy also held a license from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) for its hydroelectric facilities, which regulated the flow of the river, and Duke Energy sought to protect a consensus agreement of 70 parties in both States, arrived at in connection with the proposed renewal of Duke Energy’s FERC license, regarding appropriate minimum flows. Id. at 272-273.

In contrast to the non-State entities that were permitted to intervene in South Carolina v. North Carolina, EPCWID is an entity that operates only in Texas and manages EPCWID's share of the Project water supply within the State. Tex. Water Code Ann. § 55.161(a) (West 2002) (“A water improvement district may provide for irrigation of the land within its boundaries.”). Under Texas law, members of EPCWID's board of directors must be residents of Texas and own land subject to taxation within EPCWID. Id. § 55.102. They are elected by voters who hold title to irrigable lands within EPCWID's boundaries. Tex. Spec. Dists. Code Ann. § 9303.051(a)(3) (West 2013). In this respect, EPCWID is analogous to the City of Charlotte, which was denied intervention in South Carolina v. North Carolina because, unlike CRWSP and Duke Energy, it was a North Carolina entity that fell within the general class of water users in that State, and its interests therefore fell “within the category of interests with respect to which a State must be deemed to represent all of its citizens.” 558 U.S. at 274.

EPCWID asserts (Mem. in Supp. 12, 18) that it has bistate interests similar to Duke Energy and CRWSP because it holds decreed rights under Texas law that provide it with “rights of storage and release in New Mexico, and rights of diversion and use in Texas.” The certificate of adjudication issued by the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality cited by EPCWID (Mem. in Supp. App. 1-15), however, recognizes that the source of the water that EPCWID is entitled to divert and use in Texas is Project water impounded and released in New Mexico by the United States (not EPCWID). Id. at 4-5, 10. And the certificate does not grant EPCWID any right to store or release Project water in New Mexico. Rather, it gives EPCWID the right to divert and use a portion of the Project water that is stored and released in New Mexico by the United States. Id. at 5-6, 10. In any event, a Texas agency could not grant a Texas water improvement district the right to store water in reservoirs located in another State. The authorization to store Project water in reservoirs in New Mexico arises under federal and New Mexico state law pertaining to Reclamation projects.

EPCWID further contends (Mem. in Supp. 18) that its bistate interests include “the complex system of irrigation infrastructure of the interstate Project,” owned and operated by EPCWID, which “crisscrosses the state line to provide Project water supply to irrigators in both New Mexico and Texas.” The fact that the Project crosses state lines does not amount to a “bistate” interest of EPCWID warranting intervention. Pursuant to a 1980 contract between the United States and EPCWID, the United States agreed to “insure delivery of project water supply allocated to [EPCWID] at [EPCWID] canal headings and other diversion points to be specified by the Contracting Officer, and at State line crossings.” App., infra, 5a. EPCWID does not receive delivery of Project water in New Mexico. Moreover, in 1996, the United States quitclaimed title to certain Project facilities to EPCWID, but all of those facilities are located in Texas. Id. at 9a-35a. Thus, unlike Duke Energy, which operates dams and reservoirs in both South Carolina and North Carolina, EPCWID does not operate any diversion dams in New Mexico. It receives water in Texas after the water flows from New Mexico, and the irrigation district's service area is located entirely within Texas.

ii. To the extent EPCWID contends that it has a unique interest in this case because it is a beneficiary of the Project, see Mem. in Supp. 16, 20-21, 28, the United States has already intervened in this action to protect the Project's water supply from interference by New Mexico. Indeed, EPCWID's complaint, with minor edits to the prayer for relief, simply adopts and incorporates by reference the United States' complaint in intervention. See EPCWID Compl. 1-2. That the United States and EPCWID may have disagreed in the past about how to calculate the 43% to 57% split of Project water between EPCWID and EBID (Mem. in Supp. 27)—a disagreement that gave rise to the 2008 Operating Agreement to which the United States is a signatory—does not mean that the United States cannot adequately represent EPCWID's interest in protecting the Project's overall water supply from interception and interference by New Mexico.

