The Bribery Scheme

30. From at least in or about 2007 up to and including in or about 2018, GLENCORE, through certain of its employees and agents, while acting on behalf of GLENCORE, together with its co-conspirators, knowingly and willfully conspired and agreed with others to corruptly provide more than $100 million in payments and other things of value to various intermediaries with the intent that a significant portion of these payments would be used to pay bribes to and for the benefit of foreign officials to secure an improper advantage and to influence those foreign officials in order to obtain and retain business in Nigeria, Cameroon, Ivory Coast, Equatorial Guinea, Brazil, Venezuela, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

A. Bribes Paid to Officials in West Africa

Overview

31. Beginning at least as early as in or about 2007 and continuing through in or about 2018, GLENCORE, through certain of its employees and agents, including the Glencore UK Subsidiaries, Stimler, Executive 1, Executive 2, Trader Y, Trader Z, and others, caused approximately $79.6 million in payments to be made to West Africa Intermediary Company and Nigeria Intermediary Company with the intent that a significant portion of the payments would be used to pay bribes to and for the benefit of foreign officials in order to secure improper advantages to obtain and retain business with state-owned and state-controlled entities in Nigeria, Cameroon, Ivory Coast, and Equatorial Guinea.

32. To conceal the bribe payments, GLENCORE and the Glencore UK Subsidiaries, together with their co-conspirators, entered into sham consulting agreements, paid inflated invoices, and used West Africa Intermediary Company and Nigeria Intermediary Company to make corrupt payments to numerous foreign officials. GLENCORE, the Glencore UK Subsidiaries, and others agreed to use, and did use, purported “commissions” for oil cargoes, at least in part, to conceal bribe payments to government officials in exchange for obtaining and retaining business on behalf of GLENCORE and its affiliates.

33. GLENCORE and the Glencore UK Subsidiaries’ employees and agents, including Stimler and Executive 2, facilitated and approved bribe payments, and engaged in other acts in furtherance of the bribery scheme, while in the United States.

34. In addition, GLENCORE made and caused to be made at least approximately $39,900,000 of the payments using correspondent bank accounts held at financial institutions in the Southern District of New York, to West Africa Intermediary Company and Nigeria Intermediary Company with the intent that a significant portion of the payments would be used to pay bribes to and for the benefit of foreign officials.

Bribe Payments to Nigerian Officials

35. From at least in or about 2007 up to and including in or about 2018, GLENCORE and the Glencore UK Subsidiaries entered into multiple agreements to purchase crude oil and refined petroleum products from the NNPC and its subsidiaries. During that period, both GLENCORE and the Glencore UK Subsidiaries engaged West Africa Intermediary Company and Nigeria Intermediary Company to pursue business opportunities and other improper business advantages, while knowing that the intermediaries would make bribe payments to Nigerian government officials to obtain those business opportunities and advantages. In total, GLENCORE and the Glencore UK Subsidiaries—acting on GLENCORE’s behalf—paid more than $52 million through intermediaries, intending that those funds be used, at least in part, to pay bribes. Senior executives of the Glencore UK Subsidiaries, including Executive 1 and Executive 2, approved most of the illicit bribe payments. As a result of these payments, GLENCORE earned profits of approximately $124 million.

West Africa Intermediary Company

36. From at least in or about 2007 up to and including in or about 2014, GLENCORE engaged West Africa Intermediary Company as an agent to help identify business opportunities and to act as a conduit for bribe payments to Nigerian government officials in order to obtain and retain business for GLENCORE and the Glencore UK Subsidiaries, and to secure other improper business advantages.

37. When communicating with West Africa Intermediary Company, employees at the Glencore UK Subsidiaries used coded language to conceal their discussion of bribe payments, referring to bribe payments as “newspapers” or “journals” or “pages.” In one instance, on or about November 17, 2008, Trader Y exchanged emails with the West Africa Agent, noting that the Glencore UK Subsidiaries needed to make a $90,000 payment to be used, at least in part, to pay bribes to officials of PPMC, an NNPC subsidiary, in order to falsely undervalue a cargo of fuel oil for the benefit of GLENCORE. Later in the same email thread, on or about November 17, 2008, Trader Y told West Africa Agent that this payment was the “amount they needed to cover ppmc in newspapers reading material.” In response, West Africa Agent wrote that “the newspapers will be delivered” by himself personally.

38. GLENCORE agents, including Stimler and Executive 2, while in the territory of the United States, approved bribe payments to be made through West Africa Intermediary Company. For example, on or about January 18, 2011, while in the territory of the United States, Executive 2 approved a payment of $325,000 to West Africa Intermediary Company, intending that all or part of those funds would be used to bribe Nigerian officials in connection with the purchase of fuel oil from an NNPC subsidiary.

Crude Oil Term Contracts

39. From at least in or about 2007 up to and including in or about 2014, GLENCORE entered into multiple contracts to purchase crude oil from the NNPC. GLENCORE designated Glencore UK Ltd., via a services agreement, to administer the contracts. Employees of both Glencore UK Subsidiaries administered and performed work under the NNPC contracts on behalf of GLENCORE.

40. In order to obtain these crude oil contracts, the Glencore UK Subsidiaries—acting on GLENCORE’s behalf—arranged to pay bribes through West Africa Intermediary Company to NNPC officials. For example, on or about February 9, 2012, in an email to Stimler, Trader Z, and another Glencore Energy UK Ltd. employee, West Africa Agent used the code word “filings” to refer to bribe payments that were needed to secure a new crude oil contract, writing that it was “very VERY urgent re our filings have to have meeting monday.” In response to this email, Trader Z obtained approval from Executive 2 to pay West Africa Agent $1,050,981, knowing that at least part of the payment would be used to bribe Nigerian officials to award a crude oil contract to GLENCORE. Glencore Energy UK Ltd. made the payment to West Africa Intermediary Company (i.e., West Africa Agent’s company) on or about February 13, 2012.

41. Similarly, on or about March 27, 2014, Executive 1 and Executive 2 approved Trader Y’s request for Glencore Energy UK Ltd. to make a $500,000 payment from Glencore Energy UK Ltd. to West Africa Intermediary Company, upon receipt of which West Africa Agent withdrew a portion of the payment and passed it to Nigeria Official Y as a bribe to assist GLENCORE and its subsidiaries in winning an annual contract for the purchase of crude oil cargoes.

Swap Agreement

42. In or about March 2011, employees of the Glencore UK Subsidiaries agreed to pay West Africa Intermediary Company $14 million that was intended, at least in part, to be passed on to NNPC officials to secure an agreement with NNPC subsidiary PPMC for refined crude oil petroleum products (the “Swap Agreement”).

43. Prior to the bribe payment, in or about 2011, Executive 1 met with West Africa Agent and Nigeria Official Y in London to discuss the Swap Agreement, and Executive 1 agreed to make the $14 million payment through West Africa Intermediary Company, knowing that the money would be used, at least in part, to pay bribes to Nigerian officials.

44. On or about March 1, 2011, the Glencore UK Subsidiaries wired $14 million to West Africa Intermediary Company from Switzerland to Nigeria, through a correspondent bank account held at a financial institution in the Southern District of New York.

45. On or about March 2, 2011, West Africa Agent withdrew $1,020,000 in cash from a West Africa Intermediary Company bank account and gave the cash in Nigeria to Nigeria Official Y as a bribe payment in connection with the Swap Agreement. Subsequently, after the Glencore UK Subsidiaries opted not to pursue the Swap Agreement, West Africa Agent returned approximately $8 million of the $14 million to the Glencore UK Subsidiaries.

Nigeria Intermediary Company

46. From at least in or about 2007 up to and including in or about 2018, the Glencore UK Subsidiaries entered into multiple agreements with Nigeria Intermediary Company. Under the terms of the agreements, Nigeria Intermediary Company received a fee for: (a) acting as an intermediary for the Glencore UK Subsidiaries in obtaining refined petroleum products from NNPC; and (b) acting as a front for the Glencore UK Subsidiaries by purchasing crude oil cargoes from NNPC and immediately re-selling them to the Glencore UK Subsidiaries. The Glencore UK Subsidiaries employees knew that Nigeria Intermediary Company would use the fees it obtained through these agreements, at least in part, to pay bribes to, or for the benefit of, Nigerian government officials in exchange for the improper business advantages GLENCORE and the Glencore UK Subsidiaries obtained.