The Court has previously allowed Indian tribes to intervene in an equitable apportionment action, even though the tribes' interests were already protected by the participation of the United States. See Arizona v. California, 460 U.S. 605, 612-613 (1983). But the Court concluded that the tribes' intervention was warranted because their water rights would be defined by the litigation, and the tribes, as sovereign entities, were entitled to "take their place as independent qualified members of the modern body politic." Id. at 614-615 (citation omitted). EPCWID, in contrast, is not a sovereign entity. See Nebraska v. Wyoming, 515 U.S. at 22 ("[W]ater disputes among States may be resolved * * * without the participation of individual claimants, who nonetheless are bound by the result reached through representation by their respective States.”). Neither of the decisions EPCWID relies upon in support of intervention notwithstanding the presence of the United States as a party, see Mem. in Supp. 27 (citing WildEarth Guardians v. United States Forest Serv., 573 F.3d 992, 996-997 (10th Cir. 2009), and South Dakota v. Ubbelohde, 330 F.3d 1014, 1025 (8th Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 987 (2004)), involved disputes implicating the “respect for sovereign dignity” of the States, which must be deemed to “represent[] the interests of [their] citizens in an original action.” South Carolina v. North Carolina, 558 U.S. at 267.

b. In addition to affording proper respect to the dignity of state sovereignty, treating a State as the representative of its citizens is also a “rule for good judicial administration,” because “[o]therwise, * * * there would be no practical limitation on the number of citizens * * * who would be entitled to be made parties.” New Jersey v. New York, 345 U.S. at 373.

Even assuming that Compact enforcement actions such as this could be litigated manageably with an expanded number of parties, the expansion could make it significantly less likely that any of these cases of interstate sovereignty could be resolved through negotiation. This Court has repeatedly stated that the preferred approach for resolving interstate water disputes “should, if possible, be the medium of settlement, instead of invocation of [this Court’s] adjudicatory power.” Colorado v. Kansas, 320 U.S. 383, 392 & n.4 (1943); see Hinderlider v. La Plata River & Cherry Creek Ditch Co., 304 U.S. 92, 105-106 & n.11 (1938).

The participation of more parties, particularly parties that advance narrower interests that may conflict with the goals of their States, could impede that goal. See South Carolina v. North Carolina, 558 U.S. at 288 (Roberts, C.J., concurring in the judgment in part and dissenting in part) (“[I]ntervention makes settling a case more difficult, as a private intervenor has the right to object to a settlement agreement between the States, if not the power to block a settlement altogether.”).

3. To the extent EPCWID has views on the issues in this original action that are different from those of the parties, it can play an appropriate role in this litigation as an amicus curiae. See Kentucky v. Indiana, 445 U.S. 941 (1980); United States v. California, 377 U.S. 926 (1964); New Hampshire v. Maine, 426 U.S. 363, 365 n.2 (1976). EPCWID’s views on the relationship between Compact enforcement and Project operations (see Mem. in Supp. 19-23) can be presented to the Special Master and to the Court through the role of an amicus curiae without unnecessarily expanding the standard for intervention by non-State entities in original cases to include intrastate actors with no compelling interest that is not already protected by a sovereign party to the dispute.

CONCLUSION

EPCWID's motion for leave to intervene should be denied.

Respectfully submitted.

WITNESSETH THAT:

EXPLANATORY RECITALS

WHEREAS, the Rio Grande Project was authorized by Act of Congress in 1905 and subsequent thereto the United States, the District, and the Elephant Butte Irrigation District have entered into a series of contracts relating to the construction, operation and maintenance, and repayment of the costs allocated to the irrigation function of the Rio Grande Project, and

WHEREAS, the series of contracts between the United States and the District includes contracts with the El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1 dated November 10, 1937, amended October 1, 1939, which contracts cover the care, operation, and maintenance of the project and payment of the adjusted construction obligation allocated to irrigation, and are herein collectively referred to as the “basic repayment contract;” and

WHEREAS, the District has entered into certain contracts for rehabilitation and betterment of the District works, which contracts are dated May 15,

WHEREAS, full repayment to the United States by the District has been made of all construction costs other than those covered by said rehabilitation contracts; and

WHEREAS, the parties desire that the District assume permanent responsibility for operation and maintenance of the District works in the District except certain components thereof as hereinafter more particularly described.