47. For example, on or about September 25, 2014, an employee of Nigeria Intermediary Company (“NIC Employee 1”) sent an email to Stimler stating that Nigeria Official X had asked that all companies or “customers” of NNPC give an “advance” of $300,000 to the re-election campaign of a senior Nigerian official in exchange for receiving crude oil cargoes.

48. On or about October 3, 2014, in response to information communicated by another employee of Nigeria Intermediary Company (“NIC Employee 2,” together with NIC Employee 1, the “NIC Employees”), Stimler caused Glencore Energy UK Ltd. to send a wire transfer of approximately $300,000 from Glencore Energy UK Ltd.’s bank account in Switzerland, through a correspondent bank account held at a financial institution in the Southern District of New York, to a Nigeria Intermediary Company bank account in Cyprus.

49. On or about October 5, 2014, Stimler emailed the NIC Employees that Glencore Energy UK Ltd.’s management had approved the $300,000 payment and that Nigeria Intermediary Company should make sure that “NNPC perform[s],” i.e., provides the expected crude oil cargoes to the Glencore UK Subsidiaries in exchange for the bribe payment.

50. On or about April 20, 2015, while in the United States, Stimler received an email from NIC Employee 1 in which Nigeria Intermediary Company offered to make a payment for the benefit of a Nigerian official of approximately $50,000 per oil cargo for four cargoes of NNPC oil to be delivered to Glencore Energy UK Ltd. in May and June 2015. On or about April 20, 2015, while in the United States, Stimler replied to Nigeria Intermediary Company's email, expressing interest on behalf of GLENCORE in receiving one of the June 2015 NNPC oil cargoes. On or about May 5, 2015, Stimler received an invoice from Nigeria Intermediary Company for $50,000 as an "Advance Payment" against the June 2015 cargo.

51. Subsequently, on or about May 5, 2015, Glencore Energy UK Ltd. sent a wire transfer of $50,000 to Nigeria Intermediary Company from a bank account in Switzerland, through a correspondent bank account held at a financial institution in the Southern District of New York, to Nigeria Intermediary Company's bank account in Cyprus. As per the April email exchange between Stimler and NIC Employee 1, the funds were intended to be paid, at least in part, to Nigerian government officials in exchange for the June 2015 oil cargo from NNPC.

52. As a result of GLENCORE and the Glencore UK Subsidiaries' dozens of agreements to make corrupt payments to Nigerian officials through West Africa Intermediary Company and Nigeria Intermediary Company, on behalf of and for the benefit of GLENCORE, GLENCORE earned profits of approximately $124 million.

Cameroon, Ivory Coast, and Equatorial Guinea

53. From at least in or about 2006 up to and including in or about 2014, GLENCORE and its subsidiaries and affiliates made, and caused to be made, approximately $27 million in payments to West Africa Intermediary Company knowing that the funds would be used, at least in part, to make corrupt payments to foreign officials in Cameroon, Ivory Coast, and Equatorial Guinea. GLENCORE used West Africa Intermediary Company to make corrupt payments to government officials of those countries in order to secure an improper advantage for GLENCORE in obtaining and retaining business, including, for example, to receive crude oil cargoes from state-owned and state-controlled oil companies. As a result of these payments, GLENCORE obtained more than $92 million in profits.

54. From at least in or about 2006 up to and including in or about 2014, GLENCORE made more than $21 million in payments to West Africa Intermediary Company which were intended, at least in part, to be paid as bribes to government officials in Cameroon in connection with transactions associated with state-owned and state-controlled entities. As a result of these payments, GLENCORE made a profit of more than $67 million.

55. From at least in or about 2007 up to and including in or about 2010, GLENCORE made over $4 million in payments to West Africa Intermediary Company which were intended, at least in part, to be paid as bribes to government officials in Ivory Coast in connection with transactions associated with state-owned and state-controlled entities. As a result of these payments, GLENCORE made a profit of more than $30 million.

56. From at least in or about 2007 up to and including in or about 2010, GLENCORE made over $1.5 million in payments to West Africa Intermediary Company which were intended, at least in part, to be paid as bribes to government officials in Equatorial Guinea in connection with transactions associated with state-owned and state-controlled entities. As a result of these payments, GLENCORE made a profit of more than $3 million.

57. Some of these corrupt payments were paid in cash that was dispensed from GLENCORE's offices in Baar, Switzerland, or from the Glencore UK Subsidiaries' offices in London, United Kingdom. GLENCORE maintained a "cash desk" in London until in or about 2011, and maintained a "cash desk" in Baar until in or about 2016.

B. Bribes Paid to Officials in Brazil

58. In or about July 2011, GLENCORE, through certain of its employees and agents, including Employee X, Employee Y, Brazil Consultant, and others, caused approximately $147,202 to be used, at least in part, as corrupt payments to be made to, and for the benefit of, Brazilian officials, in order to secure improper business advantages. Specifically, Employee X negotiated with Brazil Consultant to pay approximately $147,202 to Brazil Consultant, knowing that a portion of the funds would be paid in bribes to Petrobras officials in exchange for Glencore Ltd. having the opportunity to buy an oil cargo from Petrobras. Specifically, on or about April 30, 2011, Employee X emailed Brazil Consultant in connection with purchasing the oil cargo at a price that included a built-in “delta,” which represented the bribe amount.

59. To conceal discussions of the bribery scheme, Employee X used a personal email address to communicate with Brazil Consultant and arranged with Brazil Consultant to disguise the “delta” or bribe payment as an inflated service fee of $0.50 per barrel of the purchased cargo. On or about July 13, 2011, Employee Y executed a sham services agreement between Glencore Mexico and Brazil Consultant to disguise the “delta” as a $0.50 per barrel commission payment to Brazil Consultant.

60. Subsequently, on or about July 20, 2011, Glencore Energy UK Ltd.—one of the Glencore UK Subsidiaries—wired approximately $147,202 from an account in Switzerland to an account held by Brazil Consultant at a bank in Houston, Texas, which represented Brazil Consultant’s previously agreed upon “delta” of $0.50 per barrel. From this payment, Brazil Consultant subsequently paid bribes in the following approximate amounts: (a) $40,000 to Brazil Official 1; (b) $31,000 to Brazil Official 2; and (c) $40,000 to Brazil Official 3.

C. Bribes Paid to an Official in Venezuela

61. Beginning in or around 2011 and continuing through approximately 2014, GLENCORE, through certain of its employees and agents, including Venezuela Intermediary Company and others, caused corrupt payments to be made to, and for the benefit of, a Venezuelan official, in order to secure improper business advantages.

62. As part of its business dealings in Venezuela, GLENCORE and its subsidiaries sold oil product to, and purchased them from, PDVSA. If PDVSA did not pay GLENCORE's invoices on time, PDVSA incurred interest that was owed to GLENCORE because of late payments. Additionally, if PDVSA did not load or discharge a GLENCORE vessel within an agreed upon time frame, PDVSA incurred demurrage (i.e., a charge payable to GLENCORE for the delay).

63. By in or about 2011, PDVSA owed millions of dollars to GLENCORE and its subsidiaries related to late payments for accrued interest and demurrage. Due to difficulties in obtaining payment from PDVSA, GLENCORE used intermediaries, including Venezuela Intermediary Company, to assist in obtaining payment priority from PDVSA over other similarly situated companies. GLENCORE paid the intermediaries a percentage fee based on the total amount of money obtained from PDVSA.

64. For example, on or about December 11, 2012, Glencore Energy UK Ltd. paid Venezuela Intermediary Company's invoice in the amount of $18,605.19 as a fee for recovering a late interest payment from PDVSA.

65. In total, from at least in or about 2012 up to and including in or about 2014, GLENCORE paid at least approximately $1,286,057 to Venezuela Intermediary Company, with the intent that a portion of the payments be used as bribes to, and for the benefit of, a PDVSA official, in order to obtain payment priority from PDVSA. GLENCORE and its subsidiaries obtained a total of approximately $11,981,164 in payments from PDVSA through Venezuela Intermediary Company.

D. Bribes Paid to Officials in the Democratic Republic of the Congo

Overview

66. From at least in or about 2010 up to and including in or about 2013, GLENCORE, through certain of its employees and agents, including Executive 3, Employee Z, Glencore Mining Company 1, Glencore Mining Company 2, and others, knowingly and willfully conspired and agreed to corruptly offer and pay more than approximately $27,500,000 to third parties with the intent that a portion of the payments be used as bribes to, and for the benefit of, DRC officials, in order to secure improper business advantages by reducing liabilities related to government audits and litigation costs. GLENCORE and its affiliated companies obtained at least $43 million in benefits related to their mining operations from the corrupt resolutions with the DRC government and its agencies.