NOW THEREFORE, the parties agree as follows:

DEFINITIONS

1. When used herein, unless otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent hereof, the term:

a. "Secretary" or "Contracting Officer" shall mean the Secretary of the Interior of the United States or his duly authorized representative.

b. "District" shall mean the El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1. In some standard articles, the District is referred to as the "Contractor."

c. "Power and storage reserved works" shall mean the Elephant Butte Dam, Reservoir, and Power System and the Caballo Dam and Reservoir.

d. "Water control and conveyance reserved works" shall mean the Percha, Leasburg, Mesilla, and Riverside Diversion Dams and appurtenances.

e. "Transferred District works" shall mean the remainder of the distribution and drainage system to be turned over to the district for operation and maintenance, more specifically identified on Exhibit "A," attached hereto and by this reference made a part of this contract.

f. "Calendar year" shall mean January 1 through December 31 of each year.

g. "Project Water Supply" shall mean stored water legally available for release in the Elephant Butte and Caballo Reservoirs and including the legally appropriated waters reaching the bed of the Rio Grande River between Caballo Dam and Riverside Diversion Dam.

TRANSFER OF DISTRICT WORKS

2. Effective October 1, 1980, the United States shall transfer to the El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1 and the District shall assume the operation and maintenance of the transferred District works as identified in paragraph 1.e. above and as shown on Exhibit "A." The United States reserves the right to establish, operate, and maintain hydrological and climatological monitoring devices on or in the transferred District works. Transfer of operation and maintenance of the "transferred District works" to the District shall be accomplished without expense to the United States. It is understood that the District may contest any expenses incident to such transfer that it feels are inappropriate in nature or amount or inconsistent with the relation of the parties over this agreement or their other existing contracts.

WATER CONTROL

6. a. The United States shall allocate legally available stored project water among Elephant Butte Irrigation District, El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1, and the Republic of Mexico in accordance with the Rio Grande Project Act of 1905, all applicable Federal Reclamation Laws, the Convention with Mexico For The Upper Rio Grande proclaimed in 1907, all vested rights of the District under all applicable State and Federal law, court decisions, and this contract.

b. The United States will insure delivery of project water supply allocated to the District at District canal headings and other diversion points to be specified by the Contracting Officer, and at State line crossings and will make a prompt accounting of said water deliveries to the District.

c. In interstate canals, laterals, and drains (those physically crossing State lines), the United States reserves the right to direct inter-canal diversions, deliveries, and maintenance of waterways and structures by the District to assure the delivery of water and protection of lands of the other involved entities outside District boundaries.

d. In case of extraordinary climatic conditions or major accident to the District's distribution facilities, the United States, at its discretion, may adjust spills of allotted water from the District works. The United States will designate respective facilities to be used for spill of such water. A detailed operational plan will be concluded between the United States and the District setting forth procedures for water delivery and accounting.

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE OF TRANSFERRED WORKS

7. a. The District, without expense to the United States shall care for, operate, and maintain the transferred District works in full compliance with the terms of this contract, and in such manner that said transferred District works will remain in good and efficient condition to perform the carriage, distribution, and drainage of water as well and efficiently as on the date of such transfer to the District.

b. The District shall promptly commence and diligently prosecute any and all repairs to the Federal project works being operated and maintained by the District which are necessary for the proper care, operation, and maintenance in accordance with paragraph a. immediately above. In case of neglect or failure of the District to commence such repairs within 45 days following written notification and to complete such repairs within a reasonable time, the Contracting Officer may cause the repairs to be made, and the cost thereof shall be paid by the District as prescribed by the Contracting Officer.

c. No substantial change shall be made by the District in any of the major transferred District works without first obtaining written consent of the Contracting Officer. The request for said change shall be made in writing and include a detailed design of the contemplated work. If the Contracting Officer does not reject such change within 60 days, the District may proceed with the work. Substantial change is defined herein as major relocations or major changes in structures and facilities.

d. The District shall hold the United States, its officers, agents, and employees harmless as to any and all damages which may in any manner grow out of the care, operation, and maintenance by the District of any of the project works transferred to the District.

e. If, during the period of any District indebtedness to the United States for construction or rehabilitation of the project or District works, should the District become more than 60 days delinquent in the payment of any amount due on said indebtedness, then at election of the Contracting Officer, the United States may take over from the District the care, operation, and maintenance of such transferred works by giving written notice to the District of such election any of the effective date thereof and retain the same until such indebtedness is brought current by the District.