DRC Bribe Payments Related to Government Audits

67. As part of their official duties, DRC government officials and agencies conducted audits of mining operations within the country. These audits included, for example, investigations related to taxes and mandatory employer contributions for companies located in the DRC. These audits frequently resulted in significant fines and costs to GLENCORE and its subsidiaries.

68. From at least in or about 2010 up to and including in or about 2013, Glencore Mining Company 1 and Glencore Mining Company 2, through Employee Z and others, used an agent in the DRC (“DRC Agent”) to pay a tax consultant (“DRC Agent’s Tax Consultant”), knowing that the payments would be used, at least in part, to bribe DRC officials. In furtherance of the scheme, DRC Agent’s Tax Consultant created fraudulent invoices that billed Glencore Mining Company 2 for purported professional services, disguising that such payments were in fact intended to be bribes to benefit DRC officials. In total, Glencore Mining Company 2 and affiliated companies paid DRC Agent's Tax Consultant and his company approximately $27,084,851 with the intent that a portion of the payments be used to bribe DRC officials for advantages related to various government audits.

69. For example, on or about May 16, 2012, Glencore Mining Company 2 received notice that the INPP, a DRC government agency, would be auditing Glencore Mining Company 2's mandatory employer financial contributions with projected fines to cost Glencore Mining Company 2 approximately $700,000. To reduce Glencore Mining Company 2's potential fine, Employee Z and DRC Agent engaged in a chat message exchange about bribing local officials by creating an invoice that would cover "250 official" for the INPP and "450 grat" for the "gratuity" or bribe for the DRC official.

70. DRC Agent's Tax Consultant subsequently emailed Employee Z and others an invoice for the INPP matter, billing Glencore Mining Company 2 in the amount of $454,000. This amount reflected the "grat," or gratuity, referenced in the chat messages between Employee Z and DRC Agent. After paying the $454,000 invoice, Glencore Mining Company 2's remaining official liability for the audit was reduced from the projected amount of $700,000 to approximately $180,000.

DRC Bribe Payments Relating to a Litigation Dispute

71. In or about January 2010, a medical services company sued Glencore Mining Company 2 for breach of contract in the amount of more than $16 million. GLENCORE employees, overseeing Glencore Mining Company 2's operations, approved a $500,000 invoice that was used as a bribe payment to have the lawsuit dismissed.

72. Specifically, on or about November 3, 2010, emails between DRC Agent and Executive 3 stated, in substance and in part, that DRC Agent talked with a DRC official who was meeting with DRC Agent and a judge presiding over the contract dispute and that, “[w]ithout [the DRC official’s] help we will be screwed big time, I believe. We need political pressure.” DRC Agent suggested that GLENCORE could ensure that Glencore Mining Company 2 would prevail in the contract dispute if DRC Agent had a “reasonable amount of ammunition to make it happen,” and further indicated that the attorney for the third-party plaintiff “is ready to play along for the good cause.”

73. On or about November 4, 2010, DRC Agent emailed an employee for GLENCORE and copied Employee Z, asking whether to prepare an invoice for $500,000 in the name of an accountant or lawyer. The next day, DRC Agent forwarded Employee Z and others a fake invoice in the amount of $500,000, purportedly from DRC Agent’s attorney for work relating to the contract dispute. On or about November 9, 2010, Glencore Mining Company 2 paid a $500,000 invoice via wire transfer through a correspondent bank account held at a financial institution located in the Southern District of New York.

74. On or about November 17, 2010, DRC Agent emailed Employee Z and Executive 3, explaining that DRC Agent had attended a “personal meeting” with the judge for the contract dispute, stating the meeting was “in front of [a public official]” and that “[e]verything is under control . . . [I]ts [sic] thanks to [the public official] that [Glencore Mining Company 2] will win that case”

75. In or about January 2011, the contract dispute was decided in Glencore Mining Company 2’s favor. Accordingly, GLENCORE avoided paying approximately $16,084,000 to settle the claim.
